FALL FOUND GUILTY IN OIL BRIBE CASE; JURY ASKS MERCY

Ex-Secretary, Stunned by the Verdict, Keeps Calm, but Wife and Daughters Sob.

FRIEND FAINTS IN COURT

Defendant, Freed on $5,000 Bail, Is Wheeled From Room and Taken to a Hotel.

A NEW TRIAL IS SOUGHT

Defense Makes Motion on Ground That Justice Hitz's Charge Was Prejudicial.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Albert B. Fall of Three Rivers, N. M., was found guilty today of accepting, when Secretary of the Interior under President Harding, a bribe of $100,000 from Edward L. Doheny, the Los Angeles oil operator. In consideration for this bribe, the government charged, Mr. Fall leased to Mr. Doheny the Elk Hills naval oil reserve in Southern California.

Mr. Fall is the first member of an American Cabinet to be adjudged a felon by a jury of his fellow-citizens.

Under Section 117 of the Criminal Code, Fall may be sent to prison for not exceeding three years, or fined three times the amount of the bribe charged in the indictment, or both. In this instance the fine would be, if the maximum were imposed, $300,000.

In addition, the law provides that a public official convicted of bribery shall be forever debarred from holding public office or other positions of trust or honor in the government of the United States.

Wife and Daughters Sob.

The scene in the court room this morning was both tragic and pathetic as Mr. Fall, broken in health and but a shadow of his former robust self, sat slumped in a big Morris chair, covered with blankets, and heard the word "guilty" from the lips of Thomas E. Norris, the foreman of the jury.

Mr. Fall appeared completely stunned. With a blank stare he looked at the eight men and four women, who, by their decision, had written his name in the criminal records of the government.

Mrs. Fall sobbed for a moment or two and then regained control of herself. She was a border Texan to the end.

Pushing her way through the crowd that jammed the court room, she went to the side of her husband. She leaned over him, patted him on the back, kissed him.

"It's all right, Albert! It's all right, Albert!" she cried, and all in the court room heard her.

In the public part of the court room the two daughters of the convicted man were sobbing.

Doheny Curses Court.

Mark Thompson, Fall's personal secretary and lifetime friend, turned ashen pale and then slumped to the floor. For fully ten minutes he was unconscious. Never very strong physically, there were some who thought he was dying.

Fall alone remained calm. Once he wiped his eyes, and those near him said there was a tear or two in evidence. This was when he saw his wife on her way to his side.

Edward L. Doheny, who must now go to trial to answer an indictment naming him as the giver of the bribe, was seated next to Fall when Foreman Norris proclaimed the verdict of guilty. Doheny knew what was coming and was prepared for the shock. He was a striking contrast to Fall. Fall's face was ashen. Doheny's was red, almost to the point of crimson. He was mad clear through.

"That damn court"— he was heard to mutter.

He did not complete the sentence. A friend cautioned him that he was nearing the border line of contempt of court.

Fall Warned to Keep Nerve.

Doheny was one of the first of the "oil group" to leave the room. Court had adjourned and Justice Hitz retired to his chambers. On his way out Doheny, his every expression showing the tension he was laboring under, was heard to say:

"This was not the verdict of the jury, but the verdict of the court."

That the jury had agreed was known an hour before the verdict was announced. Just how the news leaked out no one knew, but it was also apparently known that the verdict was guilty.

At 9 o'clock, an hour before the court was scheduled to convene, it was "standing room only" in the court room. Outside twice as many more men and women sought vainly to gain entrance. The tenseness of the situation was in the air. Everybody felt it.

Only Fall and his women folk were

Cousin of Rockefeller Jr. Gets License to Fly His Own Plane

Special to The New York Times.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, L. I., Oct. 25.—After a short period of flight training at the flying school attached to this field, J. W. Rockefeller Jr., a cousin of John D. Rockefeller Jr., was examined by the local representative of the Department of Commerce and a private pilot's license was granted to him. The young pilot lives at 125 West Twelfth Street, Manhattan, has been in training for several months under F. Ray Cullman at Field Unit No. 1, and is shortly expected to purchase his own plane, which he will fly from the Aviation Country Club at Hicksville.

Mr. Rockefeller's family is said to have heartily endorsed his flying activities.

REPUBLICANS TO WAR ON REBELS IN SENATE

Selection of Kahn as Treasurer of Senatorial Committee Seen as First Campaign Move.

HUSTON ENLISTED BANKER

Announcement Made at Dinner Here at Which Speakers Criticized Progressive Group.

Otto H. Kahn, partner in the banking firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., has accepted the treasurership of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee at the request of Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire, chairman of the committee, and Claudius H. Huston, the new chairman of the Republican National Committee, it was learned yesterday. Announcement to that effect was made Thursday night at the dinner given here by Jeremiah Milbank for Mr. Huston at the University Club.

In making the announcement of the appointment of Mr. Kahn and his acceptance to the 120 persons present, among whom were some of the leading bankers and business men of the city, Senator Moses said smilingly:

"Gentlemen, the line forms on the right."

War on Progressives Seen

The selection of a banker of Mr. Khan's standing as treasurer of the Senatorial Campaign Committee was accepted as an indication that Senator Moses, as chairman of the committee, intended to be prepared for a hard fight for the retention of Republican control of the Senate when a third of the members come up for election or re-election next year. The selection of Mr. Kahn was seen as somewhat of a war measure, aimed as much against the members of the so-called Republican Progressive group in the Senate as against the Democrats, with a possibility that the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee might fail to support some of the Progressive Senators who have opposed and are opposing President Hoover and the administration on the tariff bill, now before Congress.

Heretofore, the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee has usually lacked a real treasurer, but has obtained its funds or most of them from the Republican National Committee. It has not had a separate treasurer for the last six or eight years and, when it had a treasurer, that official acted more as a receiving teller for the funds turned over by the National Committee for the conduct of the Senatorial campaigns.

Criticize Insurgent Group.

TWO SAY THEY TOOK $63,000 TO WARDER, $20,000 TO HIS WIFE

SAW FERRARI ON HIS KNEES

Asserts He Found President of City Trust Pleading With Defendant.

LABATE ON THE STAND

Declares He Delivered Money to Mrs. Warder—State Seeks to Submit Apartment Lease.

Delivery of $63,000 in large bills from Francesco M. Ferrari, president of the City Trust Company, to Frank H. Warder, while he was Superintendent of Banks, was testified to yesterday by Gennaro Dell' Osso at Mr. Warder's trial for accepting a bribe to withhold an examination of the tottering bank. Dell' Osso, brother-in-law of the late Mr. Ferrari, also told Justice Arthur S. Tompkins and a jury that he had seen Ferrari on his knees pleading with the bank superintendent.

J. Vincent Labate testified he brought $20,000 to the Warder home and delivered it to Mrs. Warder. With the $10,000 Dell' Osso told about on Thursday, the prosecution has submitted evidence of a total of $93,000 in alleged bribes. There has been testimony also of the delivery of sealed envelopes from Ferrari to Warder.

Tells of Five Trips to Warder Home.

Dell' Osso was a stolid witness despite his lack of facility with the English language. He calmly recited, under examination by Hiram C. Todd, Special Assistant District Attorney, the details of five trips with packets of money to the Warder home. On the first of these, in April or May, 1928, he took $13,000, he testified; then in June he delivered $16,000, in August $6,000, which he paid to Mr. Warder on the street near his home, and in December he carried $8,000 to the Riverside Drive apartment. This was followed by a $20,000 payment in January of this year, he said.

It was after he had been to Warder's house with the $20,000 that he conducted the then Superintendent of Banks to a room on the twentieth floor of the Park Row Building, 15 Park Row, he said. Ferrari met him there and Dell' Osso left them alone. An hour later, in the belief that they had gone, he entered the darkened room with a pass-key and saw his brother-in-law on his knees before Warder pleading with him, he testified. He was not permitted to tell the conversation he overheard.

Under cross-examination by James I. Cuff, Dell' Osso occasionally became confused on dates, times and weather conditions, but in the main it was Dell' Osso who was calm, while Mr. Cuff was quivering with rage. Only once did he succeed in stirring the witness. That was when he said:

"You know Mrs. Warder is dead, don't you, and you know that Ferrari is dead?"

Witness Mutters at Warder.

Tears came to Dell' Osso's eyes and he pulled a handkerchief from his pocket and held it to his face. Mr. Cuff then reverted to the scene in the Park Row office and had the witness step down from the stand and illustrate the relative positions of the two men. As Mr. Cuff turned

Wreath From Hoover to Be Put On Roosevelt Grave Tomorrow

Acting as the representative of President Hoover, Brig. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commanding the First Division of the army, tomorrow will place upon the grave of Theodore Roosevelt, at Oyster Bay, a wreath forwarded from Washington by the President. It will be the President's personal tribute to the memory of Roosevelt, whose seventy-first birthday anniversary is tomorrow.

The wreath reached the quarters of Major Gen. Hanson E. Ely, at Second Army Corps area headquarters on Governors Island, yesterday, with instructions from President Hoover that an officer be designated to place it on the grave. General Ely at once named General Drum.

THOMAS REVEALS 1924 SCHOOL SURVEY

Charges Walker Has Ignored Findings of Committee Which City Has Not Yet Published.

CITES ATTACK ON GOMPERT

Says 'Inexperienced' Architect Was Retained—Study Pointed to Building Waste.

Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for Mayor, made public yesterday the first half of a forty-page report on school construction prepared by the Cooperative and Constructive School Survey in 1924 and still unpublished by the Board of Education.

The committee's series of reports, covering all aspects of the system, are being printed now, and Joseph Miller Jr., secretary of the board, said that 2,000 printed copies would be ready some time in November. Mr. Thomas declared that he had a "substantial portion" of several of the reports submitted by the survey committee and was planning to make them public during the next few days. The committee was headed by Dr. William H. Allen.

The building report was prepared by A. L. Weeks, an architect, of Syracuse, who made a study of planning and construction of schools here for the committee. Mr. Weeks's main recommendations were the establishment of a building research service to plan for improved schools, a check-up of building plans by the Board of Education in cooperation with the proposed bureau, and more effective control of and responsibility for the building program by the Superintendent of Schools.

Report Ignored, Says Thomas.

Mr. Thomas, in speeches last night, charged the Walker Administration and the Board of Education with ignoring the criticisms and recommendations of the report, said that Mayor Walker had allowed William H. Gompert to serve as a school architect for two years although declared "inexperienced" by the report and contended that the defects in school planning and building pointed out in the report had not been remedied.

The report of Mr. Weeks, as made public by the Socialist candidate, begins with a description of the "stupendous" building program undertaken by the city at an eventual total cost of nearly $235,000,000. This figure covers the five-year period beginning in 1720. Mr. Weeks pointed out the ever increasing need for more economical construction. Crediting the then school architect, Mr. Gompert, who resigned two years ago following disclosures of faulty construction, with "markedly improving" planning, the surveyor said that there was "yet room for very great improvement."

The report urged elimination of waste space to reduce the cost of new construction.

Specifically, the Syracuse architect referred to possibilities of reducing waste space by eliminating too wide corridors, over-sized rooms, improper placement of stairs, too many and too large auditoriums, ill-planned special rooms and the enclosed court type of building. Summarizing his general recommendations, Mr. Weeks said that "the most important consideration is that the educator in charge should have complete and accurate knowledge of actual building requirements, including changes made necessary."

Tells Present Procedure.

Under the caption "Need for Systematic Study of School Buildings," Mr. Weeks wrote:

"According to present procedure and organization, all work in connection with the approval of sites, location and buildings, determination of type and size of buildings, determination of the size and equipment of all rooms and equipment in all buildings and the approval of all building plans, is done by the associate superintendent assigned to buildings and sites, Dr. E. E. Shallow. (Dr. Shallow has died since. He was succeeded by Associate Superintendent William A. Boylan).

"In addition to this, Dr. Shallow has other educational assignments.

URGE A NEW PARK AV. BUILT ABOVE TRACKS FROM 96TH ST. NORTH

Mayor's Traffic Advisers Ask Decking Over of Viaduct to Both Building Lines.

PREDICT BIG REALTY GAINS

Avenue at a Height of Four Stories Would Have Garages and Storage Area Beneath.

PROMPT ACTION PROPOSED

Negotiation With Central Necessary, Day & Zimmerman Point Out—Bridge Feeders Favored.

The decking-over of Park Avenue above the level of the New York Central viaduct from Ninety-sixth Street to a point just south of the Harlem River to create a new through-travel artery at a maximum height of four stories above the present street level is recommended in the Day & Zimmerman traffic survey report submitted to Mayor Walker and the Board of Estimate on Thursday. The report recommends that such a project be started as soon as possible and predicts that its completion will result in the construction north of Ninety-sixth Street of the same high class of structures as now flank Park Avenue south of that point.

The report suggests that the new highway be created by decking over from building line to building line, leaving clearance for the railroad tracks below. The four stories below the level of the new highway, it was suggested, could be used for basement storage, garages and kitchens. Because of the need for negotiation with the railroad regarding plans for the new highway, it was recommended that an early start be made.

Reject Plan for New Viaduct.

In making their recommendations the Day & Zimmerman engineers rejected the plan already proposed by city officials calling for a new elevated structure in Park Avenue over the railroad viaduct. This plan, the report declared, would simply mean an additional obstruction in the street of about twice the height of the viaduct, and would result in still further depreciation of Park Avenue property above Ninety-sixth Street.

The new through highway constructed by decking over the viaduct from building line to building line, the report pointed out, could be linked by means of a combined railroad and vehicular traffic bridge across the Harlem River, to the proposed new through route to be created by decking over the railroad tracks on Park Avenue from the Harlem River to Gun Hill Road. North of the river the tracks are at or below street level, and the report recommends that the decking over be done at the same level as the adjacent highways.

Urge Triborough Bridge Spur.

The report recommends several projects designed by city and borough engineers to make possible the most efficient handling and distribution of traffic from the new Triborough Bridge and Hudson River Bridge when completed. It is urged that the most important of these improvements be started in time to have them ready when the bridges are thrown open to traffic.

One suggested improvement is a spur of the Triborough Bridge from 107th Street in Manhattan. The report discusses the recommendation of Mayor Walker's Committee on Plan and Survey that such a spur be built at Ninety-sixth Street, but recommends that the more northerly location be adopted as more serviceable to traffic.

Another improvement which the report considers necessary for really efficient use of the Triborough Bridge is the widening of Southern and Eastern Boulevards in the Bronx from the easterly end of the bridge at Cypress Avenue to the city line. A 120-foot highway is suggested.

To bring about this improvement the report recommends that Southern Boulevard be widened from Cypress

STOCKS GAIN AS MARKET IS STEADIED; BANKERS PLEDGE CONTINUED SUPPORT; HOOVER SAYS BUSINESS BASIS IS SOUND

President Hoover Issues a Statement of Reassurance On Continued Prosperity of Fundamental Business

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—A reassuring statement that the fundamental business of the country was on a sound and prosperous basis was made by President Hoover at the White House this afternoon. It was made in reply to questions by newspaper men asking his opinion on the possible effect on the nation's prosperity of yesterday's collapse in the stock market.

Prior to his announcement, the President is understood to have received detailed reports of the break in securities values, and of the current activities of the country's industries, from Secretary Mellon and other officials at the Cabinet meeting this morning.

The text of his statement headed, "In reply to press question as to the business situation, the President said," was as follows:

The fundamental business of the country, that is production and distribution of commodities, is on a sound and prosperous basis. The best evidence is that although production and consumption are at high levels, the average prices of commodities as a whole have not increased and there have been no appreciable increases in the stocks of manufactured goods. Moreover, there has been a tendency of wages to increase and the output per worker in many industries again shows an increase, all of which indicates a healthy condition.

The construction and building material industries have been to some extent affected by the high interest rates induced by stock speculation and there has been some seasonal decrease in one or two other industries, but these movements are of secondary character when considered in the whole situation.

A temporary drop in grain prices sympathetically with Stock Exchange prices usually happens, but as the Department of Agriculture points out, the overriding fact in grain is that this year's world wheat harvest is estimated to be 500,000,000 bushels less than that of last year, which will result in a very low carryover at the end of the harvest year.

WALKER OPENS WORK ON TRIBOROUGH SPAN

With Silver-Plated Pick and Spade He Breaks Ground in Astoria Park.

Officials Say Bridge Will Add to City's Commerce—Praise the Mayor's Administration.

Using a silver-plated pick and spade, albeit somewhat gingerly, Mayor Walker began yesterday the actual, physical construction of the great Triborough Bridge which, four years hence, he said, would link with commerce and with steel the boroughs of Manhattan, Bronx and Queens and relieve a traffic congestion which was now causing a "waste of millions of dollars annually."

Bareheaded, on a grassy slope in Astoria Park, Queens, above which waved municipal pennants that marked the Queens approach to the projected, Y-shaped span, the Mayor plied the pick, and then lifted the first spadeful of damp earth victoriously from its Autumn bed. He was photographed with it perhaps a hundred times. While he toiled the noon whistles blew, but a suggestion that it was time to stop for luncheon met with the quick retort:

"We shall not knock off for lunch on this job."

A little later, however, the tired laborer-executive begged for rest, declaring he had not agreed to continue his manual labors until "the entire job is completed."

Walker Administration Praised.

Speakers referred to the occasion as "epochal," as "history-making." There was no reference to politics, save when a by-stander "regretted" that the Mayor's spadeful of earth was his first indulgence in "mud-slinging," but there was a perfect unanimity of opinion among the speakers that Mayor Walker in particular and his administration in general were deserving of all praise for their "courage, zeal and foresight" in getting the bridge project under way.

By 10 o'clock yesterday morning 10,000 or more persons had gathered

FOOD CONCERNS UNITE IN $125,000,000 DEAL

National City Company Brings About Merger of Hershey, Kraft-Phenix and Colgate.

SEEKS THREE MORE UNITS

Total Assets Finally May Reach $200,000,000—Largest Group of Kind in the World.

Negotiations which have been carried on for several weeks by the National City Company with a view to forming the largest holding company for food and drug manufacturing units in the world, have been completed, it was learned yesterday. The new company, which is as yet unnamed, will bring together the Kraft-Phenix Cheese Corporation, the Hershey Chocolate Corporation and the Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Company. It will have total assets of more than $125,000,000 at the start, but negotiations are being carried on with, at least three food companies which may increase the holding company's resources to more than $200,000,000.

The new company will be similar in structure to Standard Brands, Inc., the holding company formed by J. P. Morgan & Co., to control the Fleischmann Company, the Royal Baking Power Company and E. W. Gillet Company, Ltd., of Canada, which had total assets of about $80,000,000 at the end of June. The units in Standard Brands retained their identity, the holding company being formed to effect economies in distribution, selling and other lines.

Stock Basis Agreed Upon.

At the end of 1923 the Hershey Company had assets of more than $25,000,000. It is understood that control of the company has been acquired by interests connected with the National City Company through the purchase of a large block of stock, and that the only obstacle to the formation of the holding company was a basis for the exchange of stock of Kraft-Phenix and Colgate for the shares of the new holding company. This basis has been agreed upon, and it is expected that a formal announcement of the formation of the new holding company will be made soon.

The Hershey Company, which was established in 1893, is engaged in the manufacture of chocolate and cocoa products. It has a large plant at Hershey, Pa., and several sugar plantations in Cuba, one of which owns or controls 50,000 acres.

The town of Hershey was built through the efforts of the founder of the company, Milton S. Hershey, who distributed his fortune in many benefactions. In 1923 Mr. Hershey placed his entire wealth in trust for the Hershey Industrial School, an orphanage which the manufacturer had founded in 1909. The transfer of stock of the Hershey enterprises, which then consisted of sixteen companies, represented a gift of $60,000,000 to the orphanage. Mr. Hershey, who started life as a poor boy on a farm, built his fortune from the manufacture of caramels and later bi-sect chocolate bars.

TRADING IS NEAR NORMAL

5,923,220 Shares Are Sold—Fluctuations in Price Narrow.

BAKER JOINS BANKING POOL

OFFICIALS ARE OPTIMISTIC

Federal Summaries Say Trade Level Is Above 1928 Mark —Other Markets Recover.

Order came quickly out of chaos in Wall Street yesterday. Heartened by the assertions of the leading bankers and industrialists that the financial position of the country is fundamentally sound, the market opened steady and continued to fluctuate narrowly, but evenly, throughout a trading day not far from normal.

Two developments stood out most prominently and at once caught and held the attention of the entire world, the eyes of which were focussed yesterday morning on the New York Stock Exchange. One was the remarkable stability of the prices of leading securities, after their tremendous upheaval of the previous day; the other was the decline in volume, which aggregated 5,923,220 shares on the Stock Exchange, compared with 12,880,000 shares on the previous day.

The fact that the volume had contracted to trading of little more than normal proportions, that the country's most prominent bankers stood back of the market with the purpose of preventing a recurrence of Thursday's tremendous declines, and that the country's business leaders, had determined to stanch the flow of liquidation to avert a serious business depression, had immediate psychological effect. The wave of hysteria passed as quickly as it had developed.

Price Fluctuations Are Narrow.

From bell to bell, on the exchanges, the markets were orderly and temperate. For a day of such activity there was little confusion, and the fluctuations of most leading issues were within a narrow range that reflected just how capably a serious difficulty had been taken in hand and conquered.

Overnight developments favored the market. Washington officials again had outlined the growth of business and industry this year and its stability; the banking pool had completed its arrangements for the active support of stocks, if such support became necessary; optimistic statements came from the leaders of the iron and steel industry at their annual meeting here. Most important of all, most of the speculators, big and little, whose distressed holdings had clogged the market, were already out, having walked the plank on the previous day.

Overnight, too, the attitude of many holders of stocks had changed. The nervousness and excitement and financial hysterics of the previous day had subsided.

Prices Higher at Opening.

It was this situation which confronted the market at the 10 o'clock bell yesterday morning and a hush of anxiety fell over the Wall Street district as the tickers started to tap out the initial trades. United States Steel common opened with a block at 207, up 1; Anaconda Copper, at 108, was up 1; General Electric, at 310, was up 2; National Cash Register, at 100, was up 3; Montgomery Ward, opening at 70, showed a 2-point gain; General Motors, with a block of 10,000 shares at 55, was up 1½; Westinghouse, also on a block of 10,000 shares, was up 3; and a long list of other leading stocks gained from 1 to 5 points on the initial sale. Similar gains occurred on the Curb market and in the over-the-counter trading.

It was with a sigh of relief, extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific, that the opening prices were watched. The crisis appeared to have been successfully weathered, and the day's subsequent trading evidenced that the determination of bankers and Stock Exchange leaders to stop the senseless liquidation, had been successful. There were some declines after the opening. The nervousness and apprehension had got completely passed and opening prices were about the best of the day, but there was not a moment during the entire market when it was not firmly under control, when it

General Electric and Westinghouse Join R. C. A.-Victor Corporation Radio Merger

By The Associated Press.

CAMDEN, N. J., Oct. 25.—Camden was designated tonight as a manufacturing and distributing center for home entertainment appliances through the action of the General Electric and the Westinghouse Companies which have ceded to the R. C. A.-Victor Corporation all rights in patents on home entertainment appliances and, so far as research, manufacture, sale and distribution is concerned, are merged with the R. C. A.-Victor concern.

Formal announcement of the plan to make Camden the headquarters of a large radio-talking machine corporation was made tonight by James C. Harbord, President of the Radio Corporation of America; Gerard Swope, President of General Electric, and Frank A. Merrick, President of Westinghouse.

The partial merger of the four large industrial units is expected to provide employment for about 7,000 more men at the R. C. A.-Victor plants which now employ about 13,000 persons.

The joint announcement stated that Edward E. Shumaker, President of the Victor Talking Machine Company, would be President of the R. C. A.-Victor Corporation.

"Beginning Jan. 1, 1930," the announcement stated, "the new company will carry on research activities as well as all the engineering, manufacturing and selling activities in connection with radio sets, talking machines, records and other devices in the home entertainment field, now sold by the Radio-Victor Company and manufactured by the General Electric and Westinghouse companies.

"Since the purchase of the Victor Talking Machine Company, plans for the manufacturing concentration have been under way and have now developed to the point where consolidation of facilities with the Camden plant is desirable. The unification involves no change in present distribution facilities. Executive and sales headquarters of the new company will be in New York."

The present sales of the Victor Company and the Radio Corporation are in excess of $50,000,000 a year. Under the merger it is expected this figure will reach $300,000,000.

E. E. Shumacker, head of the Victor Company, will be president of the new organization. J. L. Ray, a vice president of the Radio Corporation, and H. C. Grubbs, a vice president of Victor, will be vice presidents of the new group. Alfred Walland, former Victor vice president, is to be another vice president of the new concern.

La Guardia Lost Chance to Meet Party Chiefs As Aide in Error Declined Huston Dinner Bid

Through an oversight Fiorello H. La Guardia missed an opportunity Thursday to dine with Vice President Curtis, several members of President Hoover's Cabinet and Claudius H. Huston, chairman of the Republican National Committee. The opportunity came at a time when Mr. La Guardia's friends and supporters are making every effort to obtain from national leaders at Washington recognition of his claim to support as Mayoralty candidate from the conservatives in the Republican party.

Where other candidates were left off the list of guests, to be invited, an invitation had been sent to Mr. La Guardia to attend the dinner given by Jeremiah Milbank Thursday evening at the University Club to provide an opportunity for prominent Republicans in this city and Washington to meet Mr. Huston.

The first Mr. La Guardia knew about the invitation, however, was when Alan Fox, a Hoover supporter last year, paid a visit to him yesterday at his campaign headquarters in the Hotel Cadillac. Mr. Fox went to explain that a newspaper report, which had it that Mr. La Guardia had not been invited, was untrue. Mr. Fox told Mr. La Guardia, who late Thursday afternoon had said he knew nothing about the Milbank dinner, that the invitation had been declined on his behalf, presumably on the ground that Mr. La Guardia had several speaking engagements in the Bronx that evening.

Mr. La Guardia shook his head with a smile when asked for comment.

stocks could not be sold at a price near the last quotation. At noon the market was quiet and firm and that general description fitted the close. Many wide changes, of course, characterized the day's trading. Many stocks were up sharply, many were down sharply. But the day's level indicated such a reassuring degree of stability, especially as compared with the market of the previous day, as to give it a strong appearance at most times.

Short Covering Aids Market.

Morning brokerage letters had advised the purchase of sound stocks and the cancellation of any selling orders that might be in the market. This advice, generally, was widely accepted. Thousands of speculators and investors, too, recognized the fact that any number of issues had been driven down below their real worth and were bargains. There was considerable short covering, also, by the bearish contingent, who did not want openly to battle the powerful contingent who had taken the stock market under its wing.

In fact, it may be said on information from the best of sources that some of the stock purchased by the banking pool on its organization Thursday afternoon at the time of the greatest decline, was resold with ease yesterday and that the pool is in a position to provide an unlimited amount of support should it be needed, which in view of yesterday's market stability probably will not be necessary. One leading banker said this pool is not back of the market in any sense of the word. Rather it is under it and will not again permit the market to get out of hand completely as it did for two hours on Wall Street's most fatal Thursday.

Some Big Speculators Hard Hit.

That many thousands of speculators, big and little, have been completely wiped out is evident. That many readjustments are yet to be made in financial positions also is true. Reports that some of the biggest speculators have been very badly crippled and that some have been taken over by their bankers are also believed to be true, although impossible of definite confirmation. The Detroit crowd of speculators had been hard hit. The "Big Ten," a group of speculators from all parts of the country who have bulled the market successfully and in a big way for more than two years, has at least been seriously crippled.

Most of these accounts went by the boards in the debacle of Thursday, and there was considerable selling of the distress variety yesterday, but such stocks as were sold were not senselessly dumped on the market for what they would bring, as on the previous day, but were cautiously passed out at fixed valuations. One of the biggest of the Curb operators was so badly hurt that he has been obliged to withdraw from all commitments, but he took his losses in characteristic fashion.

"Well," he said, as his holdings were being sold out at prices 25, 50 and 100 points below what he had paid for them, "blue chips have no home."

Although the lateness of the tickers yesterday did not compare with the latest of the previous day, because of the lessened volume, the volume was again too large for the tickers to keep abreast of the market and this added to the confusion of what otherwise might be written into the year's financial history as a normal market day. From eighteen minutes late at 10:30, it increased to more than an hour shortly after noon and at 2:50 was sixty-nine minutes late. The tickers had completed recording the market at 4:34.

Thousands of Accounts Closed.

There probably never have been in the history of the Stock Exchange two consecutive days in which so many accounts went overboard. Thousands of persons with comparatively small sums, ranging from $1,000 to $10,000, have been entirely wiped out, for all of them were holding stocks, hoping against hope that the market would recover to their buying price. The losses of these amounts, by men in all parts of the country, will naturally have some measurable effect on the business of the country, it is believed, and while it probably will not be noticeable in the necessities of life, the extinguishment of this buying power is likely to be felt in the luxuries. Such market debacles, particularly at the end of a decline and at the culmination of the wildest and longest bull market in the history of the country, have thousands of ramifications, most of them pathetic.

"I was obliged to sell out one of my best friends," declared the head of one house, "for my protection and his. It was the toughest job I ever had to do."

Incidentally the service to customers of Exchange and Curb houses during the exciting two market days has been exceptionally good, in consideration of the wild scenes on the Exchange floor and the breaking prices. No reports of serious errors in executions have been heard.

Judicious Buying Is Urged.

The stock market, because of the vast number of complex factors, will be watched with intense interest for the next few days, now that the hysteria is over and the market is once more on an even keel. It is expected, first, that it will commence again to pay attention to the ordinary economic factors, that is, general business earnings, dividends, prospects, mergers, the state of money and the thousand and one other developments tending to strengthen or depress values, for the long pull many brokers and bankers advise the purchase of sound stocks at the present level, but at the same time advising that great caution must be used in discriminating between the good and the bad. For the immediate future the chances would appear best for a stable market, with narrow and probably meaningless fluctuations.

What appears most certain is that the back of the big bull market, which started with the era of easy money during the Coolidge Administration and was inherited by the Hoover Administration, has been definitely broken and that stocks as a whole will sell once more at prices commensurate with their earnings and profits and not at the fictitious quotations brought about by the scramble of thousands of speculators in all parts of the country for their possession.

Investment Trusts Buying.

Buying by investment trusts of selected issues was continued yesterday, although the total of these purchases did not equal the heavy volume of trust buying on Thursday, when many scale orders were reached during the market's decline. It was reported that several trusts had withdrawn as buyers for the time, or had placed new scale orders below the existing level.

The three investment trusts managed by Calvin Bullock & Co., International Carriers, Ltd., International Superpower Corporation and United States Electric Power and Light Shares, Inc., which have a net worth of more than $90,000,000, announced they had made substantial purchases. The commitments, it was said, were not confined to equities, but included many senior obligations.

Commodity Markets Recover.

The New York and out-of-town commodity markets also experienced a recovery of good spirits, which in many cases were translated into gains in prices for the day, but some shading off appeared at the close of the day on the burlap, rubber, coffee and sugar markets. Wheat and other grains and cotton displayed firmer tendencies, ending with advances, and cocoa also was stronger.

On the local cotton market futures were 1 to 4 points stronger at the close, after sagging 13 to 34 points in early trading, indicating a broad recovery from the lowest levels. Wheat at Chicago broke 6 cents at one time, but ended with gains of 1¼ to 1⅞ cents a bushel, while New Orleans cotton was 5 to 9 points higher at the end.

Cocoa futures were 3 to 4 points higher here, while coffee was 45 to 50 points easier at the close. Rubber was unchanged or off 5 to 20 points at the end and burlap was 6 points down on the day. Cottonseed oil was unchanged for March and off 2 points for May delivery. Silk was lower on balance at the close.

The California-Hawaiian Sugar Company announced a reduction of its price on refined sugar to 5.25 cents a pound, regarded in some quarters as the first move in a general reduction from the current level of 5.50 cents. This movement, however, was not attributed to the speculative situation which brought weakness to most commodities on Thursday, but to a technical situation solely affecting the sugar trade.

REPORTS 30,000,000-SHARE DAY

Pynchon & Co. Set This Total for Thursday Here and in Canada.

Total transactions on the American and Canadian stock markets on Thursday were estimated yesterday at between 28,000,000 and 30,000,000 shares by Pynchon & Co. Of this total the New York Stock Exchange and the New York Curb Exchange provided 20,000,000 shares.

The firm estimated that the average price a share was about $50 and that on this basis the transactions for the day represented $1,500,000,000.

A tabulation of the exchanges whose actual figures were available, compiled by Pynchon & Co., follows:

Exchange.	No. of shares.
New York Stock	12,894,650
New York Curb	6,337,400
New York Produce	218,748
Chicago Stock	1,230,000
Philadelphia Stock	432,020
Baltimore Stock	74,116
Boston Stock	209,530
Toronto Stock	150,000
Montreal Stock	282,521
Cincinnati Stock	13,620
San Francisco Stock	439,000
Los Angeles Stock	206,184
Los Angeles Curb	162,181
Cleveland Stock	5,020
Detroit Stock	96,585
Pittsburgh Stock	15,640
Total	22,780,198

"In addition to the transactions of individual stock exchanges noted," said Pynchon & Co., "it is fair to assume that on the unlisted and over-the-counter security markets of the country at least 5,000,000 shares changed hands, and also odd-lot transactions on the New York Stock Exchange not appearing on the tape readily would total 1,000,000 shares or more."

NEW AID IS PLEDGED TO BANK COALITION

G. F. Baker Jr. Joins Parley at Morgan Offices and Many Other Offers Are Made.

SUPPORT EASES ANXIETY

Conferees Find Sentiment Altered and Feel Buying Power They Promised Will Not Be Needed.

Secure in the knowledge that the most powerful banks in the country stood ready to avert a recurrence of the demoralization which struck the stock market on Thursday, the financial community relaxed its anxiety yesterday and concluded that "the party was over." It was definitely learned that the group of five great banking institutions which came to the rescue of the stock market on Thursday had agreed to furnish a backlog of buying power against the danger of another avalanche of selling. Nor are these five institutions alone in their stand. The group has received offers from other banking institutions of a sum of money far in excess of $100,000,000 to use at their discretion in support of the market.

Only a small part of the funds at their disposal has been used, it was learned, and the group yesterday found that sufficient buying power had accumulated as the result of the change of sentiment overnight to permit trading on the Stock Exchange to proceed naturally. So far from having to take stock in order to support prices, the group is understood to have disposed yesterday of most of its purchases of the previous day in order to strengthen further its position.

Meet Again in Morgan Office.

At the close of the day the bankers reconvened at the offices of J. P. Morgan & Co. to discuss the situation. In addition to the banks which were represented Thursday, George F. Baker Jr. joined the conference as representative of the First National Bank.

The addition of Mr. Baker brings the number of banks joined in an agreement to tide over the financial difficulties to six. The other members of the group, who formed the original conference, are:

CHARLES E. MITCHELL, chairman of the National City Bank.

ALBERT H. WIGGIN, chairman of the Chase National Bank.

SEWARD PROSSER, chairman of the Bankers Trust.

WILLIAM POTTER, president of the Guaranty Trust.

THOMAS W. LAMONT, senior partner of Morgan & Co.

It is not the intention of the banking group to buy stocks to put up prices, it is said, but to furnish a cushion of purchasing power against the recurrence of any such situation as Thursday's. In other words, the bankers are "not back of the market, but under the market." The chief purpose of the coalition is to bring about an orderly trading market.

Among the members of the group the opinion prevails that the situation which developed in Thursday's market was due to excessive speculation and not to any fundamental weakness in the financial situation or the business prosperity of the country.

The bankers are understood to be well satisfied with the response of the market to their support and now believe that the danger of a crisis has passed. The expectation is that the stock market will settle down to quiet trading at a normal pace and the opinion was expressed by one member of the group that selective issues could be expected to move forward.

First Public Coalition.

Although Wall Street has often in the past heard stories of organized banking support, this is the first instance in which the financial community has definitely known of such a coalition and of its exact personnel. Under the influence of the knowledge Wall Street's drooping spirits revived and among leading financiers there was a disposition to view the events of the past few days as little calculated to work serious injury to the prosperity of the country.

The meeting of the bankers yesterday afternoon, which took place at 4:30 and lasted until shortly after 5, was in marked contrast to the hurried conference at noon Thursday when stock market prices were crashing.

The bankers met yesterday after the close of a market which had returned to orderly trading, had shown sufficient strength actually to take stock from the pool rather than lean upon its support. The members of the group expressed themselves as completely satisfied and it was indicated that there would probably be no more conferences this week.

The purpose of the meeting was primarily for an exchange of views and information, but it was considered likely in Wall Street that plans for the future were taken up and definite steps determined upon in the event of a recurrence of the decline.

The coalition of six banks is known to have the complete support of the rest of the banking community and, in addition to the enormous resources represented by the institutions involved, has at its disposal large sums of money which the other banks of the city stand ready to contribute toward the organized support of the market.

Slight Damage Foreseen.

Among other leading bankers of the financial district the opinion prevailed that after the excitement occasioned by the spectacular decline on Thursday had subsided it would be found that much less damage had been done than at first appeared likely. It was conceded that many small margin holders had been wiped out by the crash, but it was pointed out that no casualties had occurred among the brokerage houses and other financial institutions.

Pointing out that only a small proportion of the population is directly interested in the stock market, one banker said that he considered it extremely unlikely that the course of business would be seriously affected by the decline in security prices.

The retail Christmas trade may feel some chill as a result, he remarked, but beyond that there is not likely to be any noticeable curtailment of public buying power. The only persons to find their prosperity impaired, it was pointed out, will be those who have been speculating on narrow margins. The outright holder of securities has presumably maintained his investments intact and will feel no diminution of his income.

In general the banking community took the view that a market tempered to a much slower pace than that of recent months would ensue and that a strong revival of the bond business was a distinct possibility.

In this connection one prominent banker made the flat assertion that a thriving bond market is at hand. He pointed out that conditions in the money market have for some time been abnormal, but are now returning to a more even keel.

Stock Crash Starts Excited Trading on Liner; Woman Is $160,000 Loser at One Time in Trip

Echoes of Wall Street's crash of Thursday were heard in the sea-going brokerage office of M. J. Meehan on the Cunard liner Berengaria and caused a scene never before witnessed on an ocean liner, it was learned yesterday when the ship docked here from Southampton.

On Wednesday, some of the 1,414 passengers on the great liner were buying heavily and news of the drop in prices, sent by radio to the liner on Thursday, changed the entire aspect of the voyage.

In miniature, the small radio brokerage office was as hectic as the Stock Exchange floor hundreds of miles away in New York. Accounts were wiped out and thousands of dollars lost. One woman, whose name was withheld by the clerk, lost $160,000 in the first few hours of excited trading, but recovered all but $40,000 in the later upward trend and by buying in low on other stocks. In all nearly 20,000 shares were traded in from the Berengaria office.

Passengers on the liner, usually occupied during the daytime hours of sailing with festivities, deck games and quiet smoking room chat, were rushing to and from the Meehan office, and every person who could squeeze into the room was watching the board boy and his flying chalk.

Outside, those who could not gain entrance were waiting their turn dejectedly. One passenger described the scene as a "death watch" which kept people from their meals.

Curiously enough none of the passengers who participated would admit more than a passing interest in the results. Each one questioned admitted he had watched the tallies, but denied he had won or lost.

'ALL WELL,' IS VIEW OF BUSINESS CHIEFS

Reassuring Statements From Leaders Help Wall St. to Regain Composure.

LOASBY SEES NO NEW BREAK

Brush Says Caution Is Needed, but Expects No Recurrence—Railroad Heads Optimistic.

Reassuring statements from banking and industrial leaders helped Wall Street to regain its composure yesterday after the recent violent declines on the Stock Exchange. From high places the word was passed down that all is well with the financial and industrial structure.

Bankers and brokers reported that the spasm of fear which accompanied Thursday's unsettlement in the security markets was overcome more speedily than it developed. In all quarters an optimistic view was taken of the general business situation.

Arthur W. Loasby, president of the Equitable Trust Company—There will be no repetition of the break of yesterday. The market fell of its own weight without regard to fundamental business conditions, which are sound. I have no fear of another comparable decline. From now on, the market will be a subject for discrimination. While some stocks have declined too far, it is true that some stocks are still too high. I look for future purchasing to have some relation to the earning power of stocks. Investors will buy returns rather than quotations.

M. C. Brush, president of the American International Corporation—After such a serious day as Thursday, it is rather remarkable for the market to have behaved as well as it did at the close that night and opening Friday morning. I think we are all indebted to the four gentlemen who met on the corner yesterday and through their action steadied the whole situation. I do not look for a recurrence of Thursday and believe that the very best stocks can be bought at approximate present prices. It is time, however, to exercise great caution.

John M. Davis, president of the Lackawanna Railroad—Railroads are the largest consumers of steel, copper, coal, lumber and many manufactured articles, and records show that not only the railroads but also the manufacturers are carrying the lowest inventories since the World War, and with that condition there is no reason to believe that this country will not have good general business throughout the Winter.

R. B. White, president of the Central Railroad of New Jersey—There is nothing alarming in the situation as regards business. Business will continue in the way it has. Plans of the railroads for the future have in no way been changed.

J. J. Bernet, president of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway—I think that while some few lines of business may show a slight recession in the last quarter of this year, the business situation is sound, and I see no cause for alarm.

Walter C. Teagle, president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey—There has been no fundamental change in the petroleum industry in recent months. Production of crude oil and gasoline above current requirements continues the outstanding factor.

J. L. Julian, partner of the New York Stock Exchange firm of Fenner & Beane—The worst is over. The selling yesterday was panicky brought on by hysteria. General conditions are good. Our inquiries assure us that throughout the country business is sound.

E. H. H. Simmons, president of the New York Stock Exchange, refused in Honolulu yesterday to comment upon the market break when he was found by a representative of Dow, Jones & Co. He said he had been out of touch with the market for several weeks.

VAUCLAIN NOT DISTURBED.

Chicago Bankers Also See End of Declines in Markets.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 25 (AP).—Samuel M. Vauclain, chairman of the board of directors of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, speaking of yesterday's stock market activities, said today that business is good and there is plenty of money. Fundamentals are sound and trade is better than it has been for several years.

"When I speak of business," Mr. Vauclain said, "I mean business generally. Our own business is much better than last year.

"Too many have been trading in pyramided stocks on a margin, but people have plenty of money and are living well, better than ever before."

CHICAGO, Oct. 25 (AP).—George M. Reynolds, chairman of the executive committee of the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust Company, expressed the opinion today that the stock market situation had reached bottom and a turning point was due.

"Business is good and prosperity will continue," he said. "However, anything that causes many people to lose money affects business, but the effect, in my opinion, is only temporary."

Eugene M. Stevens, president of the Continental Illinois Bank, said: "There is nothing in the business situation to justify any nervousness."

CAUTION ADVISED BY STOCK BROKERS

Letters to Clients Warn Against Hysterical Selling and Favor Some Buying.

TONE IS OPTIMISTIC

Narrow Trading Is Predicted for a Time Till the Market Recuperates.

Cautioning against hysterical selling, brokerage houses in their market letters this morning will strike a note of optimism, advising the purchase of seasoned stocks at the present low levels. The public is strongly urged not to liquidate stocks in the present market.

A symposium of market letters sent to their customers by some of the large firms of the New York Stock Exchange follows:

Hornblower & Weeks—In today's short session the market should be a repetition of yesterday's trading on a diminishing scale of volume. We continue to note the investment possibilities of the leading issues and feel that long-pull commitments made at current prices will yield handsome returns. However, the market will require a period for recuperation and today's will probably be a forerunner of the narrow trading ranges that we expect next week.

F. B. Keech & Co.—Very fortunately for the public, the banking position is uncommonly strong, and through the united efforts of our leading bankers we have every confidence in looking forward to a stabilization of the speculative situation until a more accurate estimate can be made of the intrinsic values.

J. S. Bache & Co.—A semi-investment-buying demand yesterday approximately offset the adverse effects of forced liquidation and the disposal of a portion of the support stock purchased during the preceding session.

Merrill, Lynch & Co.—Two of the city's largest banks advised us that at no time in recent history had so many odd-lot orders for good stock been received by them as this morning. We interpret this as convincing evidence that prices have been driven too far. Likewise we see in it a hint that the public appetite for stocks is still alive.

Jackson Brothers, Boesel & Co.—It is expecting too much to assume that the stock market will immediately proceed to climb rapidly upward. On the contrary, we expect greater selectivity than has prevailed for the last four years.

Logan & Bryan—We have reasons to believe that banking support will be tendered the market in an orderly way, and that the worst, as a general proposition as far as the down turn is concerned, has been experienced.

E. F. Hutton & Co.—The action of the market yesterday was reassuring and encouraging. The fact that a great volume of stocks was sold while prices remained comparatively steady was an indication of the sort of support the market will receive and the confidence of the important interests generally in business conditions and in the value of American securities.

Clark, Childs & Co.—To say the worst is over is simply to rely on the ability and resources of the banking authorities who came to the market's aid in its most serious hour and to further rely on the victory of common sense over hysteria.

Wade Brothers & Co.—A market which has experienced the heavy liquidation and decline which the present one has, cannot recover itself immediately, and a highly irregular market must therefore be expected, with sharp rallies and recessions in various securities.

Goodbody & Co.—We feel that fundamentally Wall Street is sound, and that for people who can afford to pay for them outright good stocks are cheap at these prices.

Collins, Hall & Peckman—We think stocks are too low now, just as they were too high six weeks ago.

E. A. Pearce & Co.—Buying of sound seasoned issues now will not be regretted.

Morrison & Townsend—A technical rally has started and will continue, yet greatest discrimination should be used in buying stocks.

Chisholm & Chapman—Profits of a few points are ample compensation in a market of this character, for we cannot be convinced yet that we may not have further trying days, although we do not expect quotations to reach their low points of Thursday for some little time.

WHEAT SALES SET RECORD.

156,186,000 Bushels Were Traded in Thursday in Chicago.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 25.—Wheat sales on the Board of Trade during yesterday's turbulent market set a new record with an aggregate of 156,186,000 bushels, compared with a previous record of 149,567,000 bushels on July 15, this year, as given by L. A. Fitz of the Grain Futures Administration. Taking all grains, however, the sales of 190,336,000 bushels were considerably under the high mark owing to the light business in other grains, which were: Corn, 22,-900,000 bushels; oats, 7,588,000 bushels, and rye, 3,583,000 bushels.

The open interest in wheat was cut down 6,000,000 bushels yesterday, and at the close was 235,392,000 bushels. There was a reduction of nearly 1,000,000 bushels in corn, more than 500,000 bushels in oats to 47,-472,000, and 200,000 bushels in rye to 21,648,000.

ONLY YAWNS RECALL BIG DAY IN WALL ST.

Activity in Exchange Returns to Normal, but Brokers Are Red-Eyed and Wan.

SIGHTSEERS FIND NO SIGHTS

Expect 400 Extra Police With Nothing to Do—Western Union Reports Cable Record Thursday.

Wall Street had its nerves completely under control yesterday and virtually the only reminder of the hectic session of the day before was in the yawns of brokers' clerks, who had worked all night getting tangled records into shape.

The floor of the Stock Exchange had regained its customary appearance and brokers took time out to chat in the lobbies or lean against the trading posts and look almost bored. The same men on Thursday had been fevered individuals scarcely knowing what they did. Yesterday they suggested veteran troops marching back to rest billets from the front lines.

Operators of sightseeing buses diverted some of their cars from regular routes to take crowds down to see the "excitement" in the financial district. The sightseers saw the outside of the exchange, of J. P. Morgan & Co.'s stately building and the usual crowds in the street, but they saw no excitement.

They probably were impressed with the number of policemen on duty. One of the first orders issued during the day by Police Commissioner Whalen was one sending 400 additional men into the district. This contingent supplemented the regular force of fifty patrolmen and sixty detectives. The commissioner also dispatched 100 extra detectives and a detail of mounted men.

He asked brokers to be careful in the selection of any help taken on for the emergency. He cautioned them to be sure to see that runners entrusted with securities were reliable, adding that he felt bond thieves might try to take advantage of the abnormal conditions.

When the Exchange opened at 10 o'clock some of the members showed signs of their experience. Many were red-eyed and sallow, having obtained as little sleep as had their office staffs. Brokers' offices were ablaze with light as late as 5 A. M. when the last of the Exchange records were compiled so that most employes slept from three to four hours. Firms had hired blocks of rooms in downtown hotels and in hotels in Brooklyn for their clerks.

While the stress of the day before was missing yesterday the amount of work for office staffs was greater than it would have been on an ordinary day. More than a million and a half of shares dealt in during the first half-hour yesterday gave the clerks no encouragement to take things easy.

Some idea of the enormous strain on telegraph wires was given in a statement issued by the Western Union, which said:

"All previous records in the history of the cable department of the Western Union Telegraph Company were shattered on Thursday when holders of stocks in every corner of the earth were in communication with New York. The volume of cable traffic for twenty-four hours climbed to a point 10 per cent higher than the previous record, established Oct. 4, when there was a heavy market.

"The telegraph department worked all of last night to handle the heavy volume of messages sent from a large portion of its 25,000 commercial offices throughout the country. Every available source of messenger and other service of the company has been utilized to meet the situation."

PUBLIC RETURNS TO STOCK MARKET

Odd-Lot Houses Report Small Purchases Outnumber Selling Orders—Speculators Cheerful.

Undismayed by Thursday's break in security prices, the investing and speculating public returned to the stock market in large numbers yesterday, according to representatives of odd-lot brokerage houses. Distress selling as the result of margin calls was practically completed during Thursday's drastic break, it was said, although a moderate amount of compulsory liquidation took place throughout yesterday's session.

One of the largest odd-lot houses reported that small purchases by the public were several times as numerous as selling orders yesterday. The restoration of confidence in the security markets was indicated by the fact that on Thursday the public had been a heavy seller on balance, whereas yesterday the public was a heavy buyer on balance.

Commission houses reported that many new accounts were opened yesterday, taking the places of those who had been weeded out on Thursday. It was impossible, of course, to determine how many of these were speculative accounts which were sold out by other brokerage houses and how many were new investors of the "bargain-hunting" variety. The size of the decline in stock market averages for the last week has resulted in a considerable decrease in the purchasing power of odd-lot traders, and this is expected to result in relatively dull markets for several weeks, according to brokers and financiers.

There was a distinctly cheerful air in most brokerage offices yesterday, which contrasted sharply with the grim demeanor of Thursday's speculators. Not all of the tenseness was gone, but as hour succeeded hour and security prices remained on an even keel, the spirits of small traders rose and the appearance of brokerage offices returned to normal.

Gains Shown in Philadelphia.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 25.—Although traders were in a highly nervous state as a result of yesterday's great selling movement on the stock market, buying orders in large numbers were received by local brokerage houses today and a majority of the issues on the Philadelphia Stock Exchange closed the day with gains. The utility group, which felt the full force of the decline, shared in the resultant upturn.

LONDON LOOKS FOR END OF DRAIN OF ITS FUNDS

Has Suffered for Two Years From Wave of American Speculation, One Newspaper Says.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—As Wall Street picked itself up from yesterday's crash, the first impulse in the British financial world was to rejoice that the long period of abnormal speculation had been ended. The last two years' boom conditions in Wall Street were likened today to a typhoon which created unnatural difficult currents of air, in which money markets were whirled over. No matter how Wall Street may rally, the City of London is convinced that inflated values will be succeeded by more reasonable prices and more stable conditions.

"Now that the long pent up storm has broken we may reasonably expect sunnier days," says The Evening Standard. There is no disposition to regard yesterday's events as a disaster. On the contrary, The Evening Standard remarks:

"The panic and crash were distinctly a result of specifically American conditions and American temperament. The moods of that people are apt to swing from one extreme to another."

London is convinced that American prosperity will continue and that values will remain unaffected. The Star tonight says:

"The severe shake-out has only taken the froth off values. The substance is sound.

"For its own sake, London is glad of what has happened, although it sympathizes with the thousands of small investors who have lost heavily. London has suffered for the last two years from the wave of American speculation which broke yesterday. Not only were investors drawn away from England but the incessant borrowing of New York drew British money across the Atlantic in a glittering stream. The bank rate here rose not once but twice in an effort to check the efflux of gold until leaders of British industry groaned under the burden of money at 6½ per cent. All this will be changed by the events in Wall Street yesterday, in the opinion of London's financial experts. According to the Weekly Statist:

"The indisputable facts in the situation are that the boom mentality is broken and that the liquidation now proceeding in New York must mark the beak of that phase of rising money rates throughout the world which began two years ago. The era of falling money rates has opened and conditions again have been established which are propitious to a resumption of the export of capital from the United States. The past two years have offered the world a painful but instructive example of the inability of a central banking system to deal rapidly and effectively with an unhealthy development in the domestic credit structure. It is to be hoped that this experience will not be wasted and that the world will not again be penalized as the result of a prolonged boom on the New York Stock Exchange."

Speaking at Hendon tonight, William Graham, president of the Board of Trade, predicted that beneficial results to England might come from the Wall Street crash. "It may be it will lead to easier conditions and lowering of the bank rate in this country," he said.

GLASS TO PUSH BILL TO TAX STOCK SALES

Will Urge 5% Levy on 60-Day Transfers as Rider to Tariff Measure.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Senator Glass of Virginia said today that he would offer his bill assessing a 5 per cent tax on stock transfers made within sixty days, as a "rider" to the pending tariff bill. He has been sounding sentiment on the proposal for some time, and now finds, he said, that several Senators who originally opposed such a tax are willing to accept it as a remedy to curb stock speculation.

The tax of 5 per cent would be imposed on the value of the stock transferred. It is estimated it would be a large revenue producer when stock transfers are as heavy as at the present. Those who oppose the tax say that it would place a too heavy burden on stock transfers.

Senator Glass began his agitation for such a tax early last Summer, but it did not commend itself to the Senate. He now feels that the stock market has presented a situation where the Senate must consider his proposal.

In the Senate today Senator King questioned Senator Norbeck, chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee, as to action on his resolution for an investigation into the Federal Reserve System.

Senator Norbeck replied that, in his opinion, the committee would not consider the inquiry until the regular session unless an emergency should arise.

It seems doubtful that the Banking and Currency Committee will consent to an investigation into the Federal Reserve System in the regular session, as a majority of its members feel that an investigation would not produce anything new that would be of value to those who wish to strengthen the banking laws.

REALTY MAN MISSING AFTER STOCK CRASH

Wife Says Germansky Was Seen Last Near Exchange Tearing Ticker Tape to Bits.

Bernard H. Sandler, attorney, of 225 Broadway, was asked yesterday morning by Mrs. Abraham Germansky of Mount Vernon to help find her husband, missing since Thursday morning. Germansky, who is 50 years old and an east side real estate operator, was said by Sandler to be known as a millionaire and to have invested heavily in stocks.

Sandler said he was told by Mrs. Germansky that a friend saw her husband late Thursday on Wall Street near the Stock Exchange. According to her informant, her husband was tearing strip of ticker tape into bits and scattering it on the sidewalk as he walked toward Broadway.

Germansky also was reported missing through the Mount Vernon police, who gave his address as 40 Birch Street and said he had been missing since 10 A. M. Wednesday. At his office, 140 East Broadway, his partner, Joseph Jacobs, said that Germansky had never gambled in stocks and was not a millionaire.

Jerome Germansky, 17, son of the missing man, also ridiculed reports that the Wall Street break on Thursday had anything to do with his father's absence. He said his father had left home Wednesday morning and had last been seen at noon that day at the office of his lawyer, Max Silverstein, 309 Broadway.

SCHWAB OPTIMISTIC ON BUSINESS FUTURE

He Tells Steel Men at Meeting That Industry Is Stable and Prospect Never Brighter.

SEES PROSPERITY FIRM

Points to Record Year in His Field and to the Wider Use of the Products.

FARRELL BACKS HIS VIEWS

Deplores Pessimism in Some Quarters—Other Steel Leaders Look for Sustained Activity.

Despite record-breaking slumps in the stock market a strong note of optimism over the present condition and outlook of American industry was sounded by the country's iron and steel manufacturers yesterday at the thirty-sixth general meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute at the Hotel Commodore.

In his address as president of the institute, Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, asserted that the steel industry, in the many years of his association with it, had never enjoyed "greater stability or a more promising outlook, as it approached the end of a record year."

James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel Corporation, asserted that the present demand would have meant operations at around 110 per cent of capacity a year ago and that the country's fabrication shops were booked with business four to six months ahead.

Equally optimistic reports on the steel industry were brought to the American Iron and Steel Institute by other leading executives in the industry, including the following:

WILLIS L. KING, vice president of the Jones and Laughlin Steel Company.

JOHN A. TOPPING, chairman of the Republic Iron and Steel Company.

LEE BLOCK, chairman of the Inland Steel Company.

JAMES A. CAMPBELL, president of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company.

Sees Indefinite Prosperity.

"If the equilibrium between production and consumption is maintained, there is no reason, in my opinion, why our present prosperity should not continue indefinitely," said Mr. Schwab.

"In my long association with the steel industry I have never known it to enjoy a greater stability or more promising outlook than it does today. We are approaching the close of the best year the industry has ever experienced. It is estimated that the steel production for 1929 will exceed 57,000,000 tons. This is 10 per cent greater than it was in 1928, the best previous year. This high production establishes an important landmark, but it is by no means the most important or most significant aspect of the year in steel.

"Greater output, of course, is gratifying to every steel man. As I view the industry, however, its most fundamental progress has been made this year in the degree of stability and balance which is now the outstanding characteristics of our business.

"This fundamentally sound condition is largely responsible for the uniform prosperity which has been shared by all branches and all companies in the industry. It is significant that the industry's favorable showing has not been due to higher prices; our improved earnings are due to three factors: greater demand for steel, enlarged output and lower costs.

"There has been some slight increase in prices, but on the whole prices have been largely stabilized and held on an even keel. Here certainly is concrete evidence that when the whole steel industry within itself practices sound business principles, the resulting benefits are shared by every element in it.

Benefits of Stability.

"Steel consumers as well as producers have benefited from this stability because it has enabled them to operate their business on a firm non-speculative basis. Throughout the year sound buying methods have prevailed. Steel has been purchased for current consumption. No big inventories have been built up. At the moment there is a slight let-up in demand, but we are in this fortunate position, that because prices are stabilized and contain no element of inflation there is no reason to give ground on prices whatever slight but inevitable fluctuations may occur in demand. In other words, it would be unfortunate if we were to let such fluctuations disturb the healthy balance which has been established.

"Stability is the order of the day in every industry. Moreover, it is quite as ethical and necessary for the steel industry to think in terms of stabilized profits as it is to strive for stability in other respects. It is high time we scrapped the idea that the steel business must be either a prince or a pauper."

Mr. Schwab maintained that price stability was even more beneficial in periods of lessened demand than in periods of greater demand. He suggested that the steel industry should be mindful of costs in order to make its efforts "permanently effective." He held that it would "forestall an unsound price structure."

"Competitive prices," he continued, "fail to yield proper return because they do not give adequate consideration to costs. I cannot advocate too strongly, therefore, a consideration at this time of the advantages of uniform cost accounting principles applied to the steel industry."

Extension of Steel Uses.

Mr. Schwab pointed out that the accelerated consumption of steel was due, first, to extension and replacement of steel in the building trades, in the automobile industry, in the railroad field and in connection with highways, bridges, pipe lines and similar projects, and, second, to the growing demand for steel for new uses. He said the future of the steel industry was dependent upon the prosperity of the people generally, and in that connection he said it was gratifying to him that "labor generally is enjoying good wages."

"Labor as a whole is fully employed today," he asserted, adding that it was just as necessary to have stability in the labor structure as in every other phase of the steel industry.

"If the equilibrium between production and consumption is maintained," he continued, "there is no reason, in my opinion, why our present prosperity should not continue indefinitely. Fundamentally there is every reason why the use of steel will increase. The per capita consumption is growing rapidly. Steel is finding its way into many new fields, and through its adaptability, economy and its elemental security is supplying a service which no other metal can perform."

Farrell Deplores Pessimism.

"I think if we can follow the precepts laid down by Mr. Schwab in his address," said Mr. Farrell, "that we will have entered a new era in the steel business.

"There is a good deal of pessimism around at the present time. It affects some people more than others. I cannot see where it affects the steel business at the present time. With the exception of one or two of our commodities we are just as busy as we were. The prospects are just as good as they were, and I think that we are going to have a continuance of the present business. I think business is good when we can operate our plants at 75 or 80 per cent. A year ago with the capacity which existed at that time, we would be running about 110 per cent now.

"There are some lines of business which are even better than they were six months ago. I do not believe there is a fabrication plant in the country that has not booked business from four to six months ahead. The shipyards on the Atlantic Coast, and they are all large ones, have sufficient work at the present time for six months.

Mr. Farrell warned of the danger to the industry from unfair competition.

Views of Other Leaders.

Mr. King had this to say:

"The steel industry has had a very prosperous year with every prospect of a good demand for next year. Operations of Jones & Laughlin are better than 85 per cent of capacity and I believe it will be about the low point for the quarter."

Mr. Campbell said:

"Business is good. Shipments this month are larger than last month. Demand has been holding up better than I expected. Prices are not quite so strong. They have been tapering off in two or three items, but not seriously."

Mr. Topping asserted:

"Business is exceedingly good, considering the fact that we have had several years of excessive demand. I think that the present recession is a seasonal one, although somewhat belated. I see no reason why we should not look forward in the future to a normal demand."

Mr. Block declared:

"There was no seasonal recession in demand in July and August. This was deferred until September, but there has been an improvement in bookings in October."

Mr. Schwab introduced to the Iron and Steel Institute as one of the leading British steel manufacturers Sir Frederick Mills, president of the Ebb Vale Steel Company, who with Winston Churchill was a speaker at the institute's dinner last evening at the Hotel Commodore.

Reports on Steel Gains.

Addressing the institute's technical session in the afternoon, E. F. Kenny, metallurgical engineer of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, asserted that the per capita consumption of steel had increased more than 3,000 per cent from 1860 to 1900, and that steel products ranged all the way from steel wool used by the kitchen maid for scouring pots and pans to steel cables such as the four of the new Hudson River suspension bridge, with a strength to support 400,000 tons.

Mr. Kenny said the development of advanced types of locomotives, ships of the class of the German liner Bremen, developing a speed of thirty knots with engines of 130,000 horsepower, automobiles, airplanes and dirigibles, had "brought about greater strides in the production of high-quality steel in tonnage quantities than ever before was known."

"A British seaplane recently averaged 455.8 miles an hour." Mr. Kenny asserted. "This required engines not only of tremendous power but also of extremely light weight. To develop one horsepower for each pound and a half of engine weight means that every part is reduced to the lowest possible size, and that the steel composing these light high-speed rods and shafts must be not merely extremely strong, but must be perfect. Failure is fatal. No imperfections can be tolerated.

"For transoceanic travel it is proposed to construct huge floating caissons of steel which, anchored at convenient points at sea, will serve as landing, supply and shelter islands. These caissons, extending below a depth of wave movement and with decks above the reach of the waves, are expected to make the crossing of the ocean safe and certain."

AMITY WITH BRITAIN URGED BY CHURCHILL

At Steel Institute Dinner He Says World Depends on English-Speaking Accord.

2,000 GUESTS APPLAUD HIM

He Holds Real Test of Navy Compact Is Ability to End Discord—Dr. Sperry Winner of Award.

In a plea for mutual understanding between Great Britain and the United States Winston Churchill, former Chancellor of the Exchequer of Great Britain, told nearly 2,000 guests at a dinner of the Iron and Steel Institute in the Hotel Commodore last night that the rest of the world "is dependent almost entirely in the immediate future on the cooperation and development of the English-speaking countries."

Declaring that in his opinion the real test of any naval agreement will be its efficacy in sweeping away the sources of misunderstanding, the former Prime Minister said: "We have pledged our hands and hearts that Britain and the United States shall be for all time equal upon the seas, albeit strong."

"We don't want all the good people in the world to disarm while the bad ones remain heavily equipped for war," he continued. "You are the friends we would like to see most strongly armed. We welcome every growth and development of each arm of the American navy."

Armament is a problem of less concern to the iron and steel industry now than it was in years past, Mr. Churchill continued, after paying a tribute to Charles M. Schwab, J. Leonard Replogle and Bernard M. Baruch for the services they rendered during the war. Since the World War ended, the speaker said, the iron and steel industry has been so deeply engaged in the manufacture of peace-time machinery that armaments are to them no more important than to other industries.

"This is a time of pacific discussions," he continued. "There is a real desire among my countrymen in England for a settlement of this naval question with the United States, and I have good hope that a settlement will be reached, providing other complications do not arise."

An agreement on naval armament, however, he continued, will not be sufficient to wipe out all differences between the two countries. Only time and patience can do that, he said, adding:

"What is the use of speaking the same language if we do not disagree ever?"

What is needed, he went on, is sympathy and patience on both sides of the Atlantic. The people of the United States, he said, must try to understand the Englishman's view of the importance of his country's navy and merchant marine to the well-being of an insular people with far-flung dominions, dependencies and possessions. On the other hand, he said, the British people will do their utmost to "understand and agree with the American viewpoint."

Mr. Churchill, who interrupted his speech to join in the laughter which followed his inadvertent reference to the "forty-five States which make up your Union," sat down amid cheers and applause as the audience rose from their seats to honor him.

Mr. Schwab, who as toastmaster introduced the speaker as "a polished orator and distinguished statesman," then announced that Dr. Elmer Sperry had won the institute's award for the most distinguished paper read at its annual meeting of a year ago. As Dr. Sperry was on his way to Japan, Mr. Schwab said, the actual presentation of the award would be deferred until his return.

THE BAR ASSOCIATION MEDAL.

This gold medal, awarded for the first time by the annual meeting of the association, which closed at Memphis last night, went to Professor Samuel Williston of Harvard Law School for conspicuous service to jurisprudence. The committee of award were: Justice Sanford of the Federal Supreme Court, Charles E. Hughes, Frank B. Kellogg, Silas H. Strawn and George W. Wickersham.

On the obverse of the medal is a profile of Chief Justice Marshall, and in the background the words of John Adams, taken from the Massachusetts bill of rights, "To the end it may be a government of laws and not of men."

The reverse bears a figure of Justice with scales and sword.

TRADE LEVEL HIGH, OFFICIALS REPORT

Federal Summaries Show That Business Generally Is Better Than in 1928.

OPTIMISTIC AS TO FUTURE

Buying of Government Securities Up to $300,000,000 by Reserve System Is Suggested.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Government officials informally expressed today the opinion that the "worst was over" and said that a checking up by them indicated that business prospects had not been seriously damaged.

In one official quarter, in which the stock market reaction was pictured as having accomplished chiefly a much needed deflation of security values, the prediction was made that the huge total of brokers' loans would be liquidated gradually and that after the "turn of the year" the country would be on a permanent easy interest rate basis. It was suggested that if no further undue inflation of security values appeared, the Federal Reserve System might contribute to "easy money" by purchases of government securities in the open market up to a total of $300,000,000, thus releasing additional capital for commercial uses.

This official expressed the belief that business was in a much better position to shape its plans and go ahead, now that the threat of a smash in the stock market was no longer hanging over its head.

The Federal Reserve Board and the Department of Commerce made public today summaries of general financial and business conditions, to the effect that indices showed business at a higher level than at the comparable time last year. While these statements were made public as routine matters and not because of the break in the market values, they served to supplement the statement by President Hoover and other officials that while recessions were being experienced in some industries, the level as a whole was extremely high and indicated continued prosperity.

Production Above 1928 Level.

The Federal Reserve Board's summary of general business and financial conditions throughout the several Federal Reserve districts, based on securities for September and October and the monthly reports of the Federal Reserve Banks, read:

"Industrial activity increased less in September than is usual at this season. Production during the month continued above the level of a year ago, and for the third quarter of the year it was at a rate of approximately 10 per cent above 1928. There was a further decline in building contracts awarded. Bank loans increased between the middle of September and the middle of October, reflecting chiefly growth in loans on securities.

"Production—Output of iron and steel declined further in September, contrary to the seasonal tendency; there was a sharp decrease in output of automobiles and automobile tires, and a smaller-than-seasonal increase in activity in the textile and shoe industries, which continued to produce at a high rate in comparison with the preceding year. Meat-packing plants were more active than in August. Factories increased the number of their employes during September and payrolls were also slightly larger.

"Output of coal showed a substantial increase from August and the average daily production of copper mines was somewhat larger. Iron ore shipments declined seasonally, and petroleum output was reduced for the first time in several months.

Coal Output Higher.

"For the first of October reports indicate a further reduction in steel plant operations, a continued increase in production in bituminous coal, and some increase in petroleum output following a moderate decrease during September.

"Building contracts awarded in September declined seasonally from August and were substantially below the corresponding month in any year since 1924. For the third quarter the volume of contracts was 6 per cent less than a year ago. During the first three weeks of October, contracts continued substantially below the level of last year.

"October estimates by the Department of Agriculture indicate a cotton crop of 14,915,000 bales, 3 per cent larger than last year; a corn crop of 2,828,000 bushels, 11 per cent smaller than the crop of a year ago, and 8 per cent below the 5-year average; and a total wheat crop of 782,000,000 bushels, 12 per cent below last year, but only slightly under the 5-year average.

Retail Sales Increase.

"Distribution—Freight car loadings increased by slightly less than the usual seasonal amount in September, and continued to be larger than a year ago. In the first two weeks of October car loadings were smaller than in the corresponding week of 1928.

"Department store sales in leading cities increased seasonally during the month of September and were 2 per cent larger than a year ago. For the third quarter, as a whole, sales of the reporting stores exceeded those of the third quarter of last year by 3 per cent.

"Prices—Wholesale prices showed little change from August to September, according to the index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Prices of meats and livestock declined considerably, while prices of grains advanced. The prices of raw silk, cotton and cotton goods were higher in September, and the price of coal increased, while prices of iron and steel products, tin, gasoline and cement were lower. During the first three weeks of October prices declined for a considerable number of commodities, including wheat, flour, hides, steel, tin, cotton, silk and wool.

Bank Loans Slightly Higher.

"Bank Credit—Between the middle of September and the middle of October there was a slight increase in the volume of loans and investments of member banks in leading cities. The banks' loans on securities increased rapidly, while all other loans, including loans for commercial and agricultural purposes, declined somewhat after reaching a seasonal peak on Oct. 2. Security holdings of the reporting banks continued the decline, which has been almost uninterrupted for more than a year.

"At the Reserve Banks there was little change in the volume of credit outstanding during the four-week period ended Oct. 19. Further increase in the holdings of acceptances by the Federal Reserve Banks was accompanied by a decline in discounts for member banks, largely at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

"Open market rates on bankers' acceptances and on prime commercial paper were unchanged during the last half of September and the first three weeks of October. On Oct. 23 rates on bankers' acceptances declined by ½ per cent to a 5 per cent level for the principal maturities. Rates on demand and time loans on securities declined during the first half of October.

Commerce Survey Optimistic.

The Commerce Department's weekly survey said:

"Commercial transactions during the week ended Oct. 19, as indicated by the volume of checks presented to the banks for payment, were smaller than in the preceding week, but showed a gain over the corresponding period of 1928. The production of bituminous coal during the latest reported week showed gains over both the previous week and the same period a year ago. Steel plant activity was smaller than in either prior period, while crude petroleum production showed a substantial curtailment from the preceding week, but was still above the level of last year.

"The receipts of cotton into sight were larger than a year ago. Cattle receipts at the principal primary markets also registered a gain over the corresponding period of 1928. Hog receipts at primary markets were greater than in the same period a year ago. The movement of commodities by rail through primary channels, as indicated by data on freight car loadings covering the latest reported week, showed a slight decline from the same period of last year.

"The general index of wholesale prices showed a further fractional recession from the preceding week and was lower also than in the corresponding period of 1928. Iron and steel prices were lower than in the previous week but were higher than a year ago. Cotton prices showed declines from both periods. Bank loans and discounts showed expansion, as compared with both the previous week and the corresponding period of last year. Interest rates on time funds averaged lower than in the preceding week but were higher than a year ago; call money rates were higher than in the previous week but lower than last year. Prices for stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange declined from the preceding week but were still well above a year ago, as reflected by the general index. Bond prices averaged higher than in the previous week but were still below the level which prevailed in the corresponding period of last year."

Weekly Business Indicators.

The weekly business indicators for the weeks ended Oct. 19 and 12, 1929, compared with the week ended Oct. 20, 1928, and with the 1923-25 average of 100 were given as:

AUTO MEN EXPECT SLIGHT DIP IN SALES

But Consensus Is That Stock Reaction Will Not Affect Business in Long Run.

While none would be quoted, officials of several automobile companies manufacturing high-priced cars agreed yesterday that the violent declines in stocks during the past week would have a decided effect on the retail sales of their products.

One automobile man having charge of sales and promotion in one of the larger companies declared that his concern already had two cancellations of orders and would probably receive more in the next few days. Other believed that cancellations would come, although it was yet too early to ascertain the extent of such withdrawals.

The advertising manager of another company asserted that much greater than the number of cancellations would be the number of "postponements." He said that, just as industries often postponed expansion and other plans in times of depression, the prospective buyer of cars in the higher-price field also delayed his purchase until better times. This manager expressed the opinion that such purchases would probably be made late in the Winter or early next Spring. He emphasized that postponements now did not necessarily mean abandonment of plans to purchase or inability to do so.

In automobile circles the view prevailed that the stock market reaction would not affect car sales in the long run.

"Matters even up," it was said at the office of one large company. "Just as sales drop when the stock market—or business in general—declines, so orders increase when the reverse is true. Every car manufacturer and dealer is watching his business closely and there is no reason to worry. The industry is on too sound a basis to suffer much from any temporary setback."

MITCHELL PLEDGES FIRMNESS ON TRUSTS

Attorney General Tells Bar Association He Will War on Law Violations.

VIEWS DRY ENFORCEMENT

He Says Better Methods Must Await Department Changes—Lawyers Elect Sims.

Special to The New York Times.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 25.—Declaring the intention of the Department of Justice to deal "vigorously with every violation of the anti-trust laws," Attorney General Mitchell, addressing the annual banquet of the American Bar Association here tonight, discussed the problems that have come with the rise of the chain store, trade associations and other extensive mercantile and manufacturing combinations.

"I have received no intimation from any source that the anti-trust laws were to be neglected or that violations of those laws were not to be prosecuted with vigor and determination," he said.

"There have been many changes in economic conditions since these statutes were passed and much discussion has arisen as to whether some modification of them is desired to meet modern business condition.

"The anti-trust laws are founded on the proposition that avenues of industrial opportunity must be kept open as far as possible to the initiative of the individual citizen. The alternative is bureaucratic regulation. That is not an attractive alternative.

Expresses Faith in Courts.

"Changes in business conditions and methods of marketing, vertical trusts, chain stores and other modern developments have come thick and fast, and have been somewhat confusing to those dealing with the anti-trust laws, but I have no doubt that the principles contained in these statutes will be intelligently applied by the courts to the modern conditions.

Such immediate steps to improve prohibition enforcement as could be taken at once have been taken, the speaker declared. Improvements have been made in the personnel of Federal District Attorneys and plans have been made for increase in the numbers and standards of pay of employes in United States Attorneys' offices and in court clerks, to expedite the trial of pending cases, Mr. Mitchell said.

"Conservative estimates for these purposes have been submitted to the Bureau of the Budget and approved by the President and we shall ask Congress to make the necessary appropriation for the next fiscal year," he said.

The first important step toward a solution of problems of law enforcement was the appointment of a national commission "to study conditions affecting our judicial system and law enforcement," Mr. Mitchell asserted. But the findings of this body will not be known for some time. So, too, with the proposal to transfer the prohibition unit from the Treasury Department to the Department of Justice. That cannot be done immediately because of the necessity for Congressional action.

Bills Up in December.

"No legislation on this subject could be asked or expected during the extra session. It must await the regular session commencing in December, but when that session opens it will have before it bills the purpose of which is to transfer the detective agencies dealing with prohibition cases to the Department of Justice, so that there may be in the Department of Justice a bureau of investigation for detecting offenses against the national prohibition act, just as we now have another bureau whose business it is to detect offenses against certain other acts of Congress."

Although Congress must determine such matters, Mr. Mitchell said, he believed "there is no disposition to transfer the administrative matters or the supervision of permits" to his department.

Mr. Mitchell described prison improvement as another important problem of the department. An extensive program has been formulated and awaits the approval of Congress, he said.

Turning to the anti-trust laws, Mr. Mitchell said the country's prosperity and business expansion seem to have led to a disposition, in some cases, "to go too far and transgress the law." In the eight months he has been head of the Department of Justice, the speaker said, he has not "felt justified in declaring that the department sees no objection to the transaction" in connection with a single proposed merger that has been submitted for his consideration.

In this connection, Attorney General Mitchell revealed a change in policy by his department in replying to inquirers. Pointing out that the Department of Justice, under the last administration, followed the practice of indicating its views in "carefully guarded terms" regarding proposed mergers and business transactions presented to it by interested parties, Mr. Mitchell said this custom often led to misconstruction and misinterpretation, and that his policy would be to state the department's attitude clearly to inquiries about proposed mergers.

Sims Is Elected President.

Henry Upson Sims of Birmingham, Ala., was elected president of the American Bar Association in the concluding session of the convention today. Mr. Sims succeeds Gurney E. Newlin of Los Angeles.

Mr. Sims's first message as president declared that "every one of our nearly 30,000 members must realize his responsibility and strive to uphold the dignity of our profession."

John Veorhees of Sioux Falls, S. D., and William P. MacCracken Jr. of Chicago were re-elected treasurer and secretary, respectively.

Judge Orie L. Phillips of the United States Court of Appeals, New Mexico; C. E. Martin, Martinsburg, W. Va., and William B. Greenough of Providence, R. I., were added to the executive committee.

In one of its final business sessions the association adopted a supplemental report of the committee on aeronautical law advocating a uniform State aeronautical code embracing regulatory and non-regulatory matters.

Former Governor Whitman of New York presided at the closing session, which expressed approval of the World Court.

Upheld lawyers are responsible for the relatively large amount of unethical practice in the law profession, and a selective method of appointment to the bar is the solution for elimination of the vice, said former Senator Pepper of Pennsylvania in an interview.

Lack of cultural background is the prime cause for the non-ethical actions by attorneys, he asserted.

"Most of the trouble arises in the metropolitan centres and are concerned principally with divorce and bankrupt cases," Mr. Pepper said. "Trusteeship implies a background and moral palate that can distinguish the finer shades of right and wrong.

"A selective plan as practiced by the Philadelphia Bar Association will solve the problem. There is mass production today in lawyers just as in automobiles. This is the solution to mass production. It needs the support of the courts, especially the State Supreme Court. The applicants need not be saints, but they can be gentlemen in the sense of fundamental decency."

Registration of 2,186 at the Memphis convention of the bar association set a new record.

Samuel Williston Gets Medal.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 25 (AP).—Samuel Williston, for forty years Professor of Law of Harvard University, received the American Bar Association medal for conspicuous service rendered in jurisprudence for the year. The medal was awarded Mr. Williston for "monumental work in restating law contracts."

Of all the reports the bar association received, the one on radio law was the most far-reaching and the one on law reform the most debated.

The committee on radio law was instructed to take steps it considered necessary to bring about repeal of the sons syster and anti-monopoly provisions of the radio act of 1927, and to oppose enactment of any measure having for its purpose the establishment of a Federal commission on communications, or any bill declaring broadcasting stations common carriers.

William Draper Lewis, dean of the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania, triumphed over considerable opposition when the association reaffirmed its recommendation that two years' work in an accredited law school be made a prerequisite to bar admittance.

The 1930 convention city will be selected by the executive committee later.

ROOSEVELT CRITICIZES 'FEVER OF SPECULATION'

In Poughkeepsie Talk He Assails Efforts in Market to Get 'Something for Nothing.'

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Oct. 25 (AP).—Governor Roosevelt, addressing a churchmen's club here tonight, referred to Thursday's stock market debacle in admonishing his audience that "it is not good for any one to go too far on the theory of getting something for nothing."

"Much of the activity of the stock market is legitimate and proper," the Governor said, "but in some cases improper schemes and questionable methods have been used in stock promotion and many investors have lost sight of the real purpose of the Exchange in a fever of old-fashioned speculation."

Touching on law enforcement in general and the Volstead act in particular, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"People say we ought to live up to law. Then we say: 'Oh, well why live up to that particular law?' We allow ourselves the privilege of breaking one law because it is the fashion to break others."

The Governor expressed his belief that business and political morality was improving.

fail to support some of the Republican Progressive Senators was lent by the tone of some of the speeches at the dinner. Senator Moses, Senator James E. Watson of Indiana, Republican leader of the Senate, and James Francis Burke, counselor of the national committee and reputed to be close to President Hoover, each was said to have criticized the members of the Senate Progressive group severely.

There was quite a bit of conversation regarding the chances of holding some of the Republican seats in the East at next year's election, and a general agreement that the Senate elections in Massachusetts and New Jersey could not be regarded as certain from the Republican viewpoint.

In Massachusetts, Senator Frederick H. Gillett will come up for re-election next year. Massachusetts, which Governor Smith carried for President last year and which Senator David I. Walsh also carried, has developed a disconcerting habit of going Democratic in recent years, one of those present pointed out.

In New Jersey there will be elected a successor to Senator Walter E. Edge, who has been appointed Ambassador to France. His immediate successor upon his resignation will be appointed by Governor Larson of New Jersey, but this appointment will be only temporary and the vacancy will be filled at next year's election.

Former Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen and Representative Franklin W. Fort, both of whom are believed to be candidates for appointment as Senator, were at the dinner. Former Governor Edward C. Stokes also is understood to be a candidate for the appointment and there has been a suggestion that Governor Larson might appoint him and that Mr. Stokes might not be a candidate for the nomination and election next year. A primary contest for the nomination is expected, however, and, despite the large Republican plurality obtained in the Presidential election, the Republicans expect to have difficulty in electing a Senator next year.

Republican Senators of the so-called progressive or insurgent group whose terms will expire on March 3, 1931, who will come up for re-election next year are:

William E. Borah of Idaho, W. H. McMaster of South Dakota, George W. Norris of Nebraska, W. B. Pine of Oklahoma and Thomas D. Schall of Minnesota.

The status of these Senators is regarded as fixed by conservative Republicans by their vote for the farm debenture rider of the tariff bill, which passed the Senate by a vote of 42 to 34 by an alliance of the Progressive Republicans and the Democrats.

The other Republican Senators whose terms will expire in 1931 and will come up for re-election next year are:

Arthur Capper of Kansas, James Couzens of Michigan, Charles S. Deneen of Illinois, Guy D. Goff of West Virginia, Arthur R. Gould of Maine, Henry W. Keyes of New Hampshire, Daniel O. Hastings of Delaware, Charles L. McNary of Oregon, Jesse H. Metcalf of Rhode Island, Lawrence C. Phipps of Colorado, Frederic M. Sackett of Kentucky and Francis E. Warren of Wyoming.

Democratic Senators whose terms will expire are Coleman L. Blease of South Carolina, Sam G. Bratton of New Mexico, Carter Glass of Virginia, William J. Harris of Georgia, Pat Harrison of Mississippi, Thomas J. Heflin of Alabama, Joseph E. Ransdell of Louisiana, Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, Morris Sheppard of Texas, Furnifold M. Simmons of North Carolina, Daniel F. Steck of Iowa, W. H. Brock of Tennessee, and Thomas J. Walsh of Montana.

With the terms of nineteen Republican Senators and thirteen Democratic Senators expiring and with the Democrats likely to hold all their seats except that of Senator Steck of Iowa, those in charge of the Republican Senatorial campaign were said to believe that they were facing a hard fight to get a conservative Republican majority.

Although the Milbank dinner was said by the host to have no political significance and every effort was made to have what was said there kept secret, some of the details leaked out during the day. More than ordinary political significance was lent by the presence of Vice President Charles Curtis, for many years a Senator from Kansas and formerly Republican leader of the Senate and chairman of the Senatorial Campaign Committee, four Cabinet officers, Secretary of War James W. Good, Postmaster General Walter F. Brown, Secretary of Commerce Robert Patterson Lamont and Secretary of the Interior Arthur M. Hyde and Lawrence R. Richey and Walter H. Newton, secretaries to President Hoover. The guests also included many of the most prominent bankers and business men in New York City.

FOOD CONCERNS IN $125,000,000 DEAL

Mr. Hershey evolved a system of dealing with his employes that has kept the plant free of industrial disturbances and strikes. A part of the earnings of the company was distributed to the workers in the form of a bonus in addition to the wages and salaries. Frequently this extra disbursement amounted to one-quarter of the earnings of the company.

A large block of the stock of the Hershey company is reported to have been purchased from the orphanage by National City Company interests. Confirmation of this transaction, however, has not been obtained.

The Kraft-Phenix Cheese Corporation is controlled by Selected Industries and other holding companies and investment trusts affiliated with Charles D. Barney & Co. and R. S. and C. K. Reynolds. Kraft-Phenix had total assets of more than $38,000,000 at the end of 1928.

The Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Company was formed in 1928, when Colgate & Co. merged with the Palmolive-Peet Company, to form one of the largest soap and perfume companies in the United States. Colgate & Co. was founded in 1806. The Palmolive-Peet Company was the result of a merger of the Palmolive Company, founded in 1864, and the Peet Brothers Company, founded in 1872. Large manufacturing units are located in Jersey City, Milwaukee, Chicago, Jeffersonville, Ind.; Kansas City, Kan.; Berkeley, Cal., and Portland, Ore., as well as in many countries abroad. The total assets of the company at the end of last year were more than $62,000,000. Charles S. Pearce is president of the company and Sidney M. Colgate is chairman of the board.

All of the companies which are involved in the merger have been connected with other consolidation rumors earlier this year. In September it was reported that Kraft-Phenix had been acquired by Standard Brands, but this was denied.

LA GUARDIA ATTACKS NEW TRAFFIC PLAN

Sees Day & Zimmerman Report as Scheme to Deliver Streets to Utility Companies.

ASSERTS CITY LACKS FUNDS

Wants to Know How $1,000,000,000 Can Be Obtained to Carry Out Relief Proposals.

The $1,000,000,000 plan for traffic relief just received by the Board of Estimate from Day & Zimmerman, Philadelphia traffic engineers, represents either a useless paper plan which the city has no funds to place in effect or else a scheme to deliver the thoroughfares of the city into the hands of public utility companies, Fiorello H. La Guardia, Republican-Fusion candidate for Mayor, charged yesterday:

His accusations were made in a talk before the City Club at a luncheon at 55 West Forty-fourth Street and in a statement to the press. Mr. La Guardia told the City Club that the city's bonded indebtedness now amounts to $750,000,000 and added that the city had committed itself to an indebtedness of about $400,000,000 or $500,000,000 more.

"Where are the funds coming from for this proposed traffic plan?" Any person can think up fine measures for traffic relief and it doesn't require a great deal of ability to draw maps showing those plans. But to place the schemes into effect is another matter.

"The city of New York is in a serious financial condition. Real difficulties lie ahead if the next City Administration tries to go on spending as the last one has done. The next administration must take positive steps to work out a sound financial policy for the city and that is what I intend to do.

"It is all very well to bring out a traffic relief plan on paper in October before election. But what does the present administration plan to do with it? Place it in a drawer after election to bring out again in a slightly different form four years hence?"

Criticizes Utilities Connections.

In his statement to the press, he asked: "Are the improvements in the Day & Zimmerman plan to be turned over to a combination which controls the United Gas Improvement Company of Philadelphia, the Pennsylvania Railroad and the Interborough Rapid Transit Company? Is a new concession to be given them to charge tolls and have New York City traffic and the very commercial and civic life of New York City at their mercy?"

John Edward Zimmerman of the firm of Day & Zimmerman, he pointed out, is a director of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, while Charles Day is a director of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and the United Gas Improvement Company of Philadelphia.

Their firm was chosen to draw the traffic relief plan, he charged, not "to avoid local pressure" but "to carry out the wishes of certain local interests who have a great deal at stake in the final development of New York City."

"It would seem that local pressure was not necessary when the special local interests had their own men map out the plan and pick out of all of the plans heretofore submitted just what best suited their convenience and interests," he continued.

"The Tammany Administration should now announce specifically how the plan is to be financed, how it is to be paid, what tolls are to be paid by the public. Also the administration should explain how local pressure was avoided by turning the plan for traffic relief over to the directors of the Interborough and the Pennsylvania Railroad."

Pledges City Reorganization.

Mr. La Guardia in his talk before the City Club renewed his pledge for a complete reorganization of the City Government. He asserted that the existence of five different counties in the city was responsible for much duplication in government.

Harold G. Aron, Republican-Fusion candidate for Controller, who spoke at the same meeting, charged that Mayor Walker had said recently that his administration was not seeking petty graft, because there existed "a large plum to be plucked." That "plum" was transit unification and a contract for a city-wide bus system, he added.

The profit to be had in buses, he said, is shown by the record of the Eastern Parkway, Brownsville and East New York Transit Relief Committee, which, he said, returned dividends of 175, 400 and 275 per cent on its single line in 1927, 1927 and 1928.

Bird S. Coler, Republican-Fusion candidate for Aldermanic President, also spoke at the luncheon.

FUSION RECEPTION TONIGHT.

Candidates Will Speak at Meeting Arranged by Women.

Representative Ruth Pratt will preside tonight at a reception to the Republican-Fusion ticket candidates to be given by the Republican organization of the Fifteenth Assembly District at the Hotel Dorset, 34 West Fifty-fourth Street.

Fiorello H. La Guardia, candidate for Mayor, will be the chief speaker. Others will be Frederic R. Coudert Jr., candidate for New York County District Attorney; Harold G. Aron, candidate for Controller; Bird S. Coler, candidate for Aldermanic President; Dr. Israel Feinberg, candidate for Sheriff; Mrs. Grace Davis Vanamee, candidate for New York County Register; Abbot Low Moffat, Assembly candidate; Joseph Clark Baldwin 2d, candidate for Alderman, and Keyes Winter, La Guardia campaign manager and leader of the district.

Mrs. George M. Wilde is chairman of the reception committee.

COPELAND AIDS WALKER.

Senator in First Speech of Campaign, Lauds Public Health Work.

United States Senator Royal S. Copeland made his entrance into the Mayoralty campaign last night with an address at a Democratic rally in Public School 27, at 206 East Forty-second Street, in which he pleaded for the election of the Democratic ticket "from top to bottom."

Affirming his joy at "being back where people are honest," Senator Copeland said that he has been spending the last few weeks down where "the Republican vultures are trying to raise the tariff rates." Taking as his theme the safeguarding of public health, he praised the Walker administration's efforts in behalf of pure milk and water supplies, better hospital facilities, and old age pensions. He declared that "the Republican party exists to protect property, the Democratic party to save humanity."

Today's Political Meetings.

The following are the more important political meetings today and tonight:

DEMOCRATIC—1 P. M., Mayor Walker and Aldermanic President McKee at campaign luncheon of the Women's Democratic Club at the Hotel Commodore; 9 P. M., Mayor Walker and Mr. McKee at Prospect Hall, 261 Prospect Avenue, Brooklyn; speeches to be broadcast over Station WOR from 9 to 11 P. M.

REPUBLICAN—F. H. La Guardia, candidate for Mayor, will speak at seven meetings in Manhattan: 8 P. M., at open-air meeting in Abingdon Square; 8:40 P. M., at Oak Street School, Oak and Oliver Streets, Italian meeting; 9:15 P. M., at Hotel Dorset, 34 West Fifty-fourth Street; 9:40 P. M., at Public School 87, 361 Amsterdam Avenue; at new Harlem Casino, 116th Street and Lenox Avenue; at Mother Zion Church, 137th Street near Seventh Avenue, negro meeting; at St. Luke's Hall, 135 West 130th Street, negro meeting.

SOCIALIST—12:30 P. M., Norman Thomas, candidate for Mayor, at meeting of League for Industrial Democracy, Hotel Woodstock, 127 West Forty-third Street; 8:30 P. M., Mr. Thomas and Charles Solomon at Public School 67, 179th Street and Mohegan Avenue, the Bronx; at Public School 8, Mosholu Parkway and Bainbridge Avenue, the Bronx; at Kessler's Casino, 632 Sutter Avenue, Brooklyn.

SQUARE DEAL PARTY—8 P. M., Richard E. Enright, candidate for Mayor, at mass meeting of the Dalton Brotherhood in Union Square.

ENRIGHT SAYS HIS AID TO COUDERT WAS ASKED

He Reveals Fox and "Others" Sought Square Deal Backing—Coudert Unaware of It.

Richard E. Enright, former Police Commissioner and Square Deal candidate for Mayor, revealed in an interview last night that his party's endorsement of Frederic R. Coudert Jr., Republican candidate for New York County District Attorney, was not volunteered freely, but was sought by Alan Fox, Mr. Coudert's campaign manager, and by "others" who were understood to be close friends of the Republican candidate.

Before the endorsement of Coudert, former Magistrate Frederic J. Groehl, now Republican candidate for General Sessions Judge to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of Francis X. Mancuso, was being considered by the Square Deal party as its candidate for District Attorney, Mr. Enright admitted.

Because, however, of Mr. Fox's urgings and "for political considerations" Judge Groehl was sidetracked and the endorsement of Coudert followed, Mr. Enright said. He indicated that the "political considerations" in question were votes and "lack of time" to decide definitely upon the party's own candidate for District Attorney.

The former Police Commissioner declined to reveal who the "other" friends of Mr. Coudert were whom, he admitted, approached him. He hastened to say, however, that Mr. Coudert himself does not know that his manager and friends sought the Square Deal endorsement, and Mr. Coudert said, at the time of receiving it, that he did not seek it and that it would make little difference in his campaign.

Mr. Enright denied emphatically he was disgruntled, as reported, that Mr. Coudert had failed to speak on the Square Deal platform, in view of Mr. Enright's pleas in support of the young candidate at the end of each of his radio addresses.

UNION FAVORS LA GUARDIA.

Railway and Steamship Clerks Wire Endorsement.

Timothy Healy, chairman of the La Guardia for Mayor labor committee, made public last night a telegram he had received from George M. Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Express and Station Employes, endorsing his labor record in Congress as well as his candidacy for Mayor. Mr. Healy said the brotherhood had a membership of 200,000.

"As the chief executive of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, I unhesitatingly endorse La Guardia's labor record in Congress and also this brotherhood heartily endorses him for the office of Mayor of New York," the telegram read in part.

In another telegram, from Minnesota, Paul Kvale, recently elected to succeed his father in Congress, following the latter's death, offered to campaign for Mr. La Guardia. He said his father had been a great friend and admirer of Mr. La Guardia, who through his active support had proved very helpful in Congress to the farmers' cooperative movement. Another endorsement from the far West came from Knud Wefald of Fargo, N. D., a former colleague of Mr. La Guardia in the House of Representatives. He wrote that with La Guardia elected Mayor the workers of the city would be greatly benefited through the improved marketing system he would be certain to usher in.

MRS. PRATT GETS PLAQUE.

Award for Her Civic Service Is Made at Town Hall Dinner.

Mrs. Ruth B. Pratt, member of Congress, received the bronze plaque, awarded to her by the Town Hall Club last May, at a dinner at the club last night. The plaque was awarded "for conspicuous civic service," and Mrs. Pratt was selected as the recipient from among a large field of candidates nominated by members of the club.

Francis H. Sisson made the presentation last night and also acted as toastmaster. The speakers, all of whom paid their compliments to Mrs. Pratt, included Frederic R. Coudert Jr., Republican-fusion candidate for District Attorney; Miss Amelia Earhart, transatlantic flier; Henry Morgenthau, Henry W. Taft and United States Attorney Charles H. Tuttle.

In accepting the plaque, Mrs. Pratt declared it was to her a tangible emblem of good-will.

LINKS TAMMANY TO ROTHSTEIN DEAL

La Guardia Charges Gambler Put Up 'Phantom Village' in Queens to Mulct City in Sale.

CALLS 48 HOUSES 'FLIMSY'

Asserts Trunk Sewer Was Laid to 130-Acre Swamp Tract Near Connolly Development.

Arnold Rothstein, the gambler, whose murder a year ago still remains unsolved, was presented last night by Fiorello H. La Guardia, Republican-fusion nominee for Mayor, in the new rôle of a real estate promoter on a large scale and the founder of a phantom village near Maspeth in Queens, located on waste and desolate swamp lands and composed of forty-eight flimsy six-family houses. These houses, he declared, were never intended for dwelling purposes, but erected solely to create fictitious values for mulcting the city when the land should be wanted for street openings and other public purposes.

According to Mr. La Guardia, the houses in Rothstein's village had been "secretly surveyed" by an expert who had pronounced every structural part of the houses in violation of building ordinances, while another builder had expressed amazement that "they were standing up at all." He said that if any plans had been filed at all, as the law requires, there could not have been the careful inspection demanded by law after construction began, the only inference being, Mr. La Guardia said, that there had been connivance by politicians and public officials in the project.

Says Sewers Were Laid.

Mr. La Guardia further advanced as evidence that the murdered gambler in his real estate venture had been closely associated with Tammany politicians and public officials, that while the land still was uninhabited and undeveloped the Board of Estimate had authorized the laying of an eight-foot sewer connecting up with the Rothstein realty holdings, which were close to a tract owned by former Borough President Maurice Connolly and other Queens politicians. According to Mr. La Guardia, it was the fact that there had been such political investments in adjoining land which led Rothstein to pick out this barren waste for his development. The candidate said that the gambler had first become interested in Queens real estate through former Borough President Joseph Cassidy, who has since died.

Mr. La Guardia spoke last night at nine meetings in Brooklyn and spoke during the day at the City Club, where a luncheon was given to the three city candidates on the Republican-Fusion ticket, and at a meeting of the Musical Mutual Protective Union at 210 East Eighty-sixth Street.

His Brooklyn meetings were at the Highland Park Branch of the Y. M. C. A., 520 Jamaica Avenue; Miller's Grand Assembly Hall, Grand and Havemeyer Streets; Knapp's Mansion, 554 Bedford Avenue; Italian Society Santa Marguerita, Hart Street and Central Avenue; Elks Club, 1,068 Fulton Street; Public School 35, Lewis Avenue and Decatur Street; Public School 73, Rockaway Avenue and McDougal Street; American Legion Building, Conklin Avenue and East Ninety-fourth Street; Public School 176, Sixty-ninth Street between Twelfth and Thirteenth Avenues.

In his speech Mr. La Guardia said that while Rothstein had been depicted by the police and the District Attorney as a common gambler and master of the underworld, they had purposely concealed their knowledge that he maintained close business relations with public officials high in the councils of Tammany. As a real estate promoter, Mr. La Guardia said, the murdered gambler was "doing business with the administration" and was closely associated in his ventures with prominent Tammany politicians and public officials.

His first real estate venture in Queens, Mr. La Guardia stated, was taking a mortgage on property belonging to Cassidy near Maspeth. Near by was land owned by Connolly and one of Connolly's associates in realty promotion, Daniel Shea, former postmaster of Jamaica. The Cassidy mortgage, Mr. La Guardia said, was held in the name of the Arnold Holding Company, which Rothstein controlled. He said it was the land holdings of Connolly and Shea that first had aroused the interest of the gambler.

Says Rothstein Had 130 Acres.

"At the time of his death," said Mr. La Guardia, "after purchases begun in 1918, his company owned about 130 acres, forty large or eighty normal city blocks, in close proximity to the Connolly and Cassidy estate holdings.

"Rothstein and Connolly were friends. It became their common interest to boom this property, which was mostly waste, desolate swampland. Improvements at public expense were considered and an eight-foot sewer projected. This is one of the famous Connolly-Phillips lock-joint sewers which caused their downfall. An eight-foot main line trunk sewer laid to waste uninhabited land could be useful for one purpose only, and that was to provide means of draining this swampland and boosting values at public expense."

La Guardia said the sewer project first was broached in 1923. It was adopted by the local board of public improvements of which Benjamin Marvin, now a City Magistrate, appointed by Mayor Walker, was chairman. Mr. Marvin also was Connolly's Superintendent of Public Works. The sewer plan was adopted, Major La Guardia said, although not one of the petitioners was along the line of the sewer.

The official report to the Board of Estimate, La Guardia said, was made in 1927 and attached to it was a report from the City Engineer that the sewer was "urgently needed." After formal approval of the sewer, the Rothstein company leased the property to the Queens County Fair-ground Association for a race track, airport, amusements, &c. The lease contained the notation, according to the candidate, that after recording it the lease was to be returned to Samuel J. Burden, then an Alderman and now Democratic candidate for Sheriff of Queens, who apparently had acted as broker in the transaction. The racetrack lease was cancelled last year, a month after Rothstein had been murdered.

Mr. La Guardia said that the sewer project occurred at a time when proceedings were about to begin for the city acquiring title to near-by land for the opening of Eliot, Penelope and Eightieth Streets, all of them involving acquisition by the city of considerable Rothstein property. Owing to the political downfall of Connolly, the candidate said, there had been delay and hearings on damage claims for streets to be opened through Rothstein land have only been advertised this month.

No Offer to Rent, He Says.

"A most casual inspection of these houses shows that they were never intended to be inhabited," says the candidate. "They were never offered for rent or for sale. They are not open to inspection, but are carefully guarded against public observation. Recent secret examination by experienced and disinterested builders showed that there is nothing so extraordinary in the City of New York. Their existence is unexplainable.

"The houses show that they were simply slapped together to create a basis for a fraudulent high award in condemnation of the claims of fully developed property. They could never have been intended or used for any other purpose. This was a well-thought-out scheme which could have been carried out only with the connivance of high Tammany officials and which was only frustrated by the downfall of the Borough President of Queens County and the murder of Rothstein."

Continuing, he says Tammany "cannot deny the conspiracy which resulted in the building of these forty-eight fake houses in violation of law and as part of a scheme to mulct the city of New York of huge amounts for condemnation," and goes on: "I invite the press of the city to go out and photograph these houses and to send their architects to inspect them."

"I call upon the District Attorney, who has denied that Rothstein had any political affiliations, to investigate further," says Mr. La Guardia in closing. "I call upon the proper officials to ascertain why the records of Queens County are confused and folders missing. I call upon public officials to explain the existence of these forty-eight buildings in violation of law. There is more to the Rothstein case than 'Who shot Rothstein?'"

COUDERT PROMISES TO END RACKETEERING

Declares He Will Go Before the Grand Jury Instead of Resorting to Open Hearings.

Only by invoking the secrecy of the grand jury proceeding, as contrasted with the present method of submitting the cases openly in the magistrates' courts, can the city be freed from the reign of terror exerted by the racketeer, according to Frederic R. Coudert Jr., Republican-Fusion-Square Deal nominee for District Attorney. Mr. Coudert in speeches last night declared that this city was in almost as bad a way when it came to racketeering gangs as was Chicago before the clean-up.

"Crime statistics show that the crime of racketeering has taken a firm foothold in this city and is spreading exactly in the way that led to the terrible conditions in Chicago," Mr. Coudert said. "Responsibility for the present wholly unrestrained reign of the racketeer rests squarely with the present District Attorney's office. His failure to act is the result of the alliance between politics and criminal prosecution. Is it conceivable that any Tammany District Attorney will be more active in this matter?

"Judge Crain, my Tammany opponent, has repudiated the Banton administration and he has repudiated Tammany Leader Curry, but has remained silent with regard to his official conduct in dealing with the racketeer. He is silent because he is hoping to ride into office with Tammany just as he has ridden along with Tammany for forty years."

He promised if elected to drive out the racketeer and the gangster.

"Under the present administration of the District Attorney's office," he said, "victims who want to testify against these criminal operators are forced to go into the magistrates' courts. This means full publicity. I will give such witnesses the protection of the grand jury, where their testimony will be secret. The racketeers and the gangsters will be robbed of their chance for murderous reprisals."

Berry Still Improves Steadily.

The condition of Controller Charles W. Berry, a patient since last Monday in the Le Roy Sanitarium at 40 East Sixty-first Street, suffering from internal hemorrhages caused by an ulcer of the stomach, was reported good yesterday. No operation is being considered at present. According to his physicians, the Controller has improved steadily since he was placed under treatment.

such as divisional responsibility for eight school districts, by-law committee, salaries committee, &c.

"Dr. Shallow has one assistant for his work on buildings, with one stenographer for his many assignments. The work of preparing building plans and specifications and the supervision of construction is done by the superintendent of buildings, William H. Gompert.

"Mr. Gompert has a staff of 581, including two associate architects, for work on new buildings, and five borough heads, all of whom are architects, for supervising maintenance work.

"Prior to his appointment, Mr. Gompert had little, if any, experience in school work, while of the associate architects, only one, C. E. Dobbin, has had experience in school work exceeding three years, which facts emphasize their right to assistance respecting the educational uses of school buildings.

Makes Three Criticisms.

Mr. Weeks then made three special criticisms of the work of the building bureau as follows:

"The defects in present plans and buildings are chiefly due to lack of adequate and positive information in the architect's office as to actual school needs.

"Except for elementary buildings there is a decided lack of accepted and proven standards for education requirements. In other words, at many points the architectural department is working blindly.

"Because of pressure to complete buildings, the chief concern of the building bureau is to complete the plans as quickly as possible. To this end almost anything that has Dr. Shallow's approval 'goes.'"

"This survey committee puts the responsibility for the correct planning of all educational details in all buildings directly up to Dr. Shallow's office. His office is not organized to give such service.

"The responsibility for satisfactory building begins and ends with the educational direction, because in reality it is the 'owner' of the buildings.

"The educational direction, if any one, should know exactly what is needed in the buildings. It tells the architect what it wants. If this information is deficient it is the fault of the educational direction.

"The necessary information should be passed to the architect in clear, concrete and complete form, preferably in the form of exact drawings. This Dr. Shallow's office does not attempt to do.

No Study of Needs.

"There is no systematic study of building needs. Occasional or sporadic attempts are made by Dr. Shallow to improve the building details, but there is little attempt to anticipate defects, and it is largely by accident or chance complaint that defects are made known.

"The most serious omission is the failure of the educational department to make a proper check of completed plans. At present each plan is checked by the Municipal Art Commission, the borough building bureaus, the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity. These outside departments take the time to examine each plan in minute detail to assure themselves that their particular requirements are complied with. The education direction, in effect the real owners of the buildings, and the most interested of all concerned, make no such check."

Mr. Weeks then proposed the building research service and detailed its organization and functions.

Under "Possible Next Steps by the Superintendent" Mr. Weeks listed four steps: Systematize the building program for quick reference; study each project on architect's drawing board; develop educational and building standards, and develop improved standard-type plan.

In releasing Mr. Weeks's study for publication, Mr. Thomas made the following comment:

"Today as in 1924 it is true that the Board of Education, which is the trustee for the city in the ownership of the public school buildings, makes no check-up. That is left to the Art Commission and the City Building Department, whose interests are only partial. It is still substantially true, as Mr. Weeks wrote, that 'there is no systematic study of building needs. No attempt is made to anticipate defects. No attempt is made to check the results obtained by present plans and standards.'

"One overworked school superintendent is the agent of the Board of Education in relation to the building program. In 1924 that man was Superintendent Shallow, who has since died. Today it is Mayor Walker's friend, Superintendent Boylan. His office is not equipped to deal with the stupendous task in hand. It does not—perhaps it cannot—correlate the best thought and experience of principals and teachers on the best type of school."

HINTS AT SOLUTIONS IN DEATH MYSTERIES

Enright Suggests Possible Link Between Pisano Gang and Marlow and D'Olier Cases.

TELLS OF DEBT TO UALE

Says "Little Augie" Tried to Collect $40,000 From Marlow for Racketeer, but It Was Refused.

Richard E. Enright, Square Deal party candidate for Mayor, hinted at a possible connection between operations of the gang headed by "Little Augie" Pisano in Brooklyn and the deaths of William D'Olier, Queens sewer contractor, and Frank Marlow, Broadway racketeer, last night in a campaign speech broadcast over WOR.

He declared it was an interesting coincidence that the bodies of both men were found beside cemeteries in Queens. Members of "Little Augie's" gang, which previously he had charged were protected by Brooklyn politicians, were retained at the rate of $150 a day to protect the "sewer grafters," the former Police Commissioner said. He declared also that Marlow owed Frankie Yale (or Uale) murdered Brooklyn racketeer, $40,000, which "Little Augie" tried to collect in behalf of Yale's friends, only to be told by Marlow that with the gang chief's death the debt died too.

"It is an interesting coincidence," continued Mr. Enright, "that on the night Marlow was lured to his death Angelo Yale, brother of the murdered gang leader, drove to 'Little Augie's' headquarters at Fourth Avenue and Union Street in his Lincoln sedan, in which rode four men beside himself.

"'Little Augie' came out of his speakeasy and entered Yale's car, while Yale got into 'Little Augie's' canary yellow roadster and trailed the sedan, for 'Little Augie' never goes on an important mission without having some one to trail his car for protection. About the time that Marlow was receiving the telephone call which summoned him from the restaurant where he was dining to his death, the canary yellow roadster was seen in the vicinity of the Pennsylvania Station.

"Later that night—the night Marlow was killed—the chauffeur of a yellow taxicab was driven off the road near the spot where later Marlow's body was found. The next day Angelo Yale and 'Little Augie' appeared in Buffalo."

Mr. Enright announced yesterday the second of his financial supporters. He named Dr. Robert Good, dental specialist, of 22 West Fifty-ninth Street, who contributed $1,000 and is expected to contribute $4,000 more.

The stock market crash has affected the generosity of Square Deal backers, Mr. Enright admitted. He described Dr. Good as a political independent, "possibly a Republican on principle." A place on the Square Deal ticket was not offered in return for his support, the candidate said.

"Tammany, through the Mayor's committee, seems to be taking some interest in the suppression of illicit drug traffic in this city," Mr. Enright said. "This is only a gesture. For the past four years they have done nothing about it and a fine organization I built up to handle this nefarious traffic while I was Police Commissioner was broken up soon after my administration was over.

"Arnold Rothstein had an interest in this nefarious business and the ramifications of it go deep into the Tammany Hall organization."

VASSAR WINS YALE DEBATE.

Denies "Emergence of Woman From Home Is Regrettable."

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Oct. 25.—By a vote of 2 to 1 Vassar College defeated Yale University here this afternoon in the annual debate between the two institutions. Vassar upheld the negative of the question: "Resolved, That the emergence of the woman from the home is one of the regrettable features of modern life."

The entire discussion was of light vein and drew ripples of laughter from a crowded auditorium. The judges were Dr. Herbert E. Mills, Professor Eloise Ellery and the audience, casting one vote.

TAXING OF BUSINESS PROPOSED BY ARON

He Says Fees Would Not Exceed Tribute Now Exacted by Tammany From Trade.

Harold G. Aron, Republican-Fusion nominee for Controller, in a speech last night at Public School 35, Lewis Avenue and Decatur Street, Brooklyn, said that, owing to extravagant campaign promises and unscientific financing, this city in the immediate future would be confronted with the necessity of finding new sources of revenue. He said that he favored a general license tax on business, which, he declared, would bring in sufficient money to maintain the Police and Fire Departments.

"I believe that the city of New York can afford to provide every improvement or service the public requires, if its finances are properly handled," Mr. Aron said. "I believe that the ignorant, unscientific and reckless way in which public needs are being promised and financed today can lead only to virtual receivership and reorganization. Little the public realizes the social and governmental questions involved in the simple matter of how New York shall pay for the things it needs and how it shall distribute the cost among its citizens."

Mr. Aron said that if elected Controller he would at once form a permanent Advisory Board on City Revenues.

"To one proposition I am prepared to commit myself," Mr. Aron said. "The privilege of carrying on business in the city of New York is commercially of great value and there is, in my opinion, a legitimate and proper place for the license fee as a source of municipal revenue, entirely consistent with the theory of taxation according to benefits received. The city of Birmingham has proved this with a balanced budget and resultant surplus.

"In New York City, with a population of 6,000,000, the city officially collects small license fees from only approximately fifty classes of business or occupations.

"Based upon the Birmingham experience, I should say the entire expense of the Police and Fire Departments of New York City could be comfortably met out of the income from license fees, which would be scarcely felt as a burden by the licensees.

"And there is this vital thing about these license fees as a source of revenue: If they ran into tens of millions, they would not exceed what big and little business of this city is paying directly and indirectly as tribute to Tammany Hall for the chance to do business without malicious molestation and departmental interference.

"I suppose Tammany Hall has never had a more profitable era than that which it has enjoyed since discovering that it could successfully levy on almost any business man or enterprise in the city."

345 Absentee Voters Get Ballots.

Ballots were mailed yesterday by Chief Clerk S. Howard Cohen of the Board of Elections to 345 absentee voters who expect to be out of the city on election day. These ballots must be voted and mailed back to reach the board's office in the Municipal Building not later than noon on Nov. 1. Mr. Cohen will speak over radio station WNYC each evening next week at 7:45 o'clock on the use of voting machines.

QUEENS DEMOCRATS SEEN AT ODDS AGAIN

Harvey Men Hail Reports That Connolly Endorsement of Ticket Caused Trouble.

FOWLER SAID TO BE OUT

Leaders Dissatisfied With Campaign Chief, It Is Alleged—Cox Pledges Road Improvements.

Considerable elation was expressed yesterday at the headquarters of Borough President George U. Harvey of Queens, Republican candidate for re-election, over reports of renewed dissension among the Democrats, which the Harvey supporters believe will injure the candidacy of County Clerk Edward W. Cox, Democratic nominee for Borough President.

These reports, said to have been brought in by Democrats who have access to the party headquarters in Long Island City but who sympathize with Mr. Harvey, declare that the publication of an endorsement of the Queens Democratic ticket by former Borough President Maurice E. Connolly has caused trouble. Another report is that some of the Democratic leaders were dissatisfied with the work of Stanley Fowler, campaign manager, and that Mr. Fowler is no longer in charge of the management of the Democratic campaign.

"We learn that Theofel in repudiating Connolly stated that Connolly did not want Cox, but backed Representative William F. Brunner for the Democratic nomination for Borough President," said Frederick Sasse, Mr. Harvey's campaign manager. "Mr. Brunner, who has been supporting the Democratic organization ticket since the primary, is said to have resented this."

Confirmation of the report that Mr. Fowler had quit as campaign manager could not be obtained at Democratic headquarters, but it was learned that he had not been there for two days.

Mr. Cox continued his campaign last night by speaking at eight meetings. In all his talks he emphasized the importance of public improvements for Queens and declared that his greatest effort would be to get the borough better streets and roadways.

"Some of our roadways should really be State highways," Mr. Cox said. "This can be brought about only by a fighting Borough President who will be willing to go to Albany and fight for State highways. Most of the Queens main roads should be paid for by a 50 per cent assessment upon the city of New York, 30 per cent upon the borough and 20 per cent upon the abutting property owners. This has not been done in the case of the three main roadways built in Queens during the present administration, and the abutting property owners are being called upon to pay the entire cost."

W. E. HOPE APPOINTED ASSISTANT TO MELLON

New York Lawyer, Former 'Dollar-a-Year Man' Succeeds Bond as Fiscal Offices Head.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—The appointment of Walter Ewing Hope, New York attorney, as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in charge of fiscal offices, succeeding Henry Herrick Bond of this city, was announced today at the White House.

Mr. Hope is regarded by President Hoover as another of the outstanding business and professional men drafted by the President for public service during his administration, it is said.

Mr. Hope, who was Eastern vice treasurer of the Republican National Committee during the campaign of 1928, served as a "dollar-a-year man" with the United States Fuel Administration in the war-time administration of the late President Wilson.

While connected with the work of fuel conservation, Mr. Hope had charge of forty-eight State organizations and served as chairman of a special commission on fuel conditions in England, France, Italy and other allied countries.

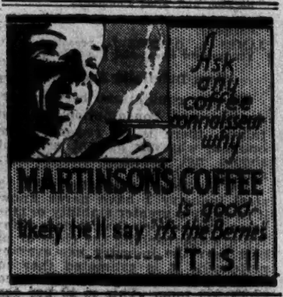
Born in Bristol, Pa., Sept. 15, 1879, Mr. Hope was graduated with honors from Princeton University in 1901 and from New York Law School in 1903. That year he was admitted to the bar and in 1909 he became a member of the law firm of Masten & Nichols, 49 Wall Street. He is a member of the American Bar Association, the New York State Bar Association and the Association of the Bar of New York City.

From 1914 to 1917 Mr. Hope was chairman of the Princeton Graduate Council and he is now a life trustee of the university, a member of its administrative committee and chairman of its library committee. From 1924 to 1927 he was president of the Princeton Club of New York.

Mr. Hope is president of the Institute for the Crippled and Disabled, the Watch Hill Chapel Society and a trustee of Presbyterian Hospital and the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church. He holds directorships in several corporations.

He is a member of the University, Century, Downtown, Racquet and Tennis and Riding Clubs and is a Son of the American Revolution.

In 1909 he married Miss Florence Haven Talcott Rogers of New Britain, Conn. He lives at 123 East Eightieth Street.



It hurts US more than it does them

POOR little shiny white golf balls... We don't want to bruise them and put cruel dents in their little rotundities. We're bigger than they are and it hurts us to pick on such little fellows. But we must.

Our heads must rule our hearts. We must know how much abuse they will stand when they get out alone in the great big fairways. We must know how they will meet the hard knocks of the life ahead of them.

That's why we've got them clamped down where they can't escape,—clamped down, with a big relentless weight dropping on them over and over again.

If the test cases survive with credit, we'll put similar ones in stock in our Sporting Goods Department on the Fifth Floor, and we'll buy a lot of them so the price will be reasonable.

This is only a suggestion of all that goes on in the testing laboratories in Macy's Bureau of Standards. We take steps to know what sort of merchandise we're selling. We're enthusiastic because we have reason to be.

WALKER ATTACKS COLER AND ENRIGHT

He Mentions No Names, but Accuses Both of Having Taken Tammany Favors.

ONE 'FED FOR FORTY YEARS'

Retired on Pension and Then Began to "Throw Mud," Says Mayor—Condemns Talk of His Clothes.

Mayor Walker took up the fight against Bird S. Coler and former Police Commissioner Enright last night in a speech at Hunts Point Palace in the Bronx. Without mentioning either of his opponents by name, but identifying them by the context of his address, he accused both of having accepted favors from Tammany Hall at one time in their careers.

At one point in his address he spoke of one of his opponents, who fed for forty years at the public trough and then, after retiring on pension, began to "throw mud." Much of the speech was devoted by the Mayor to defending himself against the charges of his opponents that he considers sartorial perfection above public welfare.

One Was Friendly to Tammany.

The Mayor said:

"Of the two men who are throwing most of the mud in this campaign, one, who has been elbowed out quite a bit when he does get in, spends all his time talking about the indecency and the grafting of Tammany Hall. But he, fed by the grace of Tammany at the public trough as long back as I can remember, accepted everything he could get from Tammany, even including the nomination for Governor, and was as friendly and complimentary to Tammany as ever I heard a man up until the time he not only arrived at the age limit of holding a job but waited until his pension was assured, and then he stepped out and joined the 'confusion' forces to throw mud at the organization that fed him for over forty-years.

"Another one of them, when subject to a so-called reform administration, was denied an appointment that he had won three times in succession and only succeeded in getting it after Tammany had won. The peculiar thing about it is that this terrible Tammany organization is all right if you can break in.

"It is all right as long as you can use it, but once Tammany gets onto you and stops the gratuities and the favors, then what a terrible organization it becomes."

Mayor Walker made another reference to Mr. Coler as he ridiculed the stories of Mr. Coler's complaint of being slighted by minor Republican candidates. Mayor Walker said:

"One of the major candidates complained of the fact that at a meeting he got no opportunity or chance. I think he took a chance, but maybe he didn't get an opportunity. He complained that he was elbowed out and could not address the throbbing public that was waiting to hang on his every word. I think there was a little advance notice in that of what might happen if he and his colleagues on the same ticket ever got into the Board of Estimate and Apportionment. If they started elbowing each other during the campaign, can you imagine what they would do to each other if they ever arrived at City Hall?"

The Mayor took up the matter of clothes with a smile.

"You know, I cannot be mercenary about such things," he said. "I just don't believe in the policy of 'Walk up one flight and save $10.' While my adversaries are complaining about the way I dress I think of that ad. When I look at them I think some of them must have walked to the top of the Woolworth Building.

"Now, that is all right, as far as I am concerned; but suppose I did that. Would you go home and believe that I had an understanding of the problems of this city, just for that reason alone?

"All this slander, all this criticism, is such a simple matter that the millions of people of this city, busy with their own affairs cannot afford to pay much attention to it."

Lieutenant Governor Lehman presided at the meeting. In introducing the Mayor he warmly endorsed the present city administration.

Joseph V. McKee, President of the Board of Aldermen, who also spoke, praised the welfare program of the present city administration.

"New York City has a heart," he said. "I mean that both officially and for the greater part of its vast population. No appeal for a worthy cause ever has found citizens of this great city lacking in the proper response.

"During the last four years nothing that would promote the welfare of the more unfortunate and helpless of our citizens has found the city lacking in its response. And let me emphasize here that while we faced the possibility of criticism because of the necessity of budget increase, we did not hesitate to make the appropriations, and there was nothing political in our action. It was no play for votes, because the beneficiaries—the orphans and the helpless wards, aged and infirm—were not voters."

Mr. McKee said the Child Welfare Board maintained 35,000 children in their homes instead of shipping them to orphanages. The cost of this, he added, was $7,500,000 a year. "It is an example to the rest of the world, since the work is done at the astonishingly low overhead of 3 per cent," he said. "In other words, 97 cents out of every dollar appropriated goes to the maintenance of these fatherless children. No hardship that we can avoid is placed upon the widow and her offspring."

SAYS SCOTS AIDED FREEDOM

Dr. Finley, in Edinburgh Lecture, Holds They Made First Move Here.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—Men of Scottish ancestry were the first to declare for the independence of America, said Dr. John H. Finley, associate editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES, in delivering the Watsonian Chair lecture at Edinburgh University today.

Scotsmen, he said, had a determining part in winning independence, and as important and even dominant a part in framing and securing the adoption of the Constitution.

"It can be said that the Scot had a decisive part in making the initial, comprehensive and predestinating gift, represented in a passionate belief that a democracy was possible which should leave the individual his part to play in a free society and not make him a mere cog in a machine operated from above," said Dr. Finley; "a democracy which trusted the common man in his ability to adjust his differences with good humor and to work out an American excellence from the contributions of all."

in Astoria Park around the band stand, where the ceremonies were scheduled to begin. There was a profusion of flags, national and municipal, and the uniforms of soldiers and sailors added color to the scene. Music was furnished by the Municipal, the Police Department and the Sixteenth Infantry Bands. Hundreds of school children sang "The Star-Spangled Banner" and saluted the flag. Amplifiers carried the program to all in the big audience and the National Broadcasting Company and WNYC, the municipal broadcasting station, described the ceremonies to many more thousands of persons.

Among the guests of the Department of Plant and Structures, under the auspices of which the ceremonies were held, were:

MAJOR GEN. HANSON E. ELY, commanding General of the Second Corps Area.
REAL ADMIRAL LOUIS R. DE STEIGUER.
MAJOR GEN. WILLIAM N. HASKELL, National Guard, New York.
BRIG. GEN. HUGH A. DRUM, Fort Hamilton, Brooklyn.
BRIG. GEN. OTHO B. ROSENBAUM, Fort Wadsworth, S. I.
COLONEL W. K. NAYLOR, Governors Island.
COLONEL FRANK K. FERGUSON, Fort Totten.
COLONEL HALSEY E. YATES, Fort Jay, Governors Island.

Seated in the front rows of the bandstand with the Mayor, who was last of the notables to arrive, were:

GEORGE U. HARVEY, Queens Borough President.
Miss EILEEN HARVEY.
JOSEPH V. McKEE, Aldermanic President.
ALBERT GOLDMAN Commissioner of Plant and Structures, who presided.
Mrs. EBBS WINSLOW, Alderman.
SAMUEL BURDEN, Alderman.
JOHN J. KINDRED, former Representative.

Major William F. Deegan was chairman of the military arrangements. Peter T. Brady headed the aviation committee and Eugene P. Moran was in charge of the marine display.

During the ceremonies in the bandstand, a parade of tugs in full dress passed up East River, while overhead three army airplanes from Mitchel Field circled in perfect formation. A municipal fireboat sent celebrative streams of water skyward.

Mayor Gets an Ovation.

Mayor Walker was sighted afar and from that moment until he had made his way through the crowd and taken his seat in the bandstand the audience stood and cheered him. Following an invocation by the Rev. John L. Belford, representing Bishop Thomas E. Molloy of Brooklyn, Commissioner Goldman read a letter of congratulation from Governor Roosevelt, who also expressed regret at his inability to be present. Mr. Goldman, in whose department the bridge plans were carried out, said in his opening address that the city was actually starting construction of a "mighty highway" in a section where, "on account of peculiar natural conditions," other methods of transportation were impracticable.

"We are taking an actual, physical step," Mr. Goldman continued, "in creating a direct and convenient lane for vehicular traffic that has been compelled to follow circuitous routes to reach its destinations. This new artery will assist in relieving the congestion.

"When the bridge is completed it will be the link in the chain that will bind the people of our entire city more closely together in commercial and social relationships. It will add to the beauty and wealth of our city and naturally increase its growth, broaden the interborough business activities and become a centre of expansion in realty values.

"Since March 24, 1927, when I first presented the preliminary plans of this bridge to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, the project has had the sympathetic cooperation of Mayor Walker and the members of the board. All the civic and business associations of the city have most heartily furthered the project."

Proposed Thirteen Years Ago.

Mr. Goldman then reviewed the history of the bridge plan, the efforts to finance it, the passage of necessary legislation, the location of its terminals told of its length of 17,710 feet, its cost of $30,000,000, the type of the projected structure and other matters. In closing, he said:

"The chief engineer of the Department of Plant and Structures, Edward A. Byrne, proposed the construction of the Triborough Bridge just thirteen years ago, and it is his vision of that time which is being accepted today as a necessity."

Aldermanic President McKee said the bridge would favorably affect the "lives, the business and the civic relations" of the residents of the boroughs it would connect. He felt that all honor should be done to Mayor Walker, "under whose great leadership this great work has been started."

After a prayer by Dr. Nathan Krass, rabbi of Temple Emanuel, Mayor Walker was introduced by Mr. Goldman as "my god." The Mayor smilingly explained that the commissioner had merely meant "my boss."

"I have no message to bring you but one of happiness," Mayor Walker began. "I acknowledge the conscientious service given by Commissioner Goldman and his aides and the support of the civic and commercial bodies of the three boroughs chiefly affected. This could not have been started save for the interest and support of these organizations.

"We see on every side evidences of the great wealth of our city. It is shown by our traffic congestion which, to put it mildly, causes great inconvenience. Because of this, the experts say, our business suffers a loss of $500,000,000 a year. It is incumbent upon us to take a firm and courageous stand and to make provision for permanently maintaining our commercial supremacy throughout the world.

"In the hope and with the conviction that this great bridge will make it possible to do business on a much greater scale, that it will bring greater property values, we start today that wonderful project. We decided that, rather than talk about it for forty years, we would commence today with the Board of Estimate and the great civic bodies, with even the children here, a job that will be finished with all the speed and thoroughness known to human ingenuity."

At the request of Mr. Goldman, the audience waited until the Mayor had a start of several minutes before it began its trek to the scene of the ground-breaking some 200 yards away. The Mayor's route from the band stand to the scene of his manual labors was lined by sailors and a battalion from the Sixteenth Infantry, all of whom stood at present arms as he passed.

When the camera men had permitted the Mayor to give up his tools, Mr. Goldman, Mr. McKee and Mr. Harvey took a hand at digging. But few of the crowd that had trailed the Mayor and his party like a gallery at a golf match were able to see him actually at his labors. A benediction pronounced by the Rev. William H. Owen, representing Bishop William T. Manning, ended the ceremonies.

Luncheon Held at Biltmore.

Many of those who attended the ceremonies in Astoria Park went from there to the Biltmore Hotel, where a number of civic and commercial organizations gave a luncheon "to commemorate the breaking of ground for the triborough bridge." There Fred C. Lemmerman, president of the Chamber of Commerce of Queens, presided. The speakers included Mr. Byrne, the bridge engineer; Leonor F. Loree, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York; Mr. Goldman and Willis H. Booth, president of the Merchants' Association of New York.

Mr. McKee said that with the new bridge across the Hudson River under construction, he believed the triborough bridge, when completed, would serve to keep many persons in New York who otherwise would find it more convenient to change their residences to New Jersey. He congratulated the civic and commercial organizations for "holding up the hands of the Mayor" in getting through the project. He declared the bridge would be an asset to all the boroughs. He predicted a great increase of industry in Queens and also rapid development of the borough as a residential centre.

Representatives of sixty-two commercial and civic organizations attended the luncheon.

After returning to his office Mr. Goldman said that contracts for the foundation work of the bridge had been let to the Albert A. Volk Company, Inc., of 1,819 Broadway. The company submitted a low bid of $563,235. It will construct the tower and pier foundations for the bridge.

DRY LEAGUE TO MEET CHALLENGE OF WETS

Dr. Nicholson Says Program of 'Constructive Aggressiveness' Has Been Prepared.

Dr. S. E. Nicholson, acting superintendent of the State Anti-Saloon League, said yesterday that his organization cheerfully took up the challenge from the "wets" implied in the organization of a New York State division of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment and the appointment of former United States Senator James W. Wadsworth to be leader of the wet forces in the State.

The Anti-Saloon League, Dr. Nicholson said, was ready to meet the wet foe after months of preparation during which a program of "constructive aggressiveness" had been developed. He took the stand that the league was on the firing line in support of President Hoover's stand for orderly government, and was out to destroy "the liquor domination in the State of New York."

"The wet cause must be slipping badly," Dr. Nicholson said, "for if the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment believes what it and its officials say about the strength of the liquor cause here, they could stand by without the expenditure of a dollar, or any effort whatever, and watch the Anti-Saloon League beat its brains out against the wall of liquor sentiment."

The fact that the Jenks State prohibition enforcement bill at this year's session of the Legislature lacked only three votes for passage in the Assembly and "a string of dry victories" in this State in the last three years and gains made by the drys in the recent primaries, Dr. Nicholson said, had, in his opinion, forced the hands of the wets.

STUDIES FINANCING OF TWO HUGE SHIPS

Cunard Line Faces Refusal by Government to Guarantee Bank Loans for Purpose.

COST PUT AT $30,000,000

White Star Company Soon to Let Award for Oceanic—Plans Fleet of Motor Vessels.

By T. WALTER WILLIAMS.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—The Cunard Line is on the point of laying down two liners of more than 60,000 tons each and more than 1,000 feet long. They will be equipped with single-reaction turbines, and contracts will call for a top speed of thirty knots and an average speed of twenty-eight and one-half knots.

One of the ships is to be built by Swan & Hunter at Wallsend-on-Tyne, builders of the Mauretania, and the other by Brown's ship yard at Clydebank, builders of the Lusitania.

The only question to be settled is the financing, which will take $30,000,000 or more. The Labor Government so far has declined to guarantee repayment of the loan if the banks advance the money. If the government refuses to change its attitude the Cunard Line will construct one ship at Swan & Hunter's yard and raise the money on its own reputation.

Going Ahead With Oceanic.

The White Star Line is not delaying the building of the new Oceanic for lack of funds, as the contract will be let to Harland & Wolff's of Belfast and the Government of North Ireland will find the money for the purpose if necessary. The directors of the White Star Line have not yet decided upon the motive power for the 60,000-ton Oceanic, or whether, in view of the heavy competition of first-class ships in the Atlantic trade, it is worth investing more than £3,000,000 in that way.

The White Star Line is looking forward to replacing its Liverpool-to-New York ships with fine, large motor vessels of the type of the Britannic, which is coming out next Spring.

It is not generally known that the White Star Line owns half the Cunard liner Berengaria and, on the other hand, that the Cunard Company owns half the White Star liner Majestic. The profits of these ships are divided annually between the two leading British steamship lines. After the World War the government paid the lines for the loss of the Lusitania and Britannic. In addition the government sold one-half of the Majestic and one-half of the Berengaria to the White Star and Cunard Lines, so that for the two halves each company paid the government $5,000,000, on which the depreciation charge at 5 per cent totals $250,000 a year.

If these ships had been bought for $20,000,000, the top price now, the charge would have been $1,000,000 a year for depreciation. Both lines had lost ships in the war, and that is why the government let them have the two big ships so cheap.

The Cunard liner Aquitania is to be re-engined this Winter and her average speed increased to twenty-five knots with a top speed of 26½ knots.

Shipping Conditions Bad There.

Shipping conditions in England are very bad at the present time. According to expert freight brokers, it is now impossible to send a cargo vessel to any port in the world and make a sufficient profit on the voyage out and back to pay 5 per cent depreciation.

The shipyards, however, are busy with orders for the construction of tankers for Norwegian firms, which are chartering the tankers ten years ahead to oil companies at 6s. 7d. (roughly $1.65) per ten deadweight, and British ship owners cannot compete with the Norwegians at this price.

The tankers cost about $900,000 to build. The Norwegians pay $100,000 to $125,000 cash down, the balance being extended over a period of six to eight years.

Tourist third cabin is the only class of accommodations that has shown a considerable increase so far over 1928.

CLEMENCEAU WELL AGAIN.

Physicians Are Amazed—Poincaré Doing Well After Operation.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 25.—Georges Clemenceau today amazed his physicians again at his power of recovery. Before they had arrived to see him this morning he was up and at work. He had had a good night's sleep and by 7 o'clock in the morning he was at his desk.

At 11 o'clock he ate a light lunch and immediately returned to his work of correcting proofs on his book.

Raymond Poincaré has recovered from the effects of a recent operation in a completely satisfactory manner. Both the local and general situation gives his physicians complete satisfaction.

PARIS, Oct. 26 (AP).—M. Clemenceau's most interesting visitor today was an old and grateful friend, one of the celebrated figures of the '90s. Colonel Alfred Dreyfus, centre of the famous Dreyfus case, came to see how M. Clemenceau was feeling. The latter, as a newspaper editor, was one of Colonel Dreyfus's chief supporters.

SWISS CONVICTS FIGHT.

Warders Look on Indifferently as French and Germans Clash.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, Oct. 25.—According to the local newspapers, a serious state of insubordination exists in the jail at Thorberg, canton of Berne. Frequent fights between the convicts from French Switzerland and those from German Switzerland are reported. The former, being numerically inferior, are always beaten and sometimes fatally injured.

The warders, it is alleged, look on indifferently, saying: "Let them settle their own quarrels without worrying us."

The Geneva authorities are considering the transfer of their convicts to the penitentiary at Orbe, near Lausanne. Geneva has no jail suitable for men serving long sentences.

IMPASSE CONTINUES ON THE WORLD BANK

Organizers Leave Baden for the West-End, With Disputes on Powers Unsettled.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BADEN-BADEN, Oct. 25.—The deadlock which has prevented any general sitting of the organizing committee of the Bank for International Settlements for more than forty-eight hours continued tonight.

The plenary session which was intended for this morning was not called by the chairman, Jackson E. Reynolds of New York, and an evening meeting also was prevented because no agreement on the powers of the bank had been reached.

The conference now is paying a penalty for its method of procedure in having put aside nearly every difficult decision until the end so that it at last discovers, after three weeks of comparatively serene conversations, that it has come face to face with serious disagreements. The greatest conflict remains in the trusteeship subcommittee, which, although having excluded the German payments imbroglio, found itself deadlocked over the question of the bank's powers in handling its funds. It is understood, too, that the German delegation is making demands for detailed guarantees, and the difficulties in the way of a settlement of the widely separated points of view are so great that those who sought to constitute themselves mediators are extremely discouraged.

In addition to these troubles there remain the vexatious disputes on the bank's location, the arbitration clauses, the question of whence the bank should derive its authority and the checks and safeguards the central banks are seeking to place upon its directorate in order to curb its ability to enter into competition with existing business.

The denseness of the atmosphere is plainly observable in the agitation of the delegates, who are closeted constantly in secret conferences within their private apartment, while every means is being sought through various intermediaries to put an end to the disagreements.

The chief delegates of each nation lunched together at the Hotel Stephanie today and afterward held a long talk in the room of Mr. Reynolds. The Belgian delegates, Louis Franck, who is seeking to act as mediator, went on a long walk with Mr. Reynolds and then conferred with Sir Charles Addis and afterward was closeted with his French colleagues.

Tonight several members left Baden-Baden, as they did last week-end, going to various capitals. The two American observers went to Paris and London, although Mr. Reynolds and Melvin A. Traylor of Chicago remained here. There is no doubt that strong pressure is being put on the delegates to come to a conclusion by the governments, which do not desire to see the second Hague meeting postponed much longer. But with the French Cabinet unformed there is small hope of any decisions over the week-end.

No communiqué of any kind has been given to the press since Wednesday noon and no delegate is willing to discuss the nature of the crisis that has paralyzed the conference. It was stated that a general session was possible tomorrow, but the impression of outsiders tonight is that the future of the world bank is in a highly precarious situation.

MEXICAN DEPORTATIONS HELD UP BY INJUNCTION

First Attempt Made to Test Article of Constitution Giving Power to Oust Undesirables.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 25.—For the first time in Mexican history an injunction has been granted holding up operation of Article XXXIII of the Constitution under which any foreigner may be forced to leave national territory if "his presence is judged inconvenient."

Hitherto no foreigner has had an opportunity to test the validity of his expulsion because the police rushed their prisoners off to the northern or southern border. Few deported persons have been allowed to return.

A Vera Cruz injunction has halted the expulsion of José Cuetara, a Spaniard; Abraham Bornestein and Matya Grosman, Poles. Bornestein and Grosman were accused of having been engaged in the white slave traffic. The three will remain in custody pending a hearing of their case in open court.

Article XXXIII has been the subject of much press comment recently, most writers considering that modification is necessary under present Mexican conditions. It is contended that the government should furnish evidence in court against a foreigner before his expulsion is decreed by the President.

GET DIVORCES IN PARIS.

American Lawyer and Clemenceau's Grandson Win Decrees.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 25.—A divorce has been granted in the courts here to Charles Campbell Jr., formerly in the diplomatic service and now practicing law in Paris, from Mrs. Christine Warren Bell Campbell. They were married here Oct. 20, 1928.

A divorce also has been granted to Michel W. Clemenceau, grandson of Georges Clemenceau, from Mrs. Ida de Clynsen Clemenceau. Marshal Foch was a witness at their wedding in 1922.

PARIS, Oct. 25 (AP).—Mrs. Germaine Baume Christine today filed suit for divorce from Arthur Read Christine, whom she married in Baltimore Jan. 20, 1920. Another application for divorce was filed by John Taylor Parkesson, American, against Yvonne Bouland Parkesson, whom he married in Brussels Jan. 11 last. Mrs. Maria Rosa Winson Beers sought divorce from Herbert Stewart Beers, whom she married at the American Consulate at London on Sept. 10, 1926.

HOFF IS FINED FOR LIBEL.

Former Champion Pole Vaulter Had Accused Norwegian Official.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 25.—Charles Hoff, formerly world champion pole vaulter, had the choice today of paying a 3268 fine or spending thirty days in jail after being found guilty in a libel suit in Oslo, Norway.

Mr. Höff had accused President Leifrode of the Norwegian Athletic Union of drunkeness and embezzlement.

45 RUSSIANS SHOT FOR OPPOSING REDS

Colonel and "Twelve Apostles" in North Caucasia Were Organizing Peasants.

6 OTHERS DIE FOR MURDER

Eighteen "Terrorists" Executed—Six More Go to Their Deaths in Siberian Capital.

By WALTER DURANTY.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOSCOW, Oct. 25.—The "class war" is raging in the Russian villages and today's news announces several defeats—but perhaps one victory for the "kulaks" or recalcitrant peasants.

From Rostof the local Ogpu (secret police) reports the "liquidation" of a North Caucasian counter-revolutionary organization of priests and general land owners, which actively opposed the socialization program. They formed the order on religious lines, known as the "Union of Those Who Praise His Name," with a "grand master" named Paul Grigorevich, a former Colonel, at its head and "twelve apostles" as his immediate subordinates.

They had a secret meeting place in the mountains above the watering place of Sochi and tried, it is alleged, to incite open assassination, arson and passive resistance to the grain collections and the collective farming movement.

Colonel Grigorevich and his "apostles" were shot, with two others, and the rest were condemned to long terms of imprisonment.

In the Volga city of Samaria one priest and five kulaks were shot for the murder of two young Communists and "opposition to Soviet socialization measures" in Simbirsk on the Volga, and in Siberia's capital, Novosibersk, there was a shooting of a half-dozen or more "class enemies" for similar reasons. Finally, from Krasnodar in North Caucasus comes an Ogpu report on the "liquidation" of a counter-revolutionary group led by a former judge of the local court at Savnitsi, who organized a "terrorist section" of eighteen "ci-devants" who have been shot "for terroristic acts and open hostility to the Soviet power."

Thus one can reckon upward of fifty "kulak" casualties, including the imprisonments, in one day's news reports. Against that the newspaper Izvestiya publishes a brief item: that "Autumn grain sowings in the Kuban region of north Caucasus amount to only 4 per cent of the plan. The kulaks only sowed 36,000 hectares and the plan estimated their sowing area at 200,000."

To use war terminology, one might call this an official communiqué of the "kulak enemy." It shows how clear cut the fight is becoming. On one side frank and bloody reprisals. On the other, plots, arson, assassination and the sinister weapon of passive resistance, which did so much to vanquish the previous attempt at rural socialization in the years 1918 to 1921.

But today the authorities are far stronger, the Communist party is far larger and better organized, and the urban workers are more able and ready to play a part in the battle for Socialism. The Kuban kulaks and others like them in other sections refuse to sow all of their land. The State will meet them, if necessary, with confiscation of their property and its transfer to poor peasant collectives, which will sow it in Spring.

Five years ago or three years ago the kulaks might have won, because their land, although only an eighth or a ninth of the total, produced a third or more of the surplus grain of the country. This year the State farms and collectives are sufficiently able to take the places of the kulaks. Today it is almost certain that the State can afford to break the kulaks without itself "going broke."

SLOAN IS SATISFIED BY AUTO EXPORT TRADE

He Finds European Motors More Americanized—Optimistic as to Future Prospects.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—Satisfaction with the present condition of the American motor export business, as well as optimism regarding the future outlook, was expressed tonight by Alfred P. Sloan, president of General Motors, on the eve of his sailing for New York on the Mauretanic.

Mr. Sloan has been on a business trip in Europe, primarily for the purpose of conferring with the directorate of the Opel Motor Works in Germany, a company in which General Motors has a controlling interest, though he also visited various foreign agencies. He said the business of his company abroad was favorable in every way.

Mr. Sloan declared he was not perturbed by the Prudential Assurance Company's $5,000,000 scheme to further the sale of British cars, remarking that such a sum could scarcely accomplish very much.

Today Mr. Sloan visited the motor show at Olympia. He described it as being interesting, although he did not see any specially new developments. Concerning European automobiles, Mr. Sloan said they were becoming more Americanized in type and design, so that now it was difficult to distinguish between American and foreign models in the streets of European cities. America, however, was able to produce less expensive models than Europe because of mass production and distribution.

Mr. Sloan has been in close touch with the markets since the Wall Street crash receiving bulletins of prices, but he would not discuss the crisis.

DANISH BROKERS SUSPEND.

Three Firms Hit by Failures of Plum Companies.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 25.—Three finance companies suspended operations today as a consequence of their connection with Plum companies, the crash of which caused the Folkebank to suspend payments yesterday.

Claus L. Smidt, stockbrokers, one of the oldest firms in Copenhagen, was the first to suspend. It had been acting guarantor of a loan of 1267,100 which the Crown Butter Company, one of the defunct Plum companies, had received from the Hambros Bank.

Details of the suicide of Harald Plum yesterday revealed that he first attempted to shoot himself Wednesday morning, but the shot was not fatal. He lay suffering throughout the day while he dictated a confession explaining the situation to his family. Members of the family discovered the revolver and threw it away, but Plum obtained another and ended his life.

IMPRESSED BY GAINS WITH PULVERIZED COAL

British Fuel Experts Told by an American Ship Effected Economy of 38.7 Per Cent.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—The conference of the British Institute of Fuel, which ended today after sessions of two days during which technical papers were read and discussed, was impressed by the disclosures of Carl J. Jefferson, head of the fuel conservation section of the United States Shipping Board.

Mr. Jefferson illustrated the efficiency of pulverized fuel for marine propulsion by latest and best performances of the American steamship West Alsek, now on its eleventh transatlantic voyage. The economies that the West Alsek was able to show on her last voyage astonished many British fuel experts, none of whom in their papers and discussions had placed the savings in British pulverized coal tests on ships at more than 30 to 35 per cent, in comparison with the best previous hand-fired coal tests.

Mr. Jefferson showed that he had bought an inferior grade of coal at New York and thereby had saved $1 a ton. Using this coal in pulverized form, the West Alsek increased her speed, as compared with the best hand-fired tests, from 8.86 to 9.46 knots an hour and decreased her coal consumption from 468 to 426 pounds a mile and the cost of her voyage from $10,466 to $6,415, equal to a saving of 38.7 per cent.

Various speakers at the conference showed that among British experts there was a growing conviction that pulverized fuel for marine purposes has now arrived at the stage where oil-burning cargo ships will begin a general movement back to pulverized coal as the more economical form of fuel.

SIDAR AT PANAMA FIELD AFTER JUNGLE LANDING

Mexican Flier Describes Being Forced Down in Small Clearing in Ecuador.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PANAMA CITY, Oct. 25.—Colonel Pablo Sidar, the noted Mexican military aviator, arrived at France Field in the Canal Zone at 12 P. M. today from Buenaventura with a new motor installed in his plane, the Mexican Army, in order to make possible his return from his successful flight to the principal countries of South America.

Motor trouble caused Colonel Sidar to make a forced landing near Guayaquil on Oct. 9, when en route to Cali, Colombia.

Commenting on the forced landing, Colonel J. A. Mars, commanding the United States Army air station at France Field, said:

"I am sure that out of a thousand aviators, 999 would have smashed up completely and possibly lost their lives as well."

Colonel Sidar explained that when he noticed the motor trouble he immediately drained the forward tanks to prevent fire if there was an explosion. When he found a small clearing in the jungles he made a "dead-stick" landing by pulling the ship into a steep bank, easing down and pulling the plane straight just as the wing tips were about to strike the ground. Lightening the forward load by dumping from the tanks made the plane tail-heavy, permitting an almost dead-stop landing.

The damage to the plane was slight. With the new motor the flight was made today without difficulty. However, in flying from Guayaquil to Buenaventura yesterday he had to make a forced landing on a narrow beach of an island off the coast of Ecuador. Although it was difficult, he managed to get off again safely.

Colonel Sidar is having his plane inspected and tuned up by army mechanics at France Field and expects to continue his flight next week.

R-101 FLIGHTS SUSPENDED.

Engine of Big British Dirigible Is Being Repaired.

LONDON, Oct. 25 (AP).—Further trial flights of Great Britain's new dirigible R-101 have been suspended because of a slight defect found in one of her engines.

The Air Ministry announced today that while one of the auxiliary engines used for starting the main power units was being tested recently a small plug in the lubricating system worked loose, damaging one of the gear wheels.

The engine has been sent to the manufacturers for repairs and further tests, and the ministry hopes that the defect will soon be remedied. The R-101 has already made two successful trial flights, which seem to have silenced the widespread criticism in the British press of her construction.

PLANE WEATHERS GALE.

Reaches Le Bourget After Landing on Way to Africa.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 25.—The privately owned tri-motored Avro plane piloted by Captain Campbell Black, which left Croyden, England, yesterday en route to Africa to establish a new aerial transport line, reached the Le Bourget airport today after passing the night at Meru, near Paris, where a forced landing had been made.

Captain Black and his two English companions were surprised on their arrival to learn that grave concern had been felt for their safety. They were reported yesterday to be having difficulty in a sixty-mile gale over the English Channel.

MINISTER FOR VOLUNTEERS.

Admiralty Head Tells Artists' Rifles They Deserve Encouragement.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—Members of the Artists' Rifles, noted and picturesque volunteer regiment, cheered Tibert V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, tonight, when he told them their association should be encouraged.

Mr. Alexander, who was a corporal in the Artists' Rifles during the war, said they could not expect him, as a Labor Cabinet Minister and a Socialist, to discard either his faith or polity because he happened to be among old comrades. The government, he said, wanted to get agreements all round which would, as far as possible present war. With this he was in full accord.

"If we are going to get agreements for that kind of gradual reduction of regular armaments, it is at least important that every encouragement should be given to voluntary organizations like the Artists' Rifles, members of which are always so fond of their country that if need be they are prepared to defend it," Mr. Alexander asserted.

YING KAO TRIAL OPENS.

Former Chinese Vice Consul at San Francisco Charged as Smuggler.

NANKING, Oct. 26 (AP).—Trial was begun here today of Ying Kao, former Chinese Vice Consul at San Francisco, and his wife on charges of having attempted to smuggle opium valued at about $600,000 into San Francisco last July.

Presenting his case in the criminal division of the Chinese District Court, the prosecutor said he expected to prove the existence of a giant transpacific smuggling ring.

Referring to the assertion of customs officers in San Francisco that they had discovered 3,000 five-tael tins in her baggage on her return from China, Mrs. Kao testified that persons in Hongkong, Shanghai, Honolulu and San Francisco had inspected her baggage prior to its seizure in America.

The case has aroused widespread interest in China and the Nationalist Government officials have expressed their intention of making an example of the Ying Kaos if found guilty.

LEGACY CRAZES AUSTRIAN.

Forester Goes to Asylum After News of $25,000 Bequest.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, Oct. 25.—Joseph Peschan, a 60-year-old forest ranger in Lodenburg, received news a few days ago that he had fallen heir to $25,000 from a cousin who had died in the United States.

Peschan, who hitherto had lived frugally, immediately began to give away his savings, distributing gifts of gold and silver among his acquaintances, asserting he could afford to do so as he had become a "dollar millionaire."

His present address is the lunatic asylum.

Sao Thome Dispatch Says Warship Is Standing by the Zaire.

LONDON, Oct. 25 (AP).—A Lloyd's dispatch from Sao Thome tonight said the Portuguese steamship Zaire had grounded and attempts to float her had failed. The weather was favorable and the passengers were still on board with a Portuguese warship standing by.

Available gazetteers list only Sao Thome, Brazil, but the Zaire, a vessel of 2,815 tons, was last reported bound for Porto Alexandre, Angola, Portuguese West Africa.

CHIANG SEEKS PEACE THROUGH MEDIATION

Yen Agrees to Act Between Chinese Warring Factions—Nanking Raises War Chest.

REBEL ATTACK BEATEN BACK

Nationalists Order 12 Planes From America—Trouble With Reds Expected to Continue.

HANKOW, Oct. 25 (AP).—The rebellious Kuominchun, or People's Army, failed today in a second attack upon the Nationalist Government forces at Chengchow, Honan province.

While widespread fighting continues in Central China, it was reported that Governor Yen Hsi-shan of Shensi province, who declared his neutrality, had agreed to mediate between the warring factions. Nationalist Government officials, it is understood, are trying hard to settle peaceably the armed revolt which has spread to several provinces.

To build a war chest, however, the government has assessed the people of the tri-cities Wuchang, Hankow and Hanyang, a half-million Mexican dollars—$250,000 in gold money. Such levies, totaling one million Mexican dollars, within a month are difficult for the people to pay.

Nanking Orders Planes.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 25 (AP).—The Nationalist Government today placed a rush order for twelve Vought-Corsair military airplanes for possible use in the civil war it is waging against the Kuominchun.

The planes are to be shipped from New York at the earliest possible date. The order totals $400,000 gold.

Earl Baskey of St. Louis, a representative of the manufacturers, said this was the largest single order of American planes ever sold in China.

The planes will carry machine guns and bomb loads of 1,000 pounds each. They are expected to play a prominent part in maintaining the authority of the Nationalist Government.

The purchase by the Nationalist Government of twelve Vought Corsairs was confirmed here yesterday. The planes, which are the same type as used by the United States Navy for observation, light bombing and battle plans and by the Marine Corps in Nicaragua, are being built at the Long Island factory of the Chance Vought Corporation. The sale to the Chinese Government was made through the United Aircraft Export Corporation, a unit, like the Vought company, in United Aircraft and Transport, Inc.

Besides the planes, the sale includes accessories, spare engine parts for the Pratt & Whitney Wasp motors, machine guns and ammunition.

Prepare for Border Attacks.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 25 (AP).—The Kuo Min news agency stated tonight that renewed hostilities along the Manchurian-Siberian border were expected, adding:

"The Soviet border forces now total 50,000, while the Manchurians are increasing their defenses to withstand a possible attack." The Nanking Nationalist Government has sent Chang Hsueh-Liang, Governor of Manchuria, another million of Mexican dollars to help finance the border defenses."

Berlin Hears of New Attack.

BERLIN, Oct. 25 (AP).—Reports received tonight at the Chinese Legation were that the Red Army was preparing a new attack on a wider front in Manchuria. The Fifth Army Corps, crack troops of the Soviet Union, was said to have been ordered to the Far Eastern front to replace the Seventh Army Corps.

REVOLT CAUSES DROP IN CHINESE IMPORTS

Military Activities and Uncertain Political Situation Reduces Trade to Staples.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Imports into North China, again threatened with interruptions due to possible renewed military activities, and curbed by an unfavorable exchange and the unertain political situation, have been reduced to staples, which are possible to distribute and capable of absorbing increased delivery costs, according to reports from American trade representatives in China made public today by the Department of Commerce.

Transportation is already being affected by troops movements on the Yangtse River and the Peking-Hankow and the Tientsin-Pukow railways, with the possibility that the lines may be cut, the reports said.

Flour was the largest item of import trade during the first nine months of the year, 3,121,000 barrels, worth $17,173,000, being cleared through the Tientsin customs. Inquiries for railway equipment were few, due to reorganization of control of the Peking-Mukden line.

The automotive market is quiet in so far as passenger cars are concerned. Demand was active, however, for trucks for military use. Imports at Tientsin during September totaled fifty-three passenger cars, forty-six being American and 401 trucks, 393 being American made.

The Tientsin cotton market was reported fairly active. Declared exports of merchandise to the United States during September are reported by the Tientsin Consulate General to total $1,066,000, and include the following: bristles, $325,000; carpets, $251,000; raw cotton, $23,000; egg products, $144,000; hides, skins and furs, $480,000; carpet wool, $419,000; sausage casings, 83,000 pounds, $121,000.

Rumania Celebrates King's Eighth Birthday; Polish Minister Presents Republic's Gifts

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BUCHAREST, Oct. 25.—King Michael was 8 years old today. That was a great event for him and for Rumania. Members of the Regency Council, which administers the affairs of State for him; representatives of the government, Generals of the army, a score of high officials and two squadrons of royal bodyguard attended a Te Deum held in the cathedral this morning. At the conclusion of the service General Cikoski, Minister of War, made a speech to the troops, who gave three cheers for the boy King before marching away.

The dignitaries then hastened to the palace to convey their good wishes in person. Among them was Foreign Minister Zaleski of Poland, who bore as many gifts as a Christmas tree. There were wooden toys which had been made in Polish farmhouses on Winter evenings, railway cars, signal towers and stations, and a collection of Polish national fairy tales translated into English and beautifully illustrated.

The family celebration was more intimate. The King received birthday kisses from his mother and congratulations from his uncle, Prince Nicholas, and former King George and former Queen Elizabeth of Greece.

King Michael was allowed to stay home from school, which involved no special privilege, because all Rumanian boys and girls had been allowed to share the King's birthday happiness in the same manner. He will not receive the family gifts until his name day.

The only one absent from the family circle was the Dowager Queen Marie, who was away at her villa in Balcic. This was the first time she had missed King Michael's birthday and the absence was the subject of public comment.

LEAGUE TAKES UP TARIFF TRUCE ISSUE

Assured We Favor Economic Moves, but R. L. Eastman Says We Want Fair Play.

HOLDS ISSUE IS EUROPEAN

Delegates Report Attitudes of Various Nations—Britain Announces Acceptance of 1930 Conference.

By CLARENCE K. STREIT.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, Oct. 25.—The League of Nations economic committee, which today opened the discussion on the proposed two years' tariff truce, received from the American member, Lucius R. Eastman, assurances that American opinion, far from being hostile to the movement, looked favorably toward any step Europeans took to increase their prosperity and buying power. He coupled with this a warning—the force of which was not lost on his hearers for all the mildness of its expression—that the United States expected fair play and no discrimination against it. Mr. Eastman added, however, that America did not believe Europe, in this important matter, was "seeking to arm itself against her."

Delegates Report Attitudes.

Mr. Eastman's statement, which followed the lines outlined in yesterday's dispatch, was the only one of the thirteen, made by as many members of the committee in two long secret sessions today, which was released to the press. That indicates the importance attached to the American attitude to a customs truce among Europeans whose anxiety over possible opposition from the United States Mr. Eastman did much to allay today.

Two projects for a draft convention for a tariff holiday were laid before the committee today, one by the German chairman, Hans Trendelenburg, and the other by the French delegate, Daniel Serruys. Neither, however, has yet been discussed, the sessions being devoted today to reports by French, German, British, American, Belgian, Austrian, Swiss, Czech, Norwegian, Japanese, Rumanian and Brazilian members on how the idea of the truce had been received in their countries.

The general trend of these reports was favorable to the truce, and though the technical difficulties confronting the proposal were aired much more than when the project was born during the recent Assembly, the net result was to encourage those who have the plan most at heart and believe a European tariff holiday is possible.

They were particularly encouraged by Britain officially announcing that it was already prepared to enter the conference, scheduled to be called early next year, to consider the draft convention for a tariff truce which the committee will begin to draw up now on the basis of the German and French projects. Britain, which proposed the truce during the Assembly, is the first State to take this step. It will be represented at the conference by William Graham, president of the Board of Trade.

There was some difference of opinion today whether the truce is to be regarded as an end in itself or as a first step toward either a general lowering of tariffs or to M. Briand's more far-reaching European federation. Though both the latter eventualities are obviously in the minds of the delegates, all of them, including the French, who expressed the majority view in insisting that the truce was only a first move, carefully avoiding alluding to them directly. Sir Sydney Chapman, British delegate, contented himself with arguing that the prime necessity for the moment was to check customs warfare with prejudicing future decisions. He held it impossible for any one to determine what could or should be done until the air had been cleared by two or three years stabilization of tariffs.

Reich Draft More Rigid.

The German and French preliminary drafts agree in object but differ in method. The former is understood to be more rigid in design, aiming to crystallize the present tariff situation temporarily. The latter is said to give the governments more freedom to lower duties during the truce if desired.

Herr Trendelenburg said the German Government was not able to take a definite stand at the moment for technical reasons. The tariffs expired this year and the government did not want to appear to be forcing Parliament's hand. The speaker gave the impression that the Reich would ultimately announce a favorable attitude.

Mr. Eastman stressed the fact that he did not represent the United States Government and that he was only trying to interpret the spirit of the American feeling. This, however, hardly diminished the significance of his statement for his colleagues, for it is known he conferred with members of the Cabinet before leaving America, and he, moreover, quoted at length the speech which Julius Klein, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, recently made on the subject to the Purchasing Agents' Association. He cited, inter alia, the passage in which Mr. Klein said: "It is obvious that any fundamental contribution to European prosperity and general economic stability, if it be not involved with discriminatory intent, either open or concealed, will react favorably upon the buying power of the Old World, which will be bound to have a repercussion upon our export prospects, not only across the Atlantic but in almost all parts of the world."

Stresses Need of Fair Play.

Mr. Eastman made this passage the keynote of his statement, saying American business men, though they considered the truce primarily a European problem, did not forget that "the more prosperous Europe became, the more prosperous became the United States." Though it was not for the United States to interfere or to dictate a remedy, America, none the less, would favor "any honest attempt by Europe to solve its own problems."

A new situation, he continued, had undoubtedly arisen in the United States in the past few years. The so-called American economic theory was an established fact and the United States was enjoying general prosperity such as had never before existed anywhere. Whatever its cause, this was a fact which Europe had recognized. America was only too willing to put her experience at the disposal of Europe, but it was for the Europeans themselves to find a solution, "though in doing so they should see that fair play was given to America, should her interests be involved." Success did not depend on concealed or open discrimination against any nation.

Mr. Easman declared that he had discussed the question with numerous business men during the recent meeting of the International Chamber of Commerce, and all of them had told him they wanted something constructive from the economic committee and that it was essential to start a forward movement.

He concluded by re-emphasizing that the United States did not believe Europe was seeking to arm itself against her and that America was "willing and ready to offer any assistance and cooperation" it could, but the discussion must only be in an atmosphere of frankness and openmindness.

Questioned later by the press as to whether the United States would be likely to join the tariff truce, Mr. Eastman said he did not believe that was expected and he considered the issue to be purely European.

DALADIER ATTEMPTS TO CREATE CABINET

Radical-Socialist Has Until 3 P. M. Today to Line Up Support for New Government.

BRIAND REFUSES ANY ROLE

Ousted French Premier Says He Must Have Rest—Socialists Demand Opportunity.

By P. J. PHILIP.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 25.—President Doumergue asked the Radical-Socialist leader, Edouard Daladier, today to undertake the task of forming a government and the latter asked time until 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon to consider his reply. From the Elysée Palace M. Daladier returned at once to Rheims where he received an enthusiastic reception from his party's convention.

It is not certain that M. Daladier will be able to inform President Doumergue tomorrow that he will accept the task of forming a Cabinet. Two factors have arisen which make his task more difficult than appeared likely. Former Premier Briand has refused to enter any Cabinet, declaring that he needs a rest. That will certainly entail a slight withdrawal of support from the moderate Right and leave a Radical-Socialist Cabinet exposed to attack from that quarter.

Socialists Want to Rule.

The Socialists, on whose support a Radical-Socialist Cabinet must depend for its existence, are far from pleased at the attitude the Radical-Socialists took toward them yesterday and are clamoring loudly that they are ready to form a ministry themselves. Leon Blum, Socialist leader, informed the President yesterday that his party was quite willing and ready to assume power and today, in all party newspapers and declarations, the Socialists are proclaiming the time has come for them to take the leadership, supported by the Radical-Socialists, and refuse the rôle of supporters of the Radical-Socialists.

The Socialists have never held office in France and the fact that Labor has governed in England and that Socialists have formed Cabinets in Germany, Austria and elsewhere has made them sensitive. They believe that if they can escape for a short time a defeat by the Opposition it will enormously strengthen their position at the next elections and weaken the Radical-Socialists.

M. Daladier, therefore, is likely to find his position somewhat complicated. If he is to succeed he must be prepared for a fight on all sides and act with great audacity. By the sudden demand of the Socialists for power the Radical-Socialist position as leader of the Left is being challenged. It is a challenge which the party can scarcely refuse to accept, even if it means risking a very short-lived ministry.

Meanwhile the Right has not yet given up the hope of being eventually successful in the struggle for office. Looked at arithmetically, neither the Radical-Socialists nor the Socialists have any chance of holding office at any time in the present Chamber. The former number only 125 and the latter 100 in the Chamber, which has 607 Deputies.

Both would have to depend on the "Left Radical" party, which numbers 53, and on the Republican Socialists, who number 31, and one word from a Centre Deputy such as George Mandel, who was most largely responsible for M. Briand's defeat on Tuesday, would send the whole structure tumbling.

The Right and Centre would have difficulty in forming any lasting majority as the Radical-Socialists have already declared they will remain opposed to any concentration of which they are not the head.

Party Gives Free Hand.

Tonight at Rheims the Radical-Socialist party authorized M. Daladier to try to form a government with the support of other Left parties, including the Socialists, but left it open to him to seek support anywhere he could find it except on the extreme Right.

For a Radical-Socialist leader the position is one of extreme delicacy and difficulty. His success will be possible only if he can persuade M. Briand tomorrow morning to reconsider today's decision and join the Cabinet.

But M. Briand is likely to make conditions which may not be entirely satisfactory. Tonight M. Daladier is trying to formulate a shadow Cabinet which will satisfy his party, hold the Centre, not alienate the Socialists and assure M. Briand's presence in it. If he fails to find a way of satisfying all four he probably will be compelled to tell the President tomorrow he is unable to take the task of forming a government. If he persists, without making sure of his position with all four, the government, even though it may include Edouard Herriot and Joseph M. Caillaux, may be expected to be shortlived.

Government Expresses "Extreme Pleasure" That He Will Be Envoy.

HAVANA, Oct. 25 (AP).—The State Department today said that "extreme pleasure was felt by the Cuban Government over the announcement that Harry F. Guggenheim, new United States Ambassador, would arrive early next month.

Dr. Miguel Angel Campa, Sub-Secretary of State, said:

"The Cuban Government is greatly interested in receiving Mr. Guggenheim, feeling that he will continue the extremely cordial relations between the two nations and strengthen the sincere affection which has always existed between Cuba and the United States. We look to him to aid the strengthening of friendly ties which General Enoch Crowder and Colonel Noble Brandon Judah did so much to establish.

"Cuba is greatly interested in aviation—Mr. Guggenheim's most advanced avocation—and we are certain he will be able to do much in his Ambassadorial capacity in Cuba."

COAL-TAR DUTY PLAN OPENS SENATE RIFT

MORE CHEMICAL RATES CUT

In Test Vote of Day, Chamber by 48 to 30 Defeats Rise in Duty on Non-Shatterable Glass.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Opening manoeuvres in a Senate contest over the amount of tariff protection the Finance Committee deems necessary for the American coal-tar products industry were staged today when Senator Hawes, Democrat, of Missouri, announced that he would try to upset the committee's scheme for valuing importations of such products.

The coal-tar products industry has been built up in this country since the World War, before which the Germans virtually controlled the supply used in the United States. Coal-tar products form the basis of dyes and are also used in photographic materials and medicines.

Stating that he would fight to retain the present valuation plan based on the American selling price in place of the substitute plan of foreign valuation proposed by the Finance Committee, Mr. Hawes said that the change would be a fatal blow to the American industry. When Mr. Hawes asked Senator King, Democrat, of Utah, a Finance Committee member, if he proposed to press the substitution, Mr. King said he had not made up his mind.

Senator Copeland of New York, however, informed Mr. Hawes that if Mr. King did not speak for the minority on the new plan, he (Copeland) would probably do so, as a move to bring down the prices of medicines. The coal-tar paragraphs were eventually passed over until another day.

Reduction Amendments Put Through

In a day devoted to the chemical schedule, the Senate put through a number of amendments, in nearly every case reducing the duties proposed in the Finance Committee bill.

By vote of 48 to 30, it rejected a committee plan to raise from 45 cents to 50 cents a pound the duty on cellulose used in nonshatterable glass for automobile windshields.

Consent was then given without a roll call to the committee plan to place ergot on the free list. This drug, now taxed 10 cents a pound, is imported chiefly from Spain and Germany, which controls the Russian output. In 1928, an American importer asked the government for an embargo against imported ergot, but his petition was ultimately dismissed.

Following a committee recommendation, gentian, sarsaparilla root, belladonna, digitalis, henbane and stramonium were put on the free list. The duty on edible gelatine was cut from the House rate of 5 cents a pound to3½ cents and that on fish glue was reduced from 8 to 7 cents. Both changes were made on advice of the committee.

Senator La Follette gave notice that he would move to place sulphur black and synthetic indigo, bases of certain dyes, on the free list.

The highly technical proceedings were enlivened when Chairman Smoot began to discuss "hexamethylenetetramine," a chemical compound of formaldehyde and ammonia. It is used as an accelerator in rubber vulcanization and in medicine. During the war it was used in gas masks to absorb phosgene.

"What's that item?" Senator Harrison grinningly asked Mr. Smoot.

Smoot Asks Aid of Clerk.

Mr. Smoot asked the reading clerk to pronounce the multi-syllabled word.

Strong efforts were made by Senator Shortridge of California to have the chamber approve an amendment adding 15 cents a pound to the present 25 per cent ad valorem duty on agar agar. This is a dried seaweed product, used chiefly as a culture for bacteria in the compounding of medicines.

A California company is the only American concern manufacturing the finished product, most of the imports coming from Japan. The Senate finally refused on a roll-call vote of 44 to 25 to accept the Shortridge solution.

Other amendments adopted include:

Duty on ink and ink powders reduced from the House rate of 20 per cent ad valorem and the Finance Committee rate of 15 per cent to 10 per cent, on motion of Senator Harrison.

Duty on licorice reduced from the House rate of 25 per cent to the committee rate of 20 per cent.

Duty on epsom salts reduced from the House rate of 1 cent a pound to the committee and present low rate of ½ cent.

When the Senate decided to give perfumed bath salts a preferential rate of 75 per cent ad valorem, as compared with the 25 per cent levy on unperfumed salts, Senator La Follette remarked:

"I know the farmers, in whose interest this tariff reduction is made, will be delighted to know about that."

Walsh and Copeland in Tilt.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25 (AP).—The Senate Finance Committee plan to raise the duty on cellulose transparent sheets, used in the manufacture of non-shattering automobile windshields and windows led to a tilt between two Democrats, Walsh of Massachusetts and Copeland of New York, before the higher rate was defeated.

Senator Walsh advocated the increase in the rate on the ground that the product was a new one being made in this country to compete with the German product, which now has one-third of the domestic market. Mr. Walsh said he had yet to favor a higher tariff on an industrial commodity, but that in this instance it was necessary, if a new American industry was to be maintained.

Mr. Walsh said Germany could sell the cellulose sheets in this country 15 cents a pound cheaper than the American product after paying the present forty-cent tariff.

Senator Copeland said the question involved was one of "life and limb" and that he would insist on the lowest possible duty in order to increase the use of the product.

Explaining that one of his hobbies has been to popularize the use of non-shattering glass, Mr. Copeland said he could not vote for any tariff which would lessen the sale of this "life-saving glass."

The Senator told of an explosion in New York which overturned street cars and hurled passengers through the windows, cutting them severely on the face and scalp. Mr. Copeland, who is a physician, said he was in the operating room from 9 A. M. until 5 P. M. removing glass from the victims, dozens of whom were injured seriously.

"If I had my way," he asserted, "I would require by law that every vehicle for hire be compelled to have windows made from non-shatterable glass. I think we have an obligation in the interest of humanity to lower the price of this product just as much as it can be done."

Terrier Gives Life in Saving Bay State Widow, 83, From Gas

REVERE, Mass., Oct. 25 (AP).—Teddy, an Irish terrier, the pet of Mrs. Mae Goulding, aged 83, a widow living alone, gave his life and saved her from death in a gas-filled room of her home early today.

A neighbor, awakened by the dog's continued barking, notified the police, who forced an entrance and found Mrs. Goulding near death and the dog at her side, barking weakly in an apparent effort to arouse her. The dog died as its mistress was revived after four hours of artificial respiration and taken to a hospital.

Gas was found escaping from a kitchen range.

CENSURE UNLIKELY IN BINGHAM REPORT

Lobby Investigators Will Lay Employment of Tariff Aids Before the Senate Today.

IMPORTER'S MEN LISTED

Burgess, as Requested When Testifying, Names Six Formerly in the Government Service.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—A report narrating the circumstances under which Senator Hiram Bingham, Republican, of Connecticut, employed C. L. Eyanson of the Connecticut Manufacturers Association as a tariff adviser during consideration of the Hawley-Smoot bill by the Finance Committee will be submitted to the Senate tomorrow in behalf of the lobby investigating committee by Senator Thomas J. Walsh, Democrat, of Montana.

The report, a copy of which is understood to have been placed in Senator Bingham's hands today, is said to be devoid of any conclusions that would in any way suggest censure.

The purpose of the committee, it was explained, is merely to advise the Senate of the facts, which have attracted widespread attention owing to the vigorous manner in which Mr. Eyanson and other officers of the association were examined as to why the organization designated one of its number to serve Senator Bingham.

Fear Effects on Tariff Bill.

The committee will make partial reports to the Senate from time to time on the tariff aspects of its labors as long as the tariff bill is under consideration in the upper chamber.

"Regular" Republican leaders in the Senate are fearful that the committee, four of whose members, Senators Caraway, Walsh, Blaine and Borah, are members of the "coalition" fighting the tariff bill, is making a report at this time on the Bingham-Eyanson episode with a view to accentuating opposition to the tariff measure.

The report, being advisory, does not call for any action on the part of the Senate. It states that Senator Bingham admitted that he employed Mr. Eyanson; that while Eyanson was so engaged he temporarily succeeded Henry Barry, Mr. Bingham's regular clerk, on the Senate payroll; that Eyanson turned over the salary attaching to the job to Barry, and that when he retired from Bingham's employ in August Mr. Barry succeeded to his old place. All of this information was furnished to the committee by Senator Bingham, as well as Eyanson and Barry, and E. Kent Hubbard, president of the Connecticut Manufacturers Association.

Names Ex-Government Men.

The lobby investigators made public today a letter written by William Burgess of Norristown, Pa., ex-member of the Federal Tariff Commission, containing the names of six former government employes now engaged in the service of New York importers. Mr. Burgess, who was active in Washington in behalf of the pottery industries, has testified before the committee.

The list follows:

F. J. Nolan of Milbank Leaman & Co., New York City, representing importers of woolen and worsted goods, a branch of the Council of Importers and Traders—formerly examiner of wool and worsted imports at New York at the Port of New York.

Otto Fix, customs and tariff man of the George Borzfeldt Company—formerly examiner of cotton goods at the Port of New York and also of the Customs Administration Service.

H. Lord of the Keyser Silk Company, New York City, representing the silk branch of the Council of Importers and Traders—formely connected. Mr. Burgess said, "in same capacity with the examination of silk goods at the Port of New York."

Charles F. Rotti of the Lace and Embroidery Association of America, representing the lace and embroidery branch of the Council of Importers and Traders—formerly examiner, Mr. Burgess said he believed, of lace and embroidery at the Port of New York.

David Walker of Morimura Brothers, West Twenty-third Street, New York City—formerly inspector at the docks, later examiner of merchandise, passing a variety of goods at the New York Custom House.

J. W. Bevans, attorney, New York City, counsel for the Council of Importers and Traders—formerly examiner and special agent in the treasury.

Senator Brookhart of Iowa, who stated in the Senate a few weeks ago that at a dinner attended by several Senators flasks were given to the guests, will not be examined by the lobby committee as to that incident unless he volunteers as a witness.

Chairman Caraway said the committee had no intention of delving into the activities of the "social lobby," and the Brookhart charge, he indicated, came under that head.

"You cannot put your finger on what is called the 'social lobby,'" said Senator Caraway, "and we will not pay any attention to it unless persons come forward who claim to have specific facts about it. We want to get a cross-section of all phases of lobbying and our present intention is to examine witnesses knowing about particular groups or classes of the profession."

Striking Window Cleaners Stage Demonstrations at Shops.

Seven striking window cleaners were arrested yesterday during a picketing demonstration staged by the Window Cleaners' Union, Local 8, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, which called 2,000 men on strike ten days ago. All seven were charged with disorderly conduct. The cases were dismissed by Magistrate Walsh in Jefferson Market court.

Strikers and their wives picketed many large department and fashion shops. Union officials declared they were satisfied with the situation. They announced that two more independent boss cleaners have signed agreements.

FALL FOUND GUILTY; JURY ASKS MERCY

kept out of the secret. A few minutes before the verdict was rendered, however, Fall was warned to keep his nerve, to expect the worse. He lived up to the warning.

Fall Wheeled Into Court.

It was exactly 10 o'clock when Fall was wheeled into the court room. Then he was holding his head high. He scanned the faces before him, and there was not a trace of apprehension so far as he was concerned. He was wrapped in a big automobile rug. The black sombrero hat of the New Mexican plains, which he affects, was in his lap.

An attendant propelled the chair. On one side walked Dr. H. T. Safford of El Paso, his personal physician, and on the other Houston Fall, his nephew.

As soon as Fall was transferred from the wheel to the Morris chair, the blankets tucked about him, Doheny left his place in the audience and went into the legal inclosure and took his seat next to the defendant. He leaned over and whispered to Fall. What he said none but Fall knew. He may have been the one who tipped off the former Cabinet member as to what was coming.

Mrs. Fall, her daughters, Mrs. Doheny, Father Joseph of the Apache Reservation, Joseph J. Cotter, Doheny's personal counsel, and Bozeman Long of Mexico City, an old friend of the Fall family, were in the defense reservation to the right of the aisle.

Geronimo's Son Present.

On this side and just behind Fall were a picturesque group of more old friends, among them Robert Geronimo, the full-blooded Apache and son of the famous Indian warrior; A. F. Burke, Sheriff of Orero County, in which is situated Three Rivers; ex-Governor Curry of New Mexico, a cowboy or two, and a few others, some old, others young, but all friends of the convicted man.

It was 10:25 o'clock when the rumors that a verdict had been reached were confirmed. This was when Justice Hitz requested the lawyers to come to his chambers.

There could be but two reasons for that request, one to discuss the amount of bail, which was subsequently fixed at $5,000, and the other as to what course to pursue in the matter of the imposition of sentence.

Half an hour passed before the lawyers re-entered the court room. One look at Frank J. Hogan, chief counsel for the defense, was all the confirmation needed of the report that the verdict was guilty. His face was pale to the point of ashiness and the smile he usually displays was missing.

Silence Follows Verdict.

Mark Thompson was as white as a sheet. Wilton J. Lambert and William B. Leahy, the other Fall lawyers, looked very solemn.

Owen J. Roberts of Philadelphia, who directed the prosecution of Fall, walked slowly to his seat. Asked if the verdict was guilty, he replied: "I can't answer now." He did not have to. Everybody in the court, except the Fall women, knew what had happened.

Justice Hitz entered the court room at 11 o'clock. He nodded to the deputy marshal, and the jury filed in and took their seats. Mr. Norris, a 28-year-old bank teller, was the foreman and held a blue document in his hand. The jury was told to stand.

"Have you agreed on a verdict?" the clerk asked.

"Yes."

"What is it?"

"Guilty, with a recommendation to the mercy of the court," replied Mr. Norris.

For a moment the silence was oppressive. Then Mrs. C. C. Chase, eldest daughter of the defendant, buried her head in her hands, her sobs carrying to every part of the room. Her sister, Mrs. Brant Elliott, was sobbing too, and for a brief moment or so, so was Mrs. Fall. Mrs. Doheny leaned over and tried to comfort the grief-stricken women.

All Touched by Pathos.

So did Father Joseph and Mrs. Hogan, wife of Fall's chief counsel. Then it was that Mrs. Fall wiped the tears from her eyes and forced her way to the invalid chair in which was slumped the broken form of her husband. There was no one in the room but who was touched by the pathos of the scene.

All this lasted but a minute or two. Justice Hitz had turned to the jury and was addressing the eight men and four women whose discharge from further duty was to follow.

Justice Hitz, for the jury and for the record, wanted it made plain that the government had been willing to postpone the trial when Fall collapsed in court two weeks ago, and that the only reason it had continued to today's tragic end was because the defense lawyers and Fall himself had insisted it should go on.

Jury Told of Physician's Report.

As soon as the verdict was announced, Justice Hitz addressed the jury.

"I think, in fairness to you and to counsel on both sides and to Mr. Fall, that you should know, now that you have rendered a verdict, of certain proceedings which took place in your absence and which were not communicated to you by my order," he said.

"On a certain day, and I think it was on a Wednesday, Mr. Fall did not appear, and it was announced by his counsel that he was ill and could not be present. I then asked several physicians of high professional standing and experience, and without any interest in this case, to examine Mr. Fall. These examinations consumed a day or two, during which you did not sit.

"At the end of those examinations the physicians reported to me that Mr. Fall was suffering from a form of bronchial pneumonia, of a low type, as they called it, and that he was ill and that, in their judgment, not able to go forward with the trial."

Justice Hitz then told of the discussion among counsel that followed the report. He said government counsel proposed a mistrial, but that Mr. Fall's counsel opposed that move, and asked that the case should be continued until the next Monday. Those occurrences took place on a Friday morning.

Entitled to Speedy Trial.

"I then continued the case until 3 o'clock of that day, to see what should transpire in the meantime," said Justice Hitz. "At 3 o'clock Mr. Fall appeared in person, and with his counsel and with his physician, and demanded that the trial should proceed.

"My own information, although it is not authentic or accurate, is to the effect that that did not meet altogether with the approval of defendant's counsel as a matter of wisdom, but it seemed that it was Mr. Fall's desire.

"The court realized that the posture of the case was such that it greatly increased the difficulties and labors of counsel on both sides, increased the difficulties of the jury and of the judge in dealing with the situation, but I thought then, and I think now, that all other considerations had to deal with the constitutional right of the defendant to a speedy trial if he demanded it; and he did demand it, in person and by attorney, and in the presence of his physician and his family. So, therefore, the trial proceeded at that time.

"Since you, ladies and gentlemen of the jury, knew nothing about these matters, I thought I ought to tell you before I dismiss you."

When Justice Hitz concluded, the jury was polled, each man and woman answering that "guilty with recommendation to mercy" was his or her verdict.

With the jury dismissed, Mr. Hogan rose to his feet.

"I now give your Honor notice," he said, "that we will present a motion for a new trial, and a motion for arrest of judgment, and I suggest that the bond in this case be continued until these matters may be passed upon."

"Certainly," replied Justice Hitz.

A moment more and the justice was gone.

Mrs. Chase and Mrs. Elliott were sobbing, and Mrs. Fall was fighting her way to the side of her husband. Mark Thompson, slumped in his seat, suddenly toppled over and on to the floor. His appearance, as he lay there with a hundred curious eyes focused on him, was that of a dead man. A bailiff called for a doctor. Dr. Safford, physician to Fall, answered.

They worked over Mr. Thompson ten minutes before he was revived. Then he was carried to an automobile and taken to his rooms in the Mayflower.

Fall Returns to Hotel.

Mr. Hogan, when Mr. Thompson collapsed, almost lost control of himself.

"Bring back that jury and let them laugh at this, too," he exclaimed, pointing to the prostrate figure of his associate counsel.

In the meantime Mr. Fall was being lifted back into the wheel chair. Once again the big automobile rug was wrapped about him and he was wheeled from the court room.

Mr. Fall was bundled into an automobile and, with Mrs. Fall and the daughters, returned to the Hotel Mayflower, where it was said this afternoon Mr. Fall was bearing up well, all things considered.

The departure of the Falls, however, did not end the excitement. Several women who have attended every session of the trial, none of them connected with the Fall or Doheny families in any way, gave vent to their feelings in the corridor. One of them was the wife of one of the jurors. She was screaming mad.

This latter woman rushed up to Deputy Marshal Mullan and demanded to know "where that jury is." She wanted to say something to her husband she said and she did not care who knew. Mullan said he did not know where the jury was.

Juror's Wife Makes Scene.

The woman rushed from the court house and into the park facing Fifth Street.

Then she found her husband. The jury was posing for the news reels.

"You miserable rat," the woman shouted, pointing her finger at her husband.

"Come out here where I can get my hands on you," she added, when court attachés appeared on the scene and ordered her to subside. She did.

That was the end of the excitement.

Asked when Mr. Doheny would be called for trial on the indictment charging the bribery of a public official, Mr. Roberts said it would probably be in the first part of January.

On Nov. 18, in the United States court at Los Angeles, the government, Mr. Roberts explained, will begin the trial of a civil suit for the restoration to the navy of wells leased by Mr. Fall to Mr. Doheny which were not included in the leases which were the basis of the action that was concluded today.

Files New Trial Motion.

Late this afternoon Mr. Hogan filed his motion for a new trial of the Fall bribery case in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. He cited thirty alleged errors in Justice Hitz's rulings in the course of the trial itself and in the court's charge to the jury yesterday.

Admission into evidence of Sinclair's payment of more than $269,000 to Fall was the basis of most of the errors alleged by the defense. The admission of this evidence, the defense asserts, was "improper and erroneous" and that when Justice Hitz in his charge described the Sinclair transaction as of the same kind as the Doheny transaction it was not only incorrect and improper, but also prejudicial.

"The court's general charge to the jury was improper and unlawful, unlawful for that it was argumentative and such could have been properly made by prosecuting counsel, but not properly and lawfully made by a presiding judge charged with the duty of directing the jury in matters of law," the defense motion concludes.

To Hear Arguments Next Friday.

"The court's general charge to the jury was in substance and in effect a manifest and obvious indication and direction that the jury should return a verdict of guilty, coupled with a recommendation to mercy, and the verdict returned resulted not from the evidence but from that indication and substantial direction.

"The court by the manner in which he read the granted special instructions, which it was this defendant's right to have given to the jury with the full force and effect of all of the correct statements of law therein contained in substance and in fact reduced those instructions to impotency and deprived the defendant of the benefit thereof.

"The verdict is contrary to the evidence and to the weight of the evidence. The verdict is contrary to the law."

Justice Hitz announced he would hear arguments on the motion next Friday. At the time he will probably fix a date for sentencing Fall.

Roberts Expresses Sympathy.

Owen J. Roberts, chief prosecutor of Mr. Fall in the bribery trial, said, after hearing the verdict:

"I am personally very sorry for Secretary Fall. The duty that I have had in this case has been an unpleasant one. But I have done only what I felt was the duty of a sworn official.

"I am satisfied that the verdict was right and was in accordance with the evidence. The health of the body politic and the vindication of the pure principles of government are always far more important than the welfare or health of any one man. This fact, and this fact only, made it necessary that the government try the case and have a record written in the court, characterizing the official dereliction involved in the case."

Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, who was the prosecutor of the Senate oil lease investigating committee, said:

"I can't help but feel the sympathy for Fall which his serious illness and weakened condition must excite in the breast of every one, but, nevertheless, the jury did its obvious duty notwithstanding the condition of the culprit.

"Every right-minded person ought to be gratified that this large measure of justice has been done.

"Senator Pomerene and Mr. Roberts are entitled to unstinted praise for the courage and persistency they have exhibited, and for the high talent they have displayed.

Trial Grew Out of Oil Leases.

The bribery charge against Mr. Fall was one of the many civil and criminal prosecutions growing out of the exposure of the naval oil lease scandals by a Senate investigating committee which went into the action of Mr. Fall in granting leases on the navy's oil reserves in California and Wyoming to Mr. Doheny and Mr. Sinclair after secret negotiations.

Within a month after he had secured drilling rights on the so-called Teapot Dome reserve in Wyoming on April 7, 1922, Mr. Sinclair, it was found, paid Mr. Fall a total of $269,100 in Liberty bonds and cash, and subsequent cash advances brought the total to $304,100.

On April 2, 1922, Mr. Fall executed a long-pending contract with Mr. Doheny under which the latter, in return for the construction of navy fuel oil storage tanks at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, was to receive exclusive drilling rights on the Elk Hills reserve in California.

Was Paid $100,000 in Cash.

At the height of the negotiations, which began in July, 1921, Mr. Doheny, on Nov. 30, 1921, advanced what he and Mr. Fall have insisted was a $100,000 loan to the then Secretary of the Interior, sending the money to Washington by the late E. L. Doheny Jr. in a "little black bag."

Mr. Fall, pressed by the Senate committee to explain his sudden affluence, flatly denied having received any money from either Mr. Sinclair or Mr. Doheny and asserted he had borrowed $100,000 from E. B. McLean, the Washington publisher, to finance additions to his New Mexico ranch properties.

Subsequently, after Mr. McLean denied the loan, Mr. Doheny appeared before the committee and admitted having "lent" Fall $100,000 to tide the latter over temporary financial difficulties.

Owen J. Roberts and Atlee Pomerene, former Senator from Ohio, appointed special government counsel, instituted proceedings to invalidate both the Sinclair and Doheny leases on the ground of fraud, and indictments charging conspiracy in both cases and bribery in the Fall-Doheny negotiations were obtained.

Acquitted on Conspiracy Charge.

The result of the litigation to date has been, in addition to the United States Supreme Court decisions invalidating the leases as "shot through with fraud and corruption," the acquittal of Fall and Doheny on the conspiracy charge, the acquittal of Mr. Sinclair in a separate trial on a similar indictment, and the jailing of Mr. Sinclair last June to serve a total of nine months for contempt of the Senate and of the District Supreme Court.

The contempt of the Senate charge on which he was convicted and sentenced to serve three months grew out of Sinclair's refusal to tell his connection with the Continental Trading Company, Ltd., oil deal.

The first attempt to try Mr. Sinclair on the conspiracy charges ended in a mistrial in November, 1927, when the oil man was accused of jury shadowing.

Convicted of contempt of court, he was sentenced to serve six months in jail, and his chief aid, H. Mason Day, was given three months. A second trial on the conspiracy charge resulted in the acquittal of Mr. Sinclair.

ENGINEERS ENDORSE ST. LAWRENCE PLAN

But Council Asks Hoover to Include Civilian Experts on International Board.

FAVOR POTOMAC PROJECT

Would Reconstruct Canal Washington Built as Tribute to Him—Engineering Museum Urged.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Appointment by President Hoover of civilian engineers on the proposed International Board of Engineers to plan the construction of a waterway for ocean-going vessels from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic by way of the St. Lawrence River and the Welland Canal was urged by the committee on public affairs of the American Engineering Council at the closing session of the administrative board of the council here this afternoon.

The proposed board would include an equal number of American and Canadian representatives. The American members of the board will be a representative of the Army Corps of Engineers and others to be appointed by the President. The council officially endorsed the bill to provide the waterway, introduced by Representative Mapes, but recommended that a representation of civilian engineers be included on the board which will work on the project.

The administrative board decided that the engineering profession should undertake the reconstruction of the Potomac Canal as its part in the George Washington bi-centennial celebration of 1932 and in the tribute to the engineering ability of the first President.

The Potomac Canal is the only relic of Washington as an engineer left in this country, according to Major Gardners Williams, who drafted the recommendation favoring the project. The canal was built by Washington to take boats around the Great Falls of the Potomac River.

Approval was given to the suggestion of the committee on research of the council that a group of experts be appointed by Arthur W. Berresford, president of the American Engineering Council, to keep with the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Department of Commerce in making a study of the problem involved in the designing of airports.

The board also approved a bill authorizing the employment of civilian consulting engineers for the air corps and the Ordnance Department, but did not favor the proposed compensation for the engineers employed, which would be $50 a day with a maximum compensation in a year of $3,500.

The council adopted a report favoring the Reed bill, which would authorize the Secretary of War to loan aeronautical equipment and material to accredited schools, colleges, universities and other institutions for purposes of conducting research and experimentation.

The resolution offered in the House by Representative McLeod for a commission to study the causes and remedies of business depressions and unemployment was approved.

Other measures approved by the council include a resolution suggesting the establishment of a commission to plan a national museum of engineering and industry, a bill creating a safety division in the Bureau of Labor Statistics, and a similar measure providing for the coordination of the public health activities of the government.

The council opposed bills framed by Senator Walsh of Massachusetts and Representative Bacon to require contractors engaged in public works to give certain preferences in the employment of labor. Opposition was expressed to the proposed measures of Representatives James and Schneider to prevent the use of stop watches and other time-measuring devices in the postal service.

URGES AID FOR DENTISTRY.

Dr. A. T. Newman Sees Dearth of Funds for Research Work.

The lack of resources for research in dentistry in this city was emphasized last night by Dr. Allen T. Newman, newly appointed dean of the College or Dentistry of New York University. He spoke at a dinner given in his honor by the faculty and Alumni Association of the college at the Hotel Roosevelt.

"I notice in looking about this great metropolis that there are very few contributors toward maintenance of dental schools. Almost every form of health service is heavily endowed except dentistry," said Dr. Newman. "We must acquaint the public with the fact that a great many children are permitted to go on in life as caricatures of human beings because of the inability of parents to pay for urgently needed appliances for the correction of disabilities.

"It seems to me that the greatest amount of happiness would come to the benefactor who would remove from the lives of hundreds of disabled children the dark shadow of hopelessness."

More than 350 alumni and faculty members attended the dinner.

ART SALE NETS $17,820.

Love Seat With 18th Century Tapestry Brings $625.

A carved and gilded over-mantel mirror in Chinese Chippendale style, with open-work carved leaf scrollings, crested by rococo scrolls and dripping stalactites centred with a chinoiserie pavilion and surmounted by birds with spread wings, went to A. L. Hoffman for $350.

F. S. Digman paid $325 for an Elizabethan style carved oak refectory table. A Flemish needlework panel with fruiting trees, flowering shrubs, animals and figures was sold to L. Medina for $320.

The combined denominations will be known as the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches, and an invitation will be extended to other Evangelical bodies to join.

TWO SAY THEY TOOK $63,000 TO WARDER

away and Dell' Osso started back to the witness stand he shot a vindictive look at Warder and muttered:

"He killed my brother. He sucked his veins white with his demands for money."

Both Justice Tompkins and Mr. Cuff demanded to know what the remark was, and Justice Tompkins ordered that it be stricken from the record. It is doubtful if any of the jury heard the remark, because it was repeated in low tones to the judge.

Mr. Cuff asked Dell' Rosso if he had borrowed from the Ferrari bank and received a negative reply. He then read from a bank examiner's report of a loan to Dell' Osso and a statement that he had assets of $230,000. Dell' Rosso denied either the loan or the credit statement.

Mr. Cuff pecked away at details of the witness's testimony, trying to pin him down to such details as:

"Were the street lights lit when you arrived at Warder's house? Were they lit when you got out? Were they lit when you got back downtown?"

Each visit was taken up in detail in this fashion along with inquiries as to the weather. Dell'Osso became slightly confused at times. Then Mr. Cuff asked him in detail about what he told the grand jury and the District Attorney about the dates of the payments. The indictment on which Mr. Warder is now being tried was amended to show the payment of the bribe was on Sept. 21 instead of Oct. 29. Mr. Cuff tried to show that Dell'Osso had amended his testimony to correspond and was uncertain of the dates.

Examined on Indictments.

He examined him at length as to the other indictments pending and then sought to present the indictments in evidence. Justice Tompkins sustained Mr. Todd's objection, which was evidently an unexpected blow to Mr. Cuff.

Mr. Cuff tried to learn if Dell'Osso had a written memorandum of payments to Warder. He asked:

"Did you make any memorandum of the amounts you say you gave to Mr. Warder at these various times?"

"No, sir."

"How do you know the amounts?"

"I just remember in my mind."

"Didn't you think it was important enough to write it down?"

"I had no interest in it."

"Amounts ranging from $10,000, $20,000, $50,000 mean nothing to you? Is that right?"

"It wasn't my money."

When Mr. Cuff was pressing his assault he had Dell'Osso confused and Justice Tompkins interposed with a remark that he intended to protect the witness.

Mr. Cuff took umbrage at that and said that the remark was a reflection on him and asked for withdrawal of a juror. Justice Tompkins said:

"If the witness's understanding of English is limited and he is doubtful as to the meaning of any question put to him, I intend to make sure that he understands before answering."

J. Vincent Labate, blinking and sleepy-eyed, testified in flat monotones of delivering two sealed envelopes and $20,000 cash to Mrs. Warder. He got $10,000 from Ferrari in March, 1928, and the balance from Anthony Di Paola, cashier of the bank in Harlem, he said, and took it to Mrs. Warder with the remark:

"Mr. Ferrari sent this to you."

"What did she say?" Justice Tompkins asked.

"Thanks," was Labate's laconic reply.

Mr. Cuff's cross-examination did not upset the deliberate composure of the witness. He was asked about his wholesale grocery business near the Brooklyn navy yard.

"As a matter of fact," Mr. Cuff asked, "that wholesale grocery was a bootlegging business, wasn't it?"

"No, sir," said Labate, unmoved.

"Weren't you in the distillery business once?"

"Yes, in Waterloo, N. Y."

"Weren't you interested in some of those businesses of Ferrari which had to do with bootlegging?"

"No, sir."

Mr. Cuff delved into the business of the Delta and the Post Securities companies, which were shown by testimony in the Moreland inquiry to be dummy concerns operated by Ferrari. They might have been valid concerns for all the admissions made by Labate. He insisted that all he had done was to follow instructions in regard to deposits.

Concetta Marino, ledger clerk at the bank, was again on the stand to identify ledger sheets showing manipulations of accounts. The prosecution also called Joseph Paterno of Paterno Brothers, the realty concern which owns the house in which Mr. Warder has his apartment. Thomas F. MacDonald and Edward F. Dinehart, employes of Paterno Brothers. Their testimony was limited to identifying documents.

The State is seeking to introduce the lease, check and letter which were presented in the Moreland investigation showing that Ferrari guaranteed Warder's rent and paid it the first month. Mr. Cuff successfully prevented the admission of the documents into evidence and the question was argued after the jury was dismissed. Justice Tompkins will rule on the question later.

The trial will proceed Monday.

CITY TRUST OFFICIAL HELD IN $30,000 THEFT

Palumbo, Former Bank Examiner, Is Accused of Making Dummy Loans in Relative's Name.

Benedetto Palumbo of Bellaire, L. I., a vice president of the City Trust Company and manager of the Williamsburg branch of the Ferrari bank, was arrested yesterday in Brooklyn Supreme Court on a charge of grand larceny. His arrest was ordered by Assistant District Attorney Louis Goldstein, who has been presenting evidence of the City Trust failure to the Brooklyn grand jury.

Palumbo, five years an inspector and later an examiner in the State Banking Department, was held in $30,000 bail, which he could not furnish, and was remanded to Raymond Street jail. While in the Banking Department Palumbo passed upon the original application of the late Francesco M. Ferrari for a banking charter. Later he became a private banker and after a time joined forces with Ferrari.

He is held on a short affidavit charging him with the theft of $18,000 from the bank on Oct. 31, 1928, and $8,000 on Dec. 7, 1928. Mr. Goldstein said that Palumbo may have obtained $60,000 or more from the bank by means of dummy loans in the name of his brother-in-law, Giuseppi Granozzi, who fled to Italy in August and has been unavailable to the prosecutor's staff.

In view of these circumstances Mr. Goldstein asked Justice Arthur S. Tompkins to hold Palumbo in $50,000 bail when he was brought to the Criminal Court Building in Manhattan and arraigned before the afternoon session of the trial of Frank H. Warder, former Superintendent of Banks, for receiving a $10,000 bribe from Ferrari.

Palumbo will have a preliminary hearing in Brooklyn this afternoon before Justice Tompkins in the Brooklyn Supreme Court. At that time the Brooklyn grand jury also will report indictments arising out of the investigation of the affairs of the Williamsburg branch of the bank.

William A. Blank, 105 Court Street, Brooklyn, attorney for Sydney G. Harnett, indicted in Brooklyn, also will appear before Justice Tompkins to ask for dismissal of the indictment against his client on the ground that the extraordinary grand jury exceeded its powers, in that Mr. Harnett was not a director of the City Trust or its predecessor, but of the Atlantic State Bank, which was merged with the Harlem Bank of Commerce before that institution changed its name and organization to become the City Trust Company. Mr. Blank argues that the singular noun "predecessor" in Governor Roosevelt's proclamation limits the scope of the special grand jury.

Former Judge Francis X. Mancuso and Isidore Siegeltuch, City Trust directors, under indictment for misdemeanors in Manhattan, filed demurrers yesterday. Through their attorneys, Frank Aranow and Robert S. Johnston respectively, they allege that the indictments are unconstitutional and that the facts set forth do not constitute a crime.

SHAW SEES AMERICANS BECOMING RED INDIANS

He Says Complexions Here Get Redder and Redder—Holds Women Are Treated Like Squaws

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—George Bernard Shaw, according to The Daily Express, gave some stinging answers to questions from a large party of American students at a London hotel today.

A girl student asked:

"Is there any hope of civilising America?"

Mr. Shaw replied:

"Americans are a barbarous people and are returning to red Indian life. Your figures and faces are changing and your complexions get redder and redder. You treat your women like squaws and you are going back to feathers."

Mr. Shaw told the students that America had become the centre of the universe because of Britain's war debt and that while Britons and Americans openly abused each other there would be no danger of war between them.

"But when dislike is concealed, look out," said Mr. Shaw darkly. He warned the students that if they left London without seeing his "Apple Cart" they would be received with contempt in America.

Professor Maphis, on behalf of the students, adds The Express, thanked Mr. Shaw and expressed a hope that he would some day learn more about Americans by visiting the United States.

"All Americans worth anything come over to see me," replied Mr. Shaw indulgently.

Ferdinand at Radoslavoff Funeral.

Yale-Army, Harvard-Dartmouth, Princeton-Navy Leading Games in East Today

INTEREST IN EAST CENTRES ON 3 GAMES

Yale-Army, Navy-Princeton and Harvard-Dartmouth Hold Main Attention Today.

CADETS, MIDDIES FAVORED

Issue at Harvard in Doubt—Fordham Meets Davis and Elkins, N. Y. U. Plays Butler.

COLUMBIA FACES WILLIAMS

Chicago-Purdue, Stanford-Southern California, Syracuse-Brown Are Among Other Contests of Day.

By ROBERT F. KELLEY.

With every section of the country holding at least three or four important games, the East looks this week-end with perhaps most interest at the performances of the members of the erstwhile Big Three—Yale, Harvard and Princeton. At Cambridge Harvard's team faces Dartmouth; at New Haven Yale plays Army, and at Princeton Navy comes up for its game.

These games stand out even with Fordham's interesting team facing recognizedly hard competition from Davis and Elkins at the Polo Grounds, New York University playing Butler at the Yankee Stadium, and if the Eastern boundary is put as far as Pittsburgh, Notre Dame playing Carnegie Tech, and Syracuse playing at Brown.

In the Middle West, the Chicago-Purdue game stands out as perhaps the most important and apt to be the hardest fought, though Illinois seeks revenge against Michigan for the only blot on its 1928 record. A crippled Iowa team meets Wisconsin, Ohio State plays Indiana, and Nebraska and Missouri come together in a game apt to produce some rugged football.

Little Rest for California.

On the Pacific Coast the meeting between Stanford and Southern California draws by far the most interest, with every prospect of a fine game. California, after its successful visit to Pennsylvania, is not apt to have much of a rest from the Olympic Club.

In the South, the games between Georgia Tech and Tulane, and Georgia's visit to Florida are perhaps the most interesting to Northern eyes.

Among other Eastern colleges, competition indicates there are very surprising results, is not apt to be very keen. Pittsburgh's very good looking team ought not to have much trouble with Allegheny nor Pennsylvania with Lehigh. Williams comes to Baker Field to play Columbia and, though expected to furnish interesting competition, cannot be reckoned as a threat to the Blue and White. Both Columbia and Cornell are looking forward to next week and their game, Cornell without any game today to bother about. Colgate's strong team is favored widely over Providence and Amherst ought to stop Wesleyan.

The Yale, Harvard and Princeton games are of interest because they are of vital importance to the colleges in action. In two of these games there have been fairly strong favorites installed. At Harvard, the issue remains very much in doubt, which makes this contest a bit more widely discussed than the other two, but no more important.

Harvard Proved Quality.

Harvard, playing its first important game of the year last week, tied Army. Harvard entered the game a favorite and with high hopes of proving the best Crimson team in recent years. Harvard did not win, but those who watched the game were convinced of the quality of this Harvard team.

There was some talk of Harvard's much discussed line being outplayed by Army, but it is difficult to agree with this. Truly, Army's second half rush was aided tremendously by the success of Murrel at the left side of the Harvard line. But Murrel had the assistance of a beautifully-timed play which employed a tremendous amount of interfering power.

Dartmouth, owing to its rather one-sided defeat of Columbia, remains something of a question. Long scores are always puzzling. Columbia is convinced that Dartmouth is one of the great teams of the country. If Dartmouth defeats Harvard it can certainly be numbered as such, perhaps as the outstanding team of the East.

Yale Has Latent Strength.

At New Haven, an Army team which was a bit green at the start of the Harvard game opens play a strong favorite over Yale. This is logical enough, for Army played fine football against Harvard and Yale has not yet displayed anything like its power, polish or smartness. However, there is latent strength at Yale.

The varied attack tried at the start of the season has been simplified to some extent and Yale is very apt to be a better team today than it has been all season, despite discouraging reports from practice during the past few days. If Yale fails badly in this game, the followers of the Elis are apparently in for a disappointing season, for this week marks the turning point where changes for the better ought to come unless late season games can be expected to produce something akin to surprising results.

Of these two games where favorites have been installed, perhaps the best chance for an upset is at Princeton, where football is played only between Sept. 15 and the end of the season. The teams there are very slow in starting. The Tigers have lost to Brown and to Cornell and their own mistakes have been real contributions to their defeats; things like constantly recurring offside plays. In addition, the fire and dash usually associated with Princeton teams have been notably lacking so far.

It is a very big team and a strong one and has a great back in Eddie Wittmer. It is facing a fine Navy squad that has lost only by a single touchdown to Notre Dame, but Princeton's rushes have been aiming for this game on an all or nothing basis and the Tigers may make things very interesting for the Midshipmen.

Rockne Arrives at Pittsburgh In Wheel-Chair to Guide Team

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 25 (AP).—Knute Rockne, coach of the Notre Dame football team, arrived here today in a wheel-chair to guide his team in the game with Carnegie Tech tomorrow.

The last time the Notre Dame team played here Rockne stayed away, in the belief his men would not need his services to beat Carnegie. Carnegie won the game and spoiled Notre Dame's claim on the 1926 mythical football championship.

Rockne this time was determined to come to Pittsburgh despite his recent illness, and found it possible by means of the wheel-chair.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 25.—Princeton finished work today for the game which it hopes will at last start the Tiger back on the right road. Smarting from defeats at the hands of Brown and Cornell, the Tigers will face the Navy in Palmer Stadium tomorrow before a crowd of nearly 50,000. They go into action very much the under dog, but the men, the coaches and the college itself are determined that the season's turning point will be in this game.

Princeton's last work today was held in the stadium where the game is to be played instead of the usual practice ground on the baseball field. Coach Roper and his assistants kept the men inside the barred gates of the stadium for the better part of an hour, but the work was light.

Many Substitutions Made.

The main part of the time was taken up with a signal drill by the starting team. However, substitutions were made freely, so that all of the men likely to get into action tomorrow ran through signals.

Before this the punters, Bennett, Scarlett, Carey and Lowry, worked under the eyes of Keene Fitzpatrick. Two or three kick-offs were received and then the men were sent in to the showers to wait for the start of activities tomorrow.

The usual additional excitement of the arrival of the visiting team is missing here tonight, for the Navy players are not arriving for any of their visiting games this season much before game time. Their train is due at the Princeton station at 12:50 tomorrow afternoon and the players, fully dressed, will go direct to the stadium, ready for a brief practice before the start of the game.

Injured Players Are Back.

The Navy ranks as the favorite tonight, but there is widespread feeling that Princeton, with all of its injured players back in action, is apt to play its best football of the season. Roper has said that the success or failure of the remainder of the season rests on this game and Princeton is heading into action ready to let go with everything at its command.

By WILLIAM D. RICHARDSON.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 25.—One of football's most ancient feuds, dating as far back as 1882, will be renewed at the Harvard Stadium tomorrow when the Dartmouth and Harvard elevens clash in their thirty-sixth Fall tussle. A capacity crowd of close to 60,000 will be on hand for the meeting that is expected to shed considerable light on the 1929 football situation, since neither team has yet tasted defeat.

Both Harvard and Dartmouth held short practice sessions here today, each restricting its workout to signal drills, passing and punting. At the end of the day Coaches Horween of Harvard and Cannell of Dartmouth pronounced themselves as satisfied. Except for one man, each eleven will pit its full strength in tomorrow's affray. Ben Ticknor, regular Crimson centre, has been out of the game all week with an infected foot, and his understudy, Gildea, freshman centre two years ago, is slated to start in that position. The Green team is in tip-top shape from end to end.

Judging from appearances tonight, Dartmouth is expected to win. The entire student body came down out of the Hanover hills this afternoon brimming over with confidence that the shifty Green line which raised so much havoc against Columbia a week ago will do the same thing against the Crimson forwards and that the fleet Al Marsters will have another field day.

Harvard supporters, on the other hand, are banking their hopes on the fact that their eleven has been already tested and not found wanting, whereas Dartmouth has yet to meet its peer. They have great respect for the mighty Marsters, who is completing his career this year and who two years ago led the Green attack that swept the Crimson down to defeat by a 20—6 score.

Yale Suffers a Rather Big Loss 10 Day When It Was Learned That Wilson Is Out With Strained Muscles in His Back.

His Place at Quarter Will Be Taken by Hall, Who Will Call Signals Except When Booth Is Sent Into the Fray.

Hoot Ellis will also probably see service as quarterback. Barres, a sophomore, will start at right end in place of Walker and it is possible that Ferris may displace Marting at left tackle. Truxtun Hare also may be put in at the last moment at left guard in place of Losser.

There will be two changes in the Army line-up. Lazar will start at centre instead of Miller and Gibner will play quarter in the place of Bowman, who was hurt in the Harvard game. The forecast for tomorrow is clear skies with rising temperature.

By ALLISON DANZIG.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 25.—A football game will be played in the Yale Bowl tomorrow at 2 P. M., and because of the fact that one team is so predominantly the general favorite its interest has fallen off to such an extent that only 80,000 spectators will see it.

Those who entertain the suspicion that the greatest of all college games is losing its allurement as a spectacle should have seen the line that formed at the Yale Athletic Association offices today as the Elt undergraduates sought to get the few tickets that might be turned back at the last moment. Any one who hasn't a reservation for the Yale-Army game might as well remain at home and compromise on the radio, for even the speculators can't help him.

This will be the twenty-ninth meeting between the Bulldog and the Army Mule since the series started in 1893, and the oldest inhabitant cannot remember when there was such a demand for tickets as there has been for tomorrow's game. Hotel accommodations have long been snapped up, every train brings its quota of alumni from parts of the country, and tomorrow the town will be inundated as the hosts arrive by airplane, special trains and automobiles.

Extra Trains to Bring Cadets.

Two extra trains will bring 1,200 gray-clad cadets from West Point, who will play their part with their parade in the bowl at 1:30, and their lusty cheering in helping to make this classic the great pageant it is. Secretary of War James W. Good will be present to receive the salute, flanked by Governor Trumbull, General W. R. Smith, commandant at the Military Academy, and General Preston Brown, when the gray uniformed cadets pass in review on the green.

Major and Mrs. John Coolidge are also expected to be in the huge saucer when the game starts and Charles M. Schwab is bringing a party in his private car. Secretary Good will be the guest of President and Mrs. James Rowland Angell and will sit on the Yale side for the first half of the game, after which he will be escorted to midfield by President Angell, to be met by General Smith and General Brown, with whom they will sit on the Army side.

All this ceremony, however vital it is to make the Yale-Army game the big spectacle it is, will be only a part of the proceedings in the bowl. There will be a football game and, regardless of the fact that no one here seems to think that Yale has a real chance of avenging the 18—6 defeat of last year, it promises to be as hard fought and filled with thrills as any that has been played since the series, interrupted after the 1912 contest, was resumed in 1921.

Huge Men in Each Line.

For one thing, two of the biggest lines in the East will go up against each other. Every man in the Army line, with the exception of Hillsinger, towers six feet or more and from end to end the seven forwards average 188 pounds.

When the Army team arrived at the bowl today with Head Coach Biff Jones, Major Philip Sasse, Captain Wells, Trainer Frank Wendle and the other assistant coaches and went out to practice, every one was impressed with the ruggedness and Samsonian proportions of the orange-clad cadets and with the size of the job confronting a Yale team that will have to break through such formidable protection as stands in front of the great Red Cagle and the powerful John Murrel.

As Mal Stevens was departing after greeting the Army coaches some one remarked to him on the number of Herculeses on the Army team.

"Yes, they're big, all right," said the Yale coach, and then he added, with a determined set to his jaw, "but we're not exactly Lilliputians ourselves."

Yale is big enough to take care of itself, for it will present a line that will average 188 pounds from end to end and that measures up close to 6 feet also. If this Yale line finds itself after the preparation it had against the rugged Brown forwards, and gives little Albie Booth, Snead Miller, Bob Hall and Dunn the necessary protection, Army is likely to find itself in a much closer fight than is expected.

Wilson Out With Injuries.

Yale suffered a rather big loss 10-day when it was learned that Wilson is out with strained muscles in his back. His place at quarter will be taken by Hall, who will call signals except when Booth is sent into the fray. Hoot Ellis will also probably see service as quarterback. Barres, a sophomore, will start at right end in place of Walker and it is possible that Ferris may displace Marting at left tackle. Truxtun Hare also may be put in at the last moment at left guard in place of Losser.

There will be two changes in the Army line-up. Lazar will start at centre instead of Miller and Gibner will play quarter in the place of Bowman, who was hurt in the Harvard game. The forecast for tomorrow is clear skies with rising temperature.

Lange	C.	Lazar
Green	R.G.	Bohlinger

Davis-Elkins Faces Fordham Today; Columbia Plays Williams; N. Y. U. Meets Butler

FORDHAM TO FACE DAVIS-ELKINS TEAM

Each Eleven Will Try to Keep Unbeaten Record Intact at Polo Grounds Today.

CAVANAUGH SHIFTS LINE-UP

Injuries Force Changes for Maroon —Rivals Likely to Resort to Aerial Attack.

SCORES AGAINST OPPONENTS.
Fordham.		Davis-Elkins.
45—Westminster	0	14—West Va.	6
25—St. Bon'v't'e	0	32—St. Louis	12
25—N. Y. U.	0	7—Geneva	0
7—Holy Cross	0	21—Quantico	0

Fordham's undefeated eleven, with four straight victories to its credit, will try to annex its fifth triumph today at the Polo Grounds, where the Maroon clashes with Davis and Elkins at 2:30. The team from Elkins, West Va., is likewise unbeaten.

As indicated by the final practice session in Fordham Field yesterday, Coach Cavanaugh will revert to the aerial game, which he has not stressed since the victory over N. Y. U. Cam Henderson's team, which arrived in New York yesterday, also is well trained in the passing type of attack.

Neither eleven, however, will neglect its running game. Fordham's efforts will be directed at the Davis and Elkins aces, Reagle and Warren, who have earned reputations in the South for being brilliant ball-carriers.

As a result of injuries sustained in the Holy Cross game, Cavanaugh has been forced to make several important changes in his line-up. Miskinis will be in Foley's tackle position, while Conway will be holding down McMahon's halfback post. Conway and the speedy Murphy will do most of the ball-carrying for the Maroon in its running game, while Kloppenburg, Fisher, Elcewics and Murphy will be prominent factors in Fordham's aerial attack.

The probable line-up:

Fordham.		Davis-Elkins.
Kloppenburg	L.E.	Kepner
Miskinis	L.T.	Irvin
Healey	L.G.	Fairbanks
Risso	C.	Hanley

5,000 See Victors Launch Rally in the Second Half Which Brings 13-6 Triumph.

LEVINSON TALLIES ON RUN

30-Yard Dash Puts Winners Ahead, 7-6,—McArdle Scores Washington's Second Touchdown.

Utilizing a brilliant aerial attack which had its opponents completely baffled, the George Washington High School eleven registered its third straight victory of the season when it defeated the Theodore Roosevelt High School team, 13-6, at the Washington Stadium yesterday afternoon. A crowd of 5,000 was present.

The victors were compelled to come from behind in the last two periods of play. Roosevelt had scored a touchdown in the second quarter. Wolf, the fullback, hurled a long pass to Ed De Salvo, who was waiting unmolested behind the goal posts.

With the opening of the second half, Washington made successive gains which carried the ball to midfield. Bill Cohen, Washington fullback, threw a twenty-yard pass to Harry McArdle and on the following play Sam Levinson skirted left end and ran through a broken field for thirty yards to score. He then kicked the extra point which placed his team in the lead, 7-6.

The victors again tallied as a result of long passes, which brought the ball to the ten-yard marker. From that point McArdle went over on the fourth down.

MANHATTAN STRONG FOR ST. JOHN'S TEST

With Exception of Cronin, Team Will Be at Full Strength for Game Today.

WEEK GIVEN TO PASSES

Improvement in Squad's Defense Expected — Burke, Power and Lepis in Form.

With the exception of Captain Cronin, Manhattan College will have its full strength for the first time since the Lafayette game when it lines up for the test with its ancient rival, St. John's College of Brooklyn at Dexter Park today.

Heeding the disastrous results of the St. Francis game last Saturday when the Pennsylvanians made the Jaspers dizzy with forward passes and scored an unexpected 20-0 victory, Coach Schwarzer devoted the entire week to defense against forward passes and a great improvement is expected in this department of the Green and White's defense. With the return to form of Leddy Burke, stellar halfback, Blake Power, plunging fullback, and Lou Lepis, tackle, an improvement in the offensive tactics of the Jaspers may also be looked for.

The probable line-up:

Manhattan.		St. John's.

121	40	131	0

Columbia and Williams meet in their annual football game at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon at Baker Field. Interest in the game is at a high peak, as the contest marks the first comeback attempt of the Lions following their defeat by Dartmouth. In addition to this, Williams is undefeated so far this season, and the Purple outfit comes to this city with high hopes of victory. Last year the Morningside eleven was the only team to defeat Williams, winning 20-6 in a spirited encounter.

Coach Charley Crowley of Columbia holds great respect for the football ability of the Berkshire Hills eleven and every practice session this week at Baker Field has seen the Lions working hard to strengthen their defense against the type of offense expected from the visitors. If past games can be taken as an indication, today's contest probably will see Williams flourishing a clever passing attack.

Columbia has recovered from the Dartmouth game and will be able to send its full strength against Williams. If an opportunity presents itself, Crowley probably will send in several reserves in order to give them the experience and also to rest his regulars for the game with Cornell at Ithaca next week.

Columbia went through its final preparation for the game yesterday by taking part in a light signal drill. Considerable time was spent in working on the interference and in improving the work of the linesmen.

Williams alumni, to the number of several thousand, have purchased many sections of seats in the west stands and this group will be augmented by several hundred Williams undergraduates. The Williams squad arrived in this city last night and went immediately to Travers Island, where it will be quartered until game time.

The probable lineup:

The New York University football team will meet its third major opponent of the season when it plays host to Butler University of Indianapolis at the Yankee Stadium at 2:30 o'clock today. The N. Y. U. freshman team will meet Dean Academy in a preliminary game at 1 o'clock.

The Bulldogs come here for their initial gridiron engagement with N. Y. U. with a veteran team which last year won six of eight contests, losing only to Northwestern and Illinois.

For the Violet team it is the halfway mark on the most ambitious ten-game schedule N. Y. U. has ever attempted, and leaves Coach Meehan's charges with the task of still having to face Georgetown, the University of Georgia, Missouri, Rutgers and Carnegie Tech on successive weeks.

The Hoosier squad of twenty-six arrived yesterday and worked out at the Yankee Stadium. The group appears in full strength for the first time since the beginning of the season, and Boos and Hinchman, two back field stars, who have been on the injured list, are ready to play against the Violet.

Two other Conference engagements are on tomorrow's schedule, as well as four non-Conference clashes.

The Trojans left Los Angeles last night for Palo Alto and the Stanford squad moved out to a secluded country club. Every seat in the stadium, which holds more than 89,000 persons, has been sold and the battle will mark the first time in Cardinal history that the big bowl has been filled to capacity for a mid-season game.

The two teams are tied for the leadership of the Conference with three victories and no defeats, and the winner of tomorrow's battle will be on the inside track for the gridiron championship of the West.

The other two Conference games are to be played in the Northwest. At Corvallis, Ore., State College opposes Idaho. At Seattle, the Universities of Washington and Oregon will meet.

Leading the list of non-Conference encounters is the game at Berkeley between the University of California and the San Francisco Olympic Club. Contests between Washington State and Whitman at Pullman, University of California (Southern branch) and Pomona at Los Angeles, and Montana and Montana State at Butte round out the day's activities.

FOUR GAMES TODAY FOR BIG TEN TEAMS

Michigan, Beaten Twice, Will Try to Upset Illinois—Ohio State Meets Indiana.

CHICAGO-PURDUE TO CLASH

Iowa to Invade Wisconsin—Most of the Elevens Will Be Without Services of Stars.

CHICAGO, Oct. 25 (AP).—Eight Western Conference football teams will go into battle tomorrow to preserve or wreck championship chances.

Put out of the running by two defeats, Michigan's only interest in the campaign is to create as much trouble as possible for teams in the race, and will attempt to upset Illinois for the second consecutive year.

Ohio State will try to add another victory to its record of two straight, when it meets Indiana in Ohio Stadium, and Wisconsin and Iowa will be out to break into the victory column when they meet at Madison. Purdue and Chicago will engage in a contest for unblemished records, each having thus far scored one triumph with no defeats.

Only light workouts were on today's program. Iowa and Indiana left their own camps last night after short drills and planned to take their last practice exercises on enemy fields. Michigan stopped over in Chicago and planned to work out before proceeding to Illinois. Purdue headed for Chicago this morning.

Almost every team was reported to be without the services of one or more stars on the eve of battle. Purdue's fullback, Alex Yunechich, is not expected to be in shape to play against the Maroons, while Chicago is without Red Burgess, its regular fullback. Frosty Peters, Illinois quarterback and drop-kick ace, has a fractured rib and probably will be kept out of action. Five Indiana regulars who accompanied the team to Columbus may not be able to play.

Iowa left for Madison without John Fuhrman, while Captain Wills Glassgow, just recovering from injuries, was not a certain starter.

Minnesota and Northwestern will engage non-Conference opponents, the Gophers entertaining Ripon and the Wildcats meeting Wabash and the Notre Dame reserves in a double-header at Evanston.

GEORGIA TECH ELEVEN TO ENCOUNTER TULANE

Maree and Thomason May Not Play at New Orleans Today—Georgia Meets Florida.

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 25 (AP).—Southern Conference gridiron teams began moving to the scenes of tomorrow's games today.

Georgia Tech, weakened by injuries to two of its stars, entrained for New Orleans to encounter Tulane. Vance Maree, giant fullback, and Stumpy Thomason, speedy halfback, accompanied the team, but were not expected to play.

The Georgia Bulldogs left Athens last night for Jacksonville to take the field against Florida. Armin Waugh, one of the speediest Georgia backs, is definitely out of the game. Marion Dickens is slated to fill his halfback post. Clyde Crabtree, Florida's brilliant quarterback, might not start in the game. An injury suffered in the Tech game and aggravated in practice kept him on the sidelines yesterday.

Tennessee and Washington and Lee are ready to do battle at Roanoke tomorrow. With several injured regulars returned to their squads, both North Carolina and Virginia Poly are ready for their engagement at Chapel Hill. Pete Wyrick, veteran Tarheel quarterback, who was out with an injury for three weeks, will call signals for North Carolina.

Alabama will be without its captain, Billy Hicks, when the Crimson tide meets Sewanee at Birmingham. Virginia Military is all set for Maryland at Richmond.

North Carolina State, Duke and Mississippi will attempt to uphold the standard of the South in intersectional battles. State is en route to East Lansing to play Michigan State. Mississippi invades Dallas to meet Southern Methodist, and Duke visits Philadelphia to play Villanova.

Miss Orcutt, Mrs. Jay Lee of Hackensack and Mrs. Clark Tobin of Essex County were tied for second net at 90, and on the toss Miss Orcutt won the prize. Miss Orcutt's handicap was +1.

WOODS SHOWING WAY IN BILLIARD TOURNEY

Beats Oswald, 100-49, in Eastern Section of National Event—Ponzi Tops Lauri, 100-68.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 25.—With only two more games to be played in the Eastern section of the national pocket billiard title tournament, Arthur Woods, New York veteran, is leading with two games won and no defeats.

Andrew Ponzi got back in the running again when he defeated Onofrio Louri of Brooklyn, 100 to 68, in nine innings. In the sixth inning the Philadelphian dropped forty-eight balls for the high run of the encounter. Lauri's best was 23.

Woods defeated Harry Oswald, 100 to 49, in a match marked by much safety play. It required twenty-four innings. Woods's high run was 27 unfinished, and Oswald's 20.

Tomorrow will bring together Oswald and Ponzi in one game and Woods and Lauri in another.

HAGENLACHER SPLITS BLOCKS WITH COCHRAN

Cochran Wins Afternoon Match in 18.2 Billiards, but Rival Triumphs at Night.

Eric Hagenlacher and Welker Cochran divided the ninth and tenth blocks of their special 5,600-point match at 18.2 balkline billiards played at Dwyer's Broadway Academy yesterday. Hagenlacher, however, continues to lead in points scored with 3,000 to 2,932, with the eleventh and twelfth blocks scheduled to be played today.

In the afternoon block Cochran scored 575 to 300 in ten innings. The winner had a high run of 169, while the loser's best effort was 98.

At night Hagenlacher triumphed, 346 to 232, playing brilliantly to click off a high run of 253, while Cochran had a cluster of 95. The match went four innings.

MRS. JACKSON WINS ONE-DAY TOURNEY

Scores an 84 for Low Gross in Westchester-Fairfield's Last Event for 1929.

CONSOLATION TO MRS. BIRD

Victor Excels in Approaches and Putting—Mrs. Hucknall Is Tied at Second.

By LINCOLN A. WERDEN.

Special to The New York Times.

RYE, N. Y., Oct. 25.—Mrs. H. Arnold Jackson of Greenwich, twice national champion, won the last of the season's one-day tournaments of the Women's Westchester and Fairfield County Golf Association over the Westchester Country Club course today by carrying off the low gross prize with a score of 84.

Fifty-two competed in the event, which usually closes the season, but since the team match between New Jersey and Westchester, which ended in a tie earlier in the week is scheduled to be played again next Friday, the association's tournament year must wait for an official end until that time.

There were several prizes at stake today, one being the consolation award for those who had not won a trophy in any of the events during the year. This award went to Mrs. W. S. Bird of Sleepy Hollow, with a net of 89, after the draw, since both Miss Dorothy Clemons of Sleepy Hollow and Mrs. M. Hall of the home club also returned 89s.

Net Prize to Mrs. Browning.

Mrs. Gilbert Browning of Greenwich, with 101—20—81, captured the first net prize, while Mrs. Thomas Hucknall of Woodway, the Connecticut titleholder, whose gross of eighty-eight tied for second with Mrs. B. F. Briggs of Pelham, received the second net prize with 88—2—86. Mrs. C. T. Russell of Ardsley and Mrs. Edgar Arnold of Greenwich also had nets of 86, but lost in the draw.

Mrs. Briggs, a first-year member in the association and thus far without a handicap rating, accounted for the twelve-hole selected score prize with a 51, since Mrs. Jackson, with a 50, was automatically eliminated, as she had the best gross.

Mrs. Edward A. Fitch of Hudson River had the low round over the eighteen-hole putting course with a 38, and Mrs. E. Vogelsang of Sound Beach took the second prize with a 39. Miss Catherine Singer, the county champion, did not play, but acted as tournament chairman, while a number of other low-handicap players failed to return cards.

Putts and Approaches Well.

Mrs. Jackson putted and approached well on the second nine, which she played in 39, two under women's par, and her coordinated short game was chiefly responsible for the four consecutive pars she had starting at the twelfth. A birdie 3 at the sixteenth was the direct result of a 15-foot putt. Mrs. Hucknall could not get the touch of the greens, being out in 43, and although Mrs. Briggs otherwise played well she spoiled her round with a 7 at the second and another at the long seventeenth.

Seeks to Stop Illinois Racing As Violation of Constitution

CHICAGO, Oct. 25 (AP).—Seeking to stop horse racing in Illinois, a petition for an injunction against the Exposition Park Jockey Club of Aurora, Ill., was prepared tonight for filing in the Circuit Court tomorrow on behalf of August J. Reding.

The constitutionality of the bill which permits horse racing and betting in the State is challenged in the petition, which attorneys said would be filed before Judge Newhall of Kane County. The petition alleges that the bill is in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

Parnell Bound Wins the Beechnut Handicap at Empire City Track

BEECHNUT HANDICAP TO PARNELL BOUND

Sanford's Colt, Second Choice at 2 to 1, Beats Questionnaire at Empire City.

IRISH HOLIDAY WINS 2D

Kurtsinger Rides Consecutive Double, Bringing Moreyes In First in Curtain-Raiser.

By BRYAN FIELD.

Last New Year's Day was a long way from yesterday and that is why there was a good deal of admiration for Parnell Bound at Empire City following the victory of this juvenile colt of E. F. Sanford's in the Beechnut Handicap, as the son of Nutcracker and Princess Seth made his début at the beginning of this year and has been running ever since.

The first of each year is the birthday for all horses, as every turf follower knows, and the fact that Parnell Bound was racing and winning right after he gave up his yearling status proves his quality.

Since the New Orleans racing of last Winter the youngster has raced as much as any other 2-year-old, but he still carries on as strongly as ever. He is undefeated in his Fall campaign, which began at Havre de Grace last month, and the triumph yesterday was his fourth in succession. Since the Summer meeting at Empire last July he has raced nine times and won six times, which proves that he is a very useful racing tool even though he may not win any Futurities.

Goes to the Front.

Carrying 121 pounds, top weight of the field of seven, Parnell Bound was the 2-to-1 second choice, with James Butler's Questionnaire the 9-to-5 favorite. The Butler horse had opened 6-to-5 favorite, with Parnell Bound 3 to 1, but heavy backing for Sanford's colt sent them to the post almost on even terms so far as the betting was concerned. As for the running, there was nothing even about that. Parnell Bound, handling his weight well, went right to the front and stayed there. Oli Bill Kelsay was riding Questionnaire and he kept the son of Sting as close as he could. This was within a length for the first half mile of the short six-furlong route. But when the two drove into the stretch Parnell Bound drew away under a hand ride and galloped across the line going easily by a length and a half.

Questionnaire beat T. M. Cassidy's Jolly Pal four lengths for the place and the others were strung out to the sixteenth pole. The time was 1:09, which is closest to the fastest that has been turned in at this meeting. Questionnaire's effort in the race was typical of that put up by the other Butler horses throughout the afternoon. Five Butler horses ran in five separate races.

Rides to Victory Twice.

Goad went to the post in the Butler silks in the second race and finished out of the money when Irish Holiday, Chattahoochee and Trappy came home in the order named. Charley Kurtsinger was the rider of Irish Holiday and the result marked a consecutive double for him as he was the rider of Moreyes, winner of the curtain raiser.

The second Butler horse to try his luck was Spurrier, in the Oakhill Purse. He finished third to Turkey's Neck and Kinkajou, which crossed the line as named. The third Butler horse was Questionnaire in the Beechnut. In the fifth race the fourth Butler horse tried to bring home the bacon when Mote was sent out.

He led for most of the way and put on a hair-raising finish with Euclid, only to lose out by a nose and get the second position. Kelsay's soft ride on Mote was partly responsible for the loss of this victory. In the nightcap the fifth Butler horse, Capriole, finished seventh. Thus in five attempts the Butler horses finished seventh, third, second, second and seventh.

INCEPTION ANNEXES OAKLAND HANDICAP

Three-Year-Old Gelding Scores Second Victory in Colors of New Owner at Laurel Track.

REPELS TWO CHALLENGERS

Gains Lead at the First Turn and Fights Off Wellet and Then Dunmore.

LAUREL, Md., Oct. 25 (AP).—Inception, a 3-year-old gelding that O. Chaney claimed from H. W. Labrot a few days ago, scored the second victory in the colors of his new owner when he won the Oakland Handicap, at a mile and a sixteenth, today.

Inception, ridden by W. Cannon, bounded to the front in the run to the first turn and was never headed afterward. The victor was challenged by Wellet soon after and at the end stood off another challenge, this time from Dunmore, which came from behind with a belated rush.

Iolian, the favorite, was never a factor. Fair Ball, the second choice, finished third, beaten half a length for the place.

Sports of the Times

By JOHN KIERAN.

THE Navy players are going to jump off a train and run right into the line-up at Princeton. Perhaps that's the way plays should be run from this guessing formation. No warm-up at all. Not even a single signal drill.

Amherst vs. Wesleyan—It was a tie last year, but Amherst appears to be stronger this year. That would indicate a victory for Wesleyan, but the vote goes to Amherst. The zoologies may go to Wesleyan later.

Boston College vs. Canisius—The Eagles were held for downs and a tie score by Villanova, but, otherwise, they have done well. They may do better. One vote for Boston College.

Brown vs. Syracuse—Now, it's getting warmer. Brown beat Princeton, and Syracuse was thrown for a loss by Nebraska. Coach Lew Andreas watched Brown play against Yale last week, and after the game he ate a hearty supper in a very unconcerned fashion. He must be confident. Relying on that and trusting to luck; one vote for Syracuse.

Bucknell vs. Gettysburg—A brisk battle all the way. Bucknell had two hard tussles with W. and J. and Lafayette and may be a bit shopworn for this fray. However, the vote goes to Bucknell even though it won't help them much when the ball is on the 3-yard line.

Carnegie Tech vs. Notre Dame—It doesn't seem possible that Rockne's Road Runners can move ahead triumphantly through that schedule. Somewhere along the road they are sure to be a little bit away from top form, and that means defeat when facing another strong team.

But the South Bend boys will want to win this one because the Skibos beat them last year and the year before. In addition to that, Carnegie Tech players are supported and encouraged by a bagpipe band. That sort of thing should be squelched without mercy. On behalf of all lovers of music; one firm vote for Notre Dame.

Colgate vs. Providence—Without further ado; one vote for Colgate.

C. C. N. Y. vs. George Washington—Sooner or later City College is going to shake itself together and win a football game. This might be the day. One vote for C. C. N. Y.

The Starving Lions.

Columbia vs. Williams—The Columbia Lions were put on a starvation diet by Dartmouth last week, but Al Marsters won't be back at Baker Field today. Williams might surprise Columbia, but the odds run slightly the other way. It is to be hoped that the Columbia line will make an opening for Ralph Hewitt once in a while this afternoon. Some people in the stands would like to see him run. One vote for Columbia.

Fordham vs. Davis-Elkins—The West Virginia collegians expect to beat Fordham, and they may do it, too, but the vote goes to the Maroon and three rousing cheers to help along New York's only undefeated and untied team to date.

Georgetown vs. Lebanon Valley—The cedars of Lebanon will sigh over this one. Two or three votes for Georgetown, but the Hilltoppers should start early and keep going. They gave their rooters a fright last week by holding back until the final quarter.

Harvard vs. Dartmouth—This was bound to come up. Dartmouth has a good line, a great pair of ends and a rapid-fire attack. Also a chap named Marsters; Alton of Arlington. Doubtless he plans to do some running.

Harvard has a big, strong team and something new at Cambridge in the way of a real air attack. This should be pulled out of a hat or settled scientifically with a coin. Formation B, one, two, three, Dart—Signals off! Dashing briskly overboard; one vote for Harvard.

Holy Cross vs. Marquette—Knowing nothing in particular about Marquette and banking solidly on that fact; one vote for Holy Cross.

N. Y. U. vs. Butler—Why aren't they all like this? One solid vote for the unblushing Violet.

Pennsylvania vs. Lehigh—The Red and Blue players can't afford to take this too lightly. One vote and a gentle warning for Penn.

Secret Agent Disavowed.

Penn State vs. Lafayette—The tall, distinguished gentleman who scouts Lafayette for this department was around saying that Lafayette would win. He always says the same thing. But Bucknell defeated Lafayette last week. Disavowing the secret agent; one vote for the Nittany Lions.

Princeton vs. Navy—Most of Princeton's regulars will be back in the line-up for this game. Coach Roper says it will be the turning point of the season for the Tigers. If they win, look out! If they lose, good-bye! Well, if he puts it that way, good-bye. One vote for the Navy which must have a strong team on its showing so far this season.

Rutgers vs. Catholic University—The Scarlet lads won't run themselves red in the face scoring touchdowns, but they should pile up enough points to be in the lead when the final whistle blows. One vote for Rutgers.

St. John's of Brooklyn vs. Manhattan—The funniest thing about Manhattan is that it is located in the Bronx. Manhattan has lost its last two games. It's time they turned around and went the other way. A victory is in order for them. The secretary will cast one ballot in that direction.

Villanova vs. Duke—There's sure to be a catch in this. In fear and trembling; one vote for Villanova.

Yale vs. Army—And also Christian Keener Cagle vs. Albie Booth not to mention big Murrell vs. the Yale line. Military scouts who have looked over the terrain and enemy forces report that the Army should advance in the centre under Major Murrel and turn either Yale flank by rapid cavalry dashes in charge of Colonel Cagle. According to the plans as laid out by Commander-in-Chief Biff Jones, the doughboys in the line will advance in waves at a given signal. It may not go that way, but it sounds imposing. With a hand-embroidered alibi ready in case of need; one vote for the Army.

DEVON WINS EASILY IN MUD AT LATONIA

Greeley's 6-Year-Old Overhauls Rolled Stockings, the Pacemaker, in Stretch Drive.

OTHER 2 STARTERS TRAIL

Peter Dixon and Broadside Never Figure in Feature Race at Mile and Furlong.

LATONIA, Ky., Oct. 25 (AP).—Four high-class thoroughbreds met today in the Havlin Hotel Handicap and when the race was finished J. J. Greeley's Devon, 6-year-old son of Light Brigade, was throwing mud in the face of J. W. Parrish's Rolled Stocking.

Rolled Stocking quickly went into a lead of three lengths, which advantage he held right into the stretch, but Devon, which was held under restraint the first half mile, had steadily improved his position and when the stretch turn was reached he began wearing the leader down. He slowly raced him into defeat and won easily by two lengths.

Peter Dixon and Broadside, the only other starters, were always far in the rear. Devon's time for the mile and a furlong was 1:50 1-5 and he paid $14.40 for $2.

Shows Way to Six Others From Start to Finish, Winning by Four Lengths.

Bobby Basil Races in Third Position Throughout—Backers of Victor Receive $24.32 for $2.

ROOSEVELT AND WARD CLASH OVER INQUIRY

Governor Bars Use of Troopers to "Spy" on Westchester Grand Jury Panel.

CALLS IT UNSOUND POLICY

Attorney General Defends His Request for State Police in Land Investigation.

UNTERMYER ENDS INQUIRY

Executive Wires to Washburn to Ask if He Objects to Release of His Testimony.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Oct. 25. — Governor Roosevelt and Attorney General Ward clashed today over the attempt to have State troopers act as detectives in obtaining information concerning grand jurors in the Westchester land inquiry which is being conducted by the Attorney General under direction of the Governor.

Mr. Roosevelt declared that to "allow members of the State police to act as detectives in spying on the personal lives, habits and connections of citizens who have been called to act as grand jurors is not only contrary to the purposes for which the State police were formed, but is also contrary to sound public policy."

Mr. Ward, after reading a statement from the Governor said: "It is entirely within the Governor's power to withhold from the prosecution the assistance of the constabulary." He pointed out that what Thomas Penney Jr., First Deputy Attorney General, did was at his express direction. Mr. Ward's statement follows:

"There has been published complaint that the Westchester County jurors were drawn on the recommendation of the county Supervisors. This suggested that a careful inquiry should be made as to their disinterestedness. Ordinarily such inquiries are made in all important criminal matters through the Sheriff's office. The inquiry merely relates to the character and standing in the community of the proposed juror and any connection that he may have with any possible defendant.

"Such information is necessary in order that the prosecuting officer may be advised as to whom to challenge. As the Governor superseded the Republican District Attorney of the county, I assumed that it would be more satisfactory to him to have the inquiry in reference to the jurors made by the State constabulary instead of by the Republican Sheriff and his deputies. Any other inquiry must necessarily be by private persons. It is entirely within the Governor's power to withhold from the prosecution the assistance of the constabulary."

Major John A. Warner, head of the State Police, declined to accede to the request of the Deputy Attorney General. In this the Governor upholds him, saying:

"Major Warner, the Superintendent of State Police, has very properly held that the members of the State Police have a primary duty to prevent and detect crime and apprehend criminals in the rural portions of the State, and further to enforce in these districts the State's motor vehicle law. I concur with the opinion of the Superintendent of State Police and I have so informed Attorney General Ward."

Untermyer Finishes Inquiry.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Oct. 25.—Samuel Untermyer reported to Governor Roosevelt today that he had completed his investigation of the complaints made against Howard R. Washburn, as supervisor of the town of New Castle, Westchester County. Previously Mr. Untermyer and the Governor received copies of a resolution passed at a meeting of the Citizens League of New Castle, asking that the report and testimony be made public. On receipt of this resolution on Oct. 22 Mr. Untermyer wrote to Lee P. Davis, attorney for Mr. Washburn, telling him that the resolution had been received. Mr. Untermyer has received no reply thus far, the Governor said, adding:

"I have therefore in the interest of complete fairness to Mr. Washburn as an individual and a citizen of New Castle, sent the following telegram to Mr. Washburn:

"'I have received from Mr. Untermyer report of his investigation of certain complaints relating to the town of New Castle, of which you are supervisor. With his report is the testimony given by you, Mr. Charles C. Fenn, Mr. David C. Kipp and Mr. L. Ward Prince. I also have a resolution passed at a meeting of citizens and taxpayers of New Castle asking that the testimony be made public immediately.

"'Will you please wire me to Executive Chamber, Albany, if you have objection to the release of the report and testimony?'"

DELVE INTO STATUTES FOR LAND INQUIRY

Prosecutors Move to Room Near Syme's Law Library in Preparing Case.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, Oct. 25.—The State's prosecutors in the Governor's extraordinary grand jury investigation of county and other real estate transactions in Westchester County today shifted their activities from their offices in the newly remodeled schoolhouse on Court Street to the office of Sydney A. Syme, where they had access to Mr. Syme's law library.

Mr. Syme was named with Henry A. Wise of New York to conduct the prosecution. In the preparation of their case the prosecutors found it necessary to consult the codes and could not do so in the schoolhouse, which is as yet only roughly furnished. It is understood that their search of the law books led them on the trail of a statute under which those involved in the court house land deal of July 1 may be held responsible.

In his report to the Governor Samuel Untermyer, who conducted the preliminary investigation, did not name the statutes under which the supervisors might be held criminally liable, although he said that criminal charges might be preferred against them.

DIES IN EIGHT-STORY FALL.

Attorney, Ill, Goes to Window for Fresh Air and Loses Balance.

While his lifelong friend, Dr. Frank Lane, a dentist, whom he was visiting in his office on the eleventh floor of 1,560 Broadway, was treating a patient, Chester Solez, 34 years old, a lawyer, of 225 Broadway, went to a window in the reception room for some fresh air to relieve him from an attack of indigestion. He became violently ill, lost his balance and plunged eight floors to the roof of the Bond Clothes Store. Dr. Wingeback of New York Hospital pronounced him dead.

Solez had been affected by some clam chowder which he ate at lunch with Dr. Lane, the dentist said, and went to the dentist's office to rest. He lay on a couch until 3 o'clock, when he got up to go to the window. Detective James Fitzpatrick, who investigated, said last night he had failed to find any indication that the death was not accidental. Solez lived at 418 East Third Street, Brooklyn.

Mrs. Gertrude Solez, who is also a lawyer, in business with her husband, said last night that Solez had been admitted to the bar ten years ago and was an attorney for several insurance companies. He was a member of the board of governors of the Flatbush Democratic Club and a thirty-second degree Mason. Two children, Mildred, 8 years old, and Chester Jr., 6, survive.

BUFF ESCAPES FROM JAIL.

Pugilist Was Held in Los Angeles for Extradition to New York.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 25 (AP).—Johnnie Buff, former world's flyweight and bantamweight boxing champion, under arrest on charges here and in New York, sawed his way out of the city jail today.

Buff was arrested Oct. 12 on a charge of passing forged checks. Police records subsequently revealed that New York authorities had offered $3,000 reward for his arrest, and he was held for extradition.

Buff, whose real name is John Lesky, is 41 years old. In 1921 he won the flyweight championship from Frankie Mason and later won the bantamweight title from P. Herman, holding each crown about a year.

BAGS LARGE GORILLA FOR MUSEUM HERE

Member of African Expedition Shoots Male Specimen as It Charges Hunters in Rage.

FILMING TO BE ATTEMPTED

But Dr. Gregory Expects Difficulty Because Animals Usually Hide and Rush at Observers.

The expedition sent to Africa last May by the American Museum of Natural History and Columbia University to study and photograph gorillas, chimpanzees and other African primates has succeeded in obtaining a large male gorilla, according to announcement by the museum.

This news was contained in a letter received by President Henry Fairfield Osborn of the museum from Dr. William K. Gregory of the expedition. Since the party is permitted to kill only two specimens of gorillas, great care was exercised in the selection of the animal. H. C. Raven of the museum shot the gorilla on Aug. 20 after it had become enraged by the firing of two blank cartridges and charged the hunters.

Hunting gorillas is complicated by the fact that they live in the thickest bush, Dr. Gregory says. After the second gorilla is obtained, the work of photographing living animals will begin, but, according to Dr. Gregory, "the conditions are most difficult and only a fortunate chance can yield us any photos of value."

"The gorillas are masters in the art of concealment and disappearance," he continues. "The big males have a mean habit of charging the observer and they seem to realize that there is a fine of 5,000 francs for killing a gorilla without a permit."

While New York was sweltering last Summer, the expedition in Africa experienced no undue heat. Of this Dr. Gregory says:

"At every step East and Central Africa contradict all one's preconceptions. In the first place, we have as yet experienced no really hot weather except at Djibuti, near the Red Sea. Here in the mountains at 6,700 feet elevation it is moderately hot at midday and almost freezing at night.

"Then, too, I expected to see lots of deadly snakes and venomous insects, but although I have searched constantly in the bush and jungle for snakes, I have not seen one, while insects are relatively few and largely innocuous. Probably this paucity of life is largely due to the constant burning of grass and bush by the natives in order to gain grazing space for their cattle. Goats and cattle are devastating Africa as they are Australia.

"We are fortunate in being camped in a paradise of lush green fields sprinkled with brilliant trees and flowers. The natives furnish us with a continuous performance. We see them everywhere in their settlements, and at present we are surrounded by forty porters and four 'personnel' boys. Every one of them could be studied individually by a staff of anthropologists, sociologists, humanists, physicians and others. Moreover they are equally interesting fro mthe larval stage to tottering old age."

STRANDED SHIP'S CREW MAKE WAY TO SAFETY

32 Men Were Marooned Since Tuesday, When Vessel Grounded on Isle in Lake Superior.

SAULTE STE. MARIE, Ont., Oct. 25 (AP).—The crew of the freighter Chicago, which went aground at the west end of Michipicoten Island, in Lake Superior are safe at Quebec Harbor on the island tonight, having made their way there by means of lifebelts. It is expected that they will be brought down to the Sault tomorrow, either by the Coast Guard tug Seminole or the Cutter No. 119, both of which are close to the scene of the wreck.

The Chicago is hard on the rocks and is in danger of breaking up if another heavy sea should come up.

Traffic has been moving in usual style today, and, while the barometer is falling, no storm signals have been displayed.

The Chicago, which is a 345-foot ship in the service of the Great Lakes Transit Corporation, was driven off its course and ran aground on Michipicoten Island during a fifty-mile-an-hour gale Tuesday night. The bow of the Chicago was lifted high on the rocks and the stern was so low in the water that the crew were forced to abandon her.

They managed to reach the rocky shore, taking with them some bedding to protect them from the freezing weather. They were unable to take off any large quantities of food and fears that they face starvation had been expressed by marine men here.

URGE NEW PARK AV. BUILT ABOVE TRACKS

Street to 141st Street; that the roadway of Whitlock Avenue be widened from 141st Street to 163d Street; that Whitlock Avenue be widened from 163d Street to Eastern Boulevard, and that Eastern Boulevard from the Bronx River to the city line be made of the same width and design as the Grand Concourse. It is recommended that the entire project be made the subject of a complete study at once. The completion of this project, together with the improvement of Pelham Bay Parkway, it was suggested, would afford a through route from the Triborough Bridge to Westchester and points in New England as well as a marginal highway in the southerly part of the Bronx.

Still another improvement which the report considers necessary to permit most efficient handling of traffic both from the Hudson River Bridge and Triborough Bridge is the improvement of the routes between the Washington Bridge at Boscobel Avenue and University Avenue to the Triborough Bridge at Southern Boulevard and Cypress Avenue. The report urges that this improvement be ready for the openings of the two new bridges.

The easiest and most direct route for the improvement, according to the report, is along Boscobel Avenue, River Avenue, Exterior Street and 135th Street to Lincoln Avenue, and thence to Cypress Avenue over 153d, 134th, 135th, 136th, 137th or 138th Street. An alternate route would be along Ogden or Nelson Avenue to Exterior Street and thence along the highways named in the preferred route. The plan contemplates the widening of Boscobel Avenue from Washington Bridge to Jerome Avenue to provide a sixty-foot highway to care for the expected heavy traffic from the Hudson River and Triborough bridges.

If the alternate route is adopted, the report suggests the widening of Ogden or Nelson Avenue in the same manner as far as Jerome Avenue. Exterior Street would be widened from Jerome Avenue to 149th Street to provide a sixty-foot highway and Cypress Avenue widened from Southern Boulevard to 138th Street.

Still another improvement which the report believes should have early study is the proposed Cross Bronx Highway from the eastern end of Washington Bridge to Clason's Point. Because of the land contours, the report suggests, grade separations should be provided by viaducts across Jerome Avenue and Boston Post Road and tunnels bored under the Grand Concourse and Claremont Park. The improvement, the report declares, will be necessary in connection with the new Hudson River bridge, especially when Boscobel Avenue, already a section of two routes crossing the Bronx, becomes a section of the route between the Hudson River and triborough bridges.

Engineer Dead, a P. R. R. Express Is Derailed, Near Elkton, Md., Few Passengers Being Hurt

By The Associated Press.

ELKTON, Md., Oct. 25.—Running with a dead engineer's hand on the locomotive throttle, ten Pullman cars of a Washington-New York express of the Pennsylvania Railroad jumped the track after the locomotive had sidewiped a buckled freight car on the southbound tracks at Iron Hill, three miles north of here, late this afternoon, severely shaking up scores of passengers.

The engineer of the express, George Rollins, aged 40, of Washington, was killed instantly when a piece of timber from the buckled freight car hit him over the heart when his engine struck it. The locomotive, running free, left the tracks and dragged the Pullman cars after it.

The impact of the express striking the freight car threw a dozen freight cars from the southbound tracks, splintering three of them to bits, scattering débris over both north and southbound rights of way, and delaying all traffic over the Pennsylvania lines. Wrecking crews were sent from Perryville.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 25 (AP).—Passengers on the train derailed near Elkton tonight who were treated at the scene by physicians for slight abrasions and shock were:

Harold Epstein of Brooklyn, N. Y.; E. H. Douvier of Stratford, Conn.; Mrs. Francis Carbo of New York; Mrs. Samuel Gray Boies of Brooklyn; C. F. Scudder of New Haven, Conn.; L. S. Aaron of Bethlehem, Pa.; F. W. Moore of 25 Broad Street, New York; Miss May Brownell of New York, and Mrs. J. F. Kuntz of Washington.

SAYS CONCERN FAILED TO RECEIPT FOR STOCK

Three Investment Houses Ask Police to Investigate Baran & Co. Action.

Three investment houses in the financial district asked the police of the Old Slip station last night to investigate the reported omission of the brokerage firm of Baran & Co., 51 Beaver Street, to acknowledge the receipt of securities worth $75,250 which the investment houses said they had delivered to the company.

Detectives Pierce Fleming and George McGann, under command of Lieutenant James Fitzpatrick, were assigned. They said that the investment houses were Hanson & Hanson of 25 Broadway, the First National Corporation of Boston of 100 Broadway and C. C. Kerr & Co. of 111 Broadway.

Hanson & Hanson had informed them, the police said, that they had sent by messenger ten shares of Brooklyn Trust Company stock valued at $12,250 and 100 shares of the New York Title and Mortgage Company worth $7,050. The First National Corporation reported, according to the police, that it had sent 100 shares of National City stock worth $45,500. The Kerr company reported that it had sent 50 shares of Bank of America stock worth $11,000.

According to the police, these companies reported that they had sent the stock by messenger yesterday afternoon. According to the usual procedure in Wall Street, the messengers returned afterward for certified checks in payment for the securities and were told to return later. The checks were not obtained, the police were informed. Still later in the day it was found that no members of the firm were in the office.

The detectives explained last night that there had been no formal complaint. Thus far, they said, they had been unable to locate any member of the firm.

PROGRAM IN HOLLAND TO BE BROADCAST HERE

Instrumental and Vocal Numbers by Dutch Artists to Be Heard at Noon Today.

Radio listeners of the United States will be permitted to hear today a program originating in Holland if short-wave receivers on Long Island intercept the transoceanic signals with sufficient clarity for distribution at 12 o'clock noon, Eastern Standard Time, over WJZ's network, the National Broadcasting Company announces. The attempt will be the first to make a Holland radio presentation audible throughout this country. NBC radio men said. Experiments of this nature conducted during the last few weeks are said to have indicated that reception is most favorable at the noon hour.

The program has been specially prepared by Dutch radio artists and will be transmitted from the short-wave Station PHI at Huizen. The numbers are to be both instrumental and vocal and typical of Holland.

The transatlantic signals will be received at the Riverhead short-wave station of the Radio Corporation of America and carried to 711 Fifth Avenue, New York, by land wires. At that point the program will be placed on the broadcasting network of WJZ and associated stations. The presentation is expected to last for at least forty-five minutes.

Althouse Sings Canio in Stockholm.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 25 (AP).—Paul Althouse, American operatic tenor, was guest singer at the Stockholm Opera last night. He sang Canio in Pagliacci. The critics were very favorable in their comments today, particularly emphasizing Mr. Althouse's striking dramatic performance.

HAGUE PARLEY ADOPTED OUR RADIO PROPOSALS

American Transmission Problems Study Was Made Basis for Conference, Gen. Saltzman Reports.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Copies of reports adopted at the first meeting of the International Technical Consulting Committee on Radio Communications, which met at The Hague, from Sept. 18 to Oct. 2, were submitted to the State Department today by Major Gen. Charles McK. Saltzman of the Federal Radio Commission, who was chairman of the American delegation to the conference. The delegation will later submit to the department a report on its mission.

The reports dealt with the methods now technically available for maintaining the waves emitted by a station as exactly as possible at the frequency authorized, and recommendation for the fixing of the tolerance allowable for the difference between the mean frequency of emissions and the recorded frequency; the width of the frequency band occupied by the emission of a station for each type of communication and wave, and recommendation for fixing the maximum allowable, and the allocation of ultra-short waves to national services.

General Saltzman said that studies of technical radio problems, made by the American Government and commercial representatives during the past Summer, were taken as the basis for discussion at The Hague.

"The conference," he said, "was a decided success, and I have no hesitancy in saying that the success achieved was to a large degree due to the remarkable work of the United States delegation."

ANNE ROSELLE IN RECITAL.

Soprano Is Enthusiastically Greeted at Carnegie Hall.

Anne Roselle, soprano, known here in former seasons as a member of the Metropolitan and San Carlo opera companies, as well as in concert, gave her first recital of the year last night before an enthusiastic audience in Carnegie Hall. The Hungarian singer, who received much of her training in this country, has been appearing with success in Europe. She created Turandot in Dresden, and has sung this and many other opera roles at Milan, Verona and elsewhere on the Continent.

This varied experience was shown last night in a versatility, not to say virtuosity, of style in many musical genres. Miss Roselle's voice is deficient in volume and richness in the middle and lower registers, but her higher tones are usually produced with fine resonance and color and absolute fidelity to the pitch.

While she was vocally at her best in the opera airs in which she is most at home, such as the "Vissi d'Arte" and "Dick teure Halle," her delivery of songs by Schubert and Brahms, Bizet, Fourdrain and Gounod, and Charles Vincent, Griffes and Mednikoff, was always interesting, musically and dramatically.

Andreas Fugmann was the accompanist.

SOPRANO AND BARITONE SING

Amy Evans-Gange and Fraser Gange Give a Joint Recital.

Amy Evans-Gange, soprano, and Fraser Gange, baritone, gave a joint recital last night at the Town Hall. The former singer, like her husband a native of Wales, made her concert début several years ago, when she attracted favorable notice as an interesting interpreter with a pleasing if not brilliant vocal equipment. Mr. Gange, well known in oratorio and recital, again proved himself a talented singer, though he was not in his best voice last night.

The program comprised duets from "The Magic Flute," "Rigoletto" and the lighter and more popular "Véronique"; and groups of songs by each artist. The soprano contributed Handel's "Care Selve" and airs by Donaudy and Bachelet; a scene from Landon Ronald's "Adonais," originally written for orchestral accompaniment and performed a quarter of a century ago at the Gloucester festival; and lyrics by Maurice Besly, Montague Phillips, and Richard Hageman. Mr. Gange sang airs by Bach, Schubert, Weingartner and Strauss; the "Eri tu" from Verdi's "Masked Ball"; and songs by Hatton, Peel and Frank Bridge. Ethel Cave-Cole was the accompanist.

PADEREWSKI DATES LISTED.

Famous Pianist to Be Heard Here Jan. 25 and May 10.

Ignace Paderewski, now recovering from an operation for appendicitis at his home in Switzerland, will make his first New York appearance this season on Jan. 25, according to an announcement made yesterday by his manager, George Engles. A second New York recital is scheduled for May.

The pianist's tour, originally planned to include seventy-five cities, has been cut down to fifty appearances. It will begin in Harrisburg, Pa., on Jan. 5. During the three weeks between Feb. 21 and March 15, Mr. Paderewski will take a vacation at his ranch at Paso Robles, Cal.

MAY REPLACE LILY DAMITA.

Reported That French Film Star Will Not Appear Here in 'Carry On.'

Reports on Broadway yesterday that Lily Damita, French motion-picture actress, would not appear here with Jack Donahue in the new musical comedy "Carry On" were partially confirmed last night in Cleveland, where the show is now playing. Reviewers on the Cleveland newspapers all praised Miss Damita's beauty, but mentioned that she neither sang nor danced well, and that her vivacity, which counted for so much in the films, was not apparent on the stage.

Who might succeed the screen actress in the part could not be learned last night. "Carry On" goes next week to Pittsburgh, and will also be seen in Boston before opening at the Imperial Theatre here on Nov. 19.

Visiting Nurse Program to Be Given.

A musical and dramatic program will be given this afternoon at the Wanamaker Auditorium under the auspices of the Visiting Nurse Service of the Henry Street Settlement. Mrs. Daniel O'Day will preside. Dr. Shirley Wynne, Commissioner of Health in New York City, will talk on "Health Problems in the City and How the Visiting Nurses Are Helping to Meet Them." A play, "Israel in the Kitchen," will be given by the Henry Players, a group of young actors who have received their training at the Henry Street Settlement Playhouse under the leadership of Eva M. Fry. It was written by Noah Flistein and is announced for production on Broadway this season.

Stokowski in All-Russian Program.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 25.—An all-Russian program, including Alexander Krein's "Ode of Mourning to the Memory of Lenin," was presented by the Philadelphia Orchestra today with Dr. Leopold Stokowski conducting. The hisses which had greeted modernistic compositions previously this season were missing. The program included the second piano concerto of Rachmaninoff, played by Isabelle Yalkovsky of this city; Rimsky-Korsakoff's "The Flight of the Bumblebee" and the "Dance of Buffoons" from "The Snow Maiden," and Tchaikovsky's "1812" overture.

New Post for Brokenshire.

Norman Brokenshire, one of radio's pioneer announcers, has been appointed head of the radio department of H. W. Kastor & Sons Advertising Company, Inc., according to that firm's announcement. Since his return from abroad a year ago, Mr. Brokenshire has been heard over WABC and network. Formerly he was a WJZ announcer. His voice will be heard in the future "quite regularly," it is said, since he will appear before the microphone as announcer for customers of his company. He will, however, specialize in radio production work.

LEAPS FOR SHADE CORD, PLUNGES OUT TO DEATH

Lawyer, 29, Falls 11 Stories From Window in 42d Street—Just Misses Pedestrian.

As he jumped to unwind the cord of a window shade which had spun around the roller, Bernard H. Queller, 29 years old, a lawyer, slipped over the windowsill of his office on the eleventh floor of the Corn Exchange Bank and Trust Company building at 203 West Forty-second Street yesterday noon and fell to the sidewalk. He was killed instantly.

William I. Weiss, Queller's partner, told the police that both he and Queller had been in the habit of stepping up to the ledge to release the cord whenever it became snagged. As Queller's body crashed, it narrowly missed an elderly man in the large lunch-hour crowd.

Queller, who lived at 610 West 150th Street, was graduated from the New York University Law School in 1923 and had been associated with Mr. Weiss for four years.

Charities to Get $157,882—$60,000 Trust for His Nurse.

Charles H. Ruhl, who died March 31, 1928, leaving a net estate of $332,138, gave a total of $157,882 to charities, according to the appraisal filed yesterday. The largest gifts were $26,170 each to the New York Orthopaedic Hospital and the New York Association for the Blind, $13,085 each to Mercy Hospital of Jackson, Mich., and the Manassas Industrial School for Colored Youth, $12,000 each to the Y. W. C. A. and the Y. M. C. A. of Jackson, Mich.; $10,468 each to the New York City Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Little Sisters of the Poor of Detroit and of Los Angeles and the Home for Incurables, $6,000 each to the Florence Crittenton Home of Jackson and the Associated Charities of Jackson, $5,000 to the National Jewish Home for Consumptives, $3,000 each to the Los Angeles Orthopedic Foundation and the Jackson Friendly Home, and $2,500 each to three other organizations.

The largest personal gift was $60,000 for life and $14,000 outright to Miss Theo Woodruff of Alhambra, Cal., long employed as his nurse. He gave $50,000 for life and $2,500 cash to his brother, Sylvester J. Ruhl, and $1,500 in cash and $10,000 for life to a nephew, Theodore S. Ruhl.

FRACTURE CLINIC OPENED.

Dinner Hails Innovation of Pan-American and Broad St. Hospitals.

A dinner celebrating the opening of the fracture orthopedic clinic, an innovation in the treatment of fractures, of the Broad Street Hospital and Pan-American Hospital and Clinics, was given last night at the New York Athletic Club, Seventh Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street. The clinic, which is the first of several to be opened in the new quarters of the Pan-American institution in the newly erected addition to the Broad Street Hospital at 121 Broad Street, is novel in that the setting of a fracture and the after-treatment will be under the guidance of an individual surgeon instead of that of a surgeon and after-treatment physicians or internes.

The dinner was given by Dr. Charles Murray Gratz, a chief organizer of the clinic and one of its attending surgeons. The other attending surgeons who will serve under Dr. Fred H. Albee, the consulting surgeon, are Drs. George Anopol and B. W. Moffatt. The dinner was attended by about 100 members and guests of the Pan-American Medical Association, an international organization having twenty-one national chapters in Latin America, as well as two chapters in this country.

GET LONG PRISON TERMS.

Three Parker Smith Company Officers on High Bail Pending Appeals.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 25 (AP).—John E. Parker, Clarence V. Smith and his brother, Paul M. Smith, were sentenced today to State prison by Judge Isaac Wolfe for embezzling $166,400 of their investors' money.

The three men, as officers of the Parker-Smith Company, bankrupt, $25,000,000 mortgage finance house, were accused of appropriating money belonging to noteholders by manipulating accounts in three banks.

Parker, president of the company, received a term of three to six years in prison on the eleventh count, involving a $36,000 mortgage, and an additional year on each of the other thirty counts, these latter to run concurrently. Clarence Smith, treasurer, and Paul Smith, the secretary, got sentences of five to eight years on the eleventh count, and the additional year on each of the other thirty, also to be served concurrently.

The men were admitted to bail, $25,000 each for Parker and Clarence Smith and $30,000 for Paul Smith, pending determination of their appeal to the Supreme Court.

WOMEN HELP CALLAGHAN.

Mrs. R. C. Lee Chosen to Head Group to Seek His Re-election.

Mrs. Robert Corwin Lee, daughter of former United States Senator William M. Calder, has been chosen chairman of the Women's Independent Committee for the Re-election of Supreme Court Justice Stephen Callaghan, with headquarters at the Hotel St. George, Brooklyn. Mrs. Lee said the committee now had about 500 members and that a luncheon for 200 women would be given at the Montauk Club Monday by the committee.

Mrs. Lee declared she was confident that Justice Callaghan would receive strong support from women.

"No one ever has questioned the ability and wisdom of Justice Callaghan," she said. "His record of fourteen years on the bench is one of faithful, competent service. It is the duty of every voter to retain him on the bench, not only because of his ability and integrity but to vindicate the principle that the judiciary shall not become a bargaining mart for politicians."

THE SCREEN

By MORDAUNT HALL.

Lenore Ulric's First Talker.

FROZEN JUSTICE, with Lenore Ulric, Robert Fraser, Louis Wolheim, Ullrich Haupt, Laska Winter, Tom Patricola, Alice Lake, Gertrude Astor, Ed. Brandel and others. Dialogue by Owen Davis, directed by Allan Dwan; "Faust," in condensed form with eight scenes; Fox Movietone and Hearst Metrotone News reel; "Hallowe'en," with the Roxyettes; "Aurora Borealis," prologue. At the Roxy Theatre.

Lenore Ulric, the purring siren of David Belasco's production, "Mima," and the leading light of other plays, including "Kiki," "The Harem" and "Lulu Belle," makes a talking-film bow at the Roxy in a cleverly staged melodrama with a background of Nuwuk and Nome in the days of the Klondike gold rush.

Besides Miss Ulric there are capital performances by Ullrich Haupt and the redoubtable Louis Wolheim. The story itself is not blessed with a high degree of drama, but it has a number of imaginative moments that have been adroitly directed by Allan Dwan.

Miss Ulric plays a half-caste, whose father was American and her mother an Eskimo. When with her Eskimo spouse, named Lanak, she is wild to get to the land of the white man and when she is in Nome she longs to return to her own igloo.

This velvet-eyed wanton, known as Talu, is at first seen with her Eskimo companions, garbed in furs. Her costume is richer than any of the others and it is not long before her love of white women's finery is stressed. She steals away from Lanak, and boards Captain Jones's steamship. Jones, who is played by Mr. Haupt, who has a foreign accent, tempts Talu with gowns and soon Talu is perceived in a colorful frock.

Duke, the first mate of the vessel, bemoans the captain's love of women. But his advice falls upon deaf ears and subsequently, when the ship is smashed to bits by the ice, Jones and Duke flee from Nuwuk in a sled, into which they throw Talu at the last moment. This happens after a parting shot has been fired at Lanak.

The scene then changes to a livelier one, that of a gambling and dance hall in Nome. The women are clad in the old fashioned style. They pick the pockets of their dancing escorts, but they speak with bated breath about one of their number being caught smoking a cigarette.

Mr. Dwan has introduced some effective comedy in the dance hall. In one sequence a woman sings a song of "The Picture That Was Turned to the Wall," which inspires a French adventurer to warble a "Bird in a Gilded Cage." The effort so moves him that he bursts into tears. When he fails in the words he whistles, which provoked laughter among an audience yesterday afternoon.

Talu becomes one of the dancing women. She is a fiery wench, who because she is a half-caste is heartily disliked by the other females.

In the closing scenes Talu and Captain Jones are perceived once again dashing away in a dog sled from the angry Lanak, who has finally found his faithless wife. Jones has put a bullet through Duke and he hopes to escape Lanak's vengeance, but as the dogs run over the hard snow and ice they come to a break that widens into a canyon into which the sled and its occupants are hurled. This, like many of the other passages is expertly filmed. The backgrounds are for the most part impressive.

Miss Ulric is splendid and she does not betray the slightest sign of microphone nervousness. Her half-caste accent leaves her after a spell in Nome, which is to be expected. The dialogue, written by Owen Davis, is sometimes a little forced in Miss Ulric's and some of the other rôles. Miss Ulric's acting, however, is compelling and her resourcefulness during silent passages is frequently in evidence.

Mr. Rothafel prefaces this film with an ambitiously staged condensed version of "Faust." This offering is in eight scenes. Dorothy Githens appears as Marguerite, Harold von Duzee as Faust and Sigurd Nilssen as Mephisto.

On the Movietone News Reel is the scene of President Hoover, Henry Ford and Thomas A. Edison, in Detroit, on the occasion of the celebration of the jubilee of the invention of the incandescent light.

Football versus Love.

SWEETIE, with Nancy Carroll, Helen Kane, Stanley Smith, Jack Oakie, William Austin, Stuart Erwin, Wallace MacDonald, Charles Sellon and Aileen Manning, written by George Marion Jr. and Lloyd Corrigan, directed by Frank Tuttle; Jesse Crawford's organ concert; "Snowland," staged by A. C. Niggemeyer, with Al Wohlman, Gaudsmith Brothers, Sallie Vestoso, Helen Kennedy and others. At the Paramount Theatre.

"Sweetie," the new audible offering at the Paramount, lives up to its title and the childish patter of Helen Kane, who happens to be one of the principals. Who knows but that the chain of events in this production may prove diverting to those who grow excited over the outcome of a screen gridiron game? To refer to this picture as being adolescent is somewhat flattering, for its few really mirthful moments are offset by lengthy nonsensical passages.

This "Sweetie" talks and sings. In fact it keeps its tongue wagging like an enfant terrible. It is exceptionally well photographed and the acting of Nancy Carroll, Miss Kane and Jack Oakie is not without merit. But they have to join in the intended fun in this story and therefore they are at times apt to cause one to frown.

During many of the scenes in which she figures, Miss Kane, as Helen Fry, is armed with an air rifle, and she darts from pillar to post, peppering one of Pelham's nit-wit students to make him join the football team. And when he lends his manly form to the big game between Pelham and Ogelthorpe, Helen seizes the psychological moment to fire a shot, not to injure him, but to spur him on to victory.

Miss Carroll, who sings and talks, as also do her colleagues, acts the part of Barbara Pell, who has the temerity to fall in love with Biff Bentley, captain of the Pelham team. Although he adores her, he throws romance aside for sport at the behest of the college coach. Barbara, however, has a stroke of luck, for on returning to New York she discovers that she has inherited valuable property, which includes Pelham College.

She decides later to test the football team's knowledge of the English language, and some time is devoted to Axel Bronstrup's struggling with the definition of a preposition. Barbara goes over the examination papers herself and she decides that Biff Bentley has flunked and therefore can't play in the big game. Of course, she is persuaded to reconsider her decision and after she has wagered with Dr. Ogelthorpe on the outcome of the game she sees to it that Biff captains the team.

Jack Oakie plays a vaudeville dancer who joins with the students in the welcome to Barbara. He is averse to the Pelham alma mater song and renders a Jolson edition, known as "Alma Matey Mammy" which has its humorous side.

Miss Kane delivers one or two songs in her babyish prattle. She is amusing and so is William Austin, occasionally, but he is, more often than not, handicapped by lines that are too silly to be laughable.

The idea of having a girls' school adjacent to the Pelham institution strikes one at first as promising. In an early scene, Miss Twill is perceived instructing her pretty scholars to pour tea. Miss Twill counts, "One, two, three," and then gives the order to pour, just as though she were giving a martial command. That difficult ceremony being accomplished satisfactorily, the girls chorus, "Cream or lemon?" and one concludes that Miss Twill's class is a success too. They could pour tea for Senators or the crowned heads of Europe. One realizes it, for not a drop is spilled and not one of the girls says "lemon" before she says "cream."

The song "Alma Matey Mammy" is rendered efficiently by the Pelham students during those moments when such music stirs their souls and urges the team to triumph over Ogelthorpe.

George Marion Jr. and Lloyd Corrigan are the authors of this quaint yarn. The music was contributed by Richard A. Whiting and Mr. Marion wrote the lyrics. The director of "Sweetie" is Frank Tuttle, but, with the exception of the players, the individual who is entitled to real praise is the camera man, Alfred Gilks.

There are some good acts in "Showland," the stage contribution, particularly the Gaudsmith Brothers and their French poodle.

SARGASSO SEA IN SOUND.

"Isle of Lost Ships" Produced Again as Talking Picture.

THE ISLE OF LOST SHIPS, with Virginia Valli, Jason Robards, Noah Berry, Robert O'Connor, Clarissa Fielding, and others, directed by Irving Willat, based on the novel by Crittenden Marriot; "The Golfers," a Mack Sennett comedy; Grantland Rice sound "Sportlight"; newsreel. At the Mark Strand.

The talking version of "The Isle of Lost Ships," which was shown here as a silent film six years ago, is now at the Mark Strand. In this strange tale of the island of ships in the Sargasso the weird story is the strongest point and the acting negligible.

Noah Beery is excellent as Captain Forbes, the ruler of the fifty-nine souls who live in the hulks of the wrecks that have been swept into the midst of a whirlpool of seaweed, somewhere in the Sargasso Sea. Into this strange community floats The Queen, a half-submerged steamer, aboard which survives Frank Howard, an alleged murderer; Sergeant Jackson, a detective who was delivering him to New York and Dorothy Renwick, who has been rescued from drowning by Howard.

The girl is the third woman in the community and, according to the law laid down by Captain Forbes, she must choose a husband within twenty-four hours. A fight ensues, after which the brutish captain tries to seize her for himself. Young Howard then marries her "to protect the girl." The three new arrivals and other mutinous members of the colony escape the following morning in a submarine which is conveniently near by and in running order.

This queer tale, while not particularly helped by the addition of sound, appears as a relief from the musical films and those audible photoplays in which dialogue holds the centre of the screen.

Despite several discrepancies that creep into the picture, it flows interestingly on with many imaginative passages.

Jason Hobards as Howard is manly and natural as the hero, who not only knows all about ships, radios and women, but who also can man a submarine and teach a crew its operation in three minutes. Virginia Valli does not do much more than scream a little now and then.

TWO NEW PLAYS COMING.

"Cortez," With Lou Tellegen, Nov. 4, and "Broken Dishes" Nov. 5.

Two new plays were announced yesterday to open on Broadway the week of Nov. 4. One of them is Lou Tellegen's vehicle, "Cortez," which will come on Monday, Nov. 4, to the Mansfield Theatre. "Cortez" is a play by Le Roy Clemens and Ralph Murphy, and besides Mr. Tellegen the cast will include Helen Baxter, George Barbier, Dorothea Chard and William Jeffrey. The play will be seen for the first time on Monday in Jackson Heights.

On the following night, Tuesday, Nov. 5, "Broken Dishes," Martin Flavin's second play of the season, will be presented at the Ritz Theatre. Donald Meek will head a cast which will include Duncan Penwarden, Reed Brown Jr. and Eda Heinemann.

FOUR PLAYS TO END THEIR RUNS TONIGHT

Two of the Productions, 'Button, Button' and 'Abraham Lincoln,' Opened This Week.

Four theatrical productions, two of which opened this week, will end their Broadway engagements tonight. Those presented this week are "Button, Button," which had its première at the Bijou Theatre on Wednesday night and will depart after a run of five performances, and William Harris's revival of the John Drinkwater play, "Abraham Lincoln," which will leave the Forrest Theatre after playing only eight times. When first produced here in 1919 "Abraham Lincoln" was an outstanding success.

The two other plays, which will terminate their engagements tonight, are "Soldiers and Women," which was produced at the Ritz Theatre on Sept. 2, and William Faversham's starring vehicle, "Her Friend the King," which opened at the Longacre Theatre on Oct. 7. The latter will begin a road tour in Boston on Monday.

AUGUSTIN DUNCAN ENGAGED

Stage Director, His Eyesight Long Restored, to Act in "The Ledge."

Augustin Duncan, actor and stage director, who recovered his eyesight in January of last year after having been blind for nearly a year, has been engaged for "The Ledge," the second production of the New York Theatre Assembly at the Assembly Theatre, scheduled to open on or about Nov. 14. Mr. Duncan, who is a brother of the late Isadora Duncan, went abroad last year to consult specialists, and while in Paris attended memorial services for his sister.

He last appeared on the Broadway stage in a revival of "John Ferguson" in January, 1928, and had the title rôle, a part which he originally played in the production sponsored by the Theatre Guild. Several months later he staged "The Breaks" for Richard Herndon and at the première was the recipient of a tribute from his friends in and out of the theatre.

Besides Mr. Duncan the cast of "The Ledge," written by Paul Osborne, author of last season's "Hotbed," will include Leonard Mudie, Charles Abbe and Leigh Lovel. Rehearsals of the play, described as a "capitalistic melodrama," will begin today under the direction of Walter Greenough, director and manager of the New York Theatre Assembly.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Andrew Mack, Jack Squires, Al Sexton and the Hollywood Collegians have been engaged for "Woof, Woof," a musical comedy now in rehearsal. William Demarest and Bernard Lohmuller are the producers.

According to the Vincent Youmans office, there is a possibility that "Great Day!" now at the Cosmopolitan Theatre, may soon be presented in London.

An Actors' Fund matinee of "Let Us Be Gay" will be played at the Little Theatre on Tuesday. Next Friday afternoon "Street Scene" will give a matinee at the Playhouse for the same charity.

The complete cast of "The Silver Swan," an operetta opening Monday night in Toronto, includes Vivian Hart, Myrtle Clark, Lina Abarbanel, Edward Nell Jr., Florenz Ames, Harry Miller and Robert Pitkin. The show will probably arrive here the week of Nov. 18.

The production of "Dark Hands," scheduled for the week of Nov. 11, has been called off. The play was announced as the work of Alice Fleming Sedman.

"The Amorous Antic," by Ernest Pascal, author of last season's "Marriage Bed," will be Sam H. Harris's next production. It will go in rehearsal early next month.

THE FALL VERDICT.

No one harbors vengeful feelings against a physically broken man like ex-Secretary FALL, yet there will be a general belief throughout the country that his conviction for taking a bribe when in office is a most wholesome and helpful event. It shows that justice, even when seeming most leaden-footed, at last overtakes the criminal. It encourages renewed confidence in our courts when they are seen to be able finally to decree punishment for men highly placed. Something, too, has been done to bolster up popular faith in the jury system. Here were twelve men and women, plied for days with the ingenious arguments of a whole array of skilled counsel in FALL'S behalf, yet able to see their way in the end to a just verdict. Universal moral condemnation had already been visited upon the ex-Secretary. A highly sensitive man in his position would have cried out with one of old that his punishment was greater than he could bear. But now the outcome of his criminal trial, so long delayed, so tied up as it had become in legal technicalities—a trial to which Mr. FALL came boasting that it would surely result in his "vindication"—has put the seal of the law upon the conclusion to which the great majority of his fellow-countrymen had already arrived.

An appeal will doubtless be taken. And the ex-Secretary has been allowed to remain on bail while it is being argued. His health is so shattered that it may be thought inhuman ever to send him to jail—though even a brief and formal imprisonment would be of exemplary value. But it is not necessary to speculate about future possibilities in this famous case. The main thing is that the conscience of the country and of judge and jury has found impressive utterance. If ever the verdict of a criminal court should have a deterrent effect, this one must. It will tend to put fear into the hearts of any public officials tempted to betray their trust. It will make every oath of office seem more binding and solemn. As for the general public, along with the assurance that the criminal justice of the United States can be trusted to find its way to the truth, there will be the encouragement of knowing that popular sentiment, often outrunning the decisions of the courts, has but anticipated the verdict of the jury in the Fall case. It has already done much to emphasize the responsibility of public servants and to impress upon careless or venal men in office the need of watching their steps and reforming their ways.

AFTER THE FALL IN STOCKS.

The fall in prices on the Stock Exchange, which on Thursday reached such proportions as to bring Wall Street momentarily almost to the verge of panic, will undoubtedly be recognized in future financial discussions as the inevitable sequel to what the Chancellor of the British Exchequer lately described as a prolonged "orgy of speculation." Readjustment of such scope and character never leaves the speculative mentality what it was before. We shall hear considerably less in the future of those newly invented conceptions of finance which revised the principles of political economy with a view solely to fitting the stock market's vagaries. It will not be easy, after this week's occurrences, to dismiss contemptuously the teachings of past financial experience. Wall Street itself will now be ready to confess that, however surrounding circumstances may change from one era to another, the great underlying influences which go to make sound or unsound finance, reasoned prosperity or inflation and subsequent disaster, are precisely the same today as in the all-but-forgotten "pre-war period."

One recent episode is likely hereafter to be considered in an altered light. Wall Street's alternate ridicule and denunciation of the Federal Reserve's policy regarding speculative credit reflected as plainly distorted economic ideas as the attitude of the Reserve Board itself indicated far-sighted judgment of causes and consequences in the market. With this week's experience fresh in mind, the question will be asked, What would probably have been the reckoning if the Reserve banks, as Wall Street demanded, had "kept their hands off"?

The answer ought not to be difficult. With banking credit drawn into speculation on the scale of the "loans by others" and the European lendings, and with speculative extravagance stimulated in proportion, this month's settlement might easily have brought the markets into the grasp of a disastrous credit crisis. It is easy to argue that the Reserve Board might have done some things differently or have done them at a different moment; but the large fact now stands out that the board foresaw the fated outcome of the stock market mania, that it boldly recognized its own duty and publicly declared its own purposes, that it acted in time (as it did not in 1919), that it successfully kept the credit fund for commercial uses apart from the insatiable inroads of Stock Exchange borrowers, that it prevented the spreading of acute money stringency from the stock market to commercial loans, and that it thereby insured the soundness of the business situation when the speculative markets went on the rocks.

THE ABSOLUTE PROTECTIONIST.

Mr. JOSEPH R. GRUNDY, president of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association, is almost a legendary character as a milker of protected industries for the benefit of Republican campaign funds. "Old Joe" is another name for "Old Scratch" in a multitude of innocent Democratic bosoms. The Senate lobby investigators have made him reveal himself as a rather simple and engaging character. You may call him, if you like, a reducer of protection to the absurd, but his sincerity is evident. We have sometimes spoken of high protectionism, the protection-prosperity dogma, as the Republican religion. Mr. GRUNDY is the truest of true believers. He is a Quaker. He says that in his mind protection occupies the next place to religion.

The protection of protection is a holy duty. He has been "lobbying" for it for years at his own expense. To him it is as plain that "the foreigner pays the tax" as that two and two are four. He consents to no reduction. He clings to every increase. Thereby he helps Pennsylvania, the party, the country, and imposes no burden upon consumers. His second religion makes it his first duty to see that protection and prosperity are not diminished. As described by himself, his "lobbying" in Washington is and has been blameless. He has spurred and goaded the toughest old protectionists of his party. He hasn't tried to convert the heretics. A more paleozoic protectionist it has not been our happiness to observe.

A pleasant and curious gentleman, he makes "Pig Iron KELLEY" look like a backslider. It is easy to laugh at his opinions; but it would be bad taste to laugh at an honest belief, however mistaken. And his singular faith is shared by millions. That's the worst of it. We don't think the committee got much satisfaction out of "Old JOE." Out of his blast against Mr. BORAH many of us get satisfaction. But an elephant can't be expected to appreciate a chameleon.

INTERNATIONAL GOBLINS.

If people would only try to cure themselves of the habit of thinking in vast geographical terms like Anglo-Saxon domination of Europe or European blocs against the United States, they would be much happier. LUCIUS R. EASTMAN, unofficial American member of the League of Nations committee which has just begun work on the problem of European tariff disarmament, was obviously faithful to the facts when he assured his colleagues the other day that Americans do not regard the idea of European tariff unity as a threat against the United States. Being strictly unofficial, he had to say American people instead of the American Government, despite the fact that before leaving for Geneva he dropped in at Washington and had a talk with Secretary of State STIMSON and Secretary of Commerce LAMONT. His reassuring opinion on American sentiment was elicited by direct inquiry. So anxious are the nations of Europe not to have America get angry at them for trying to achieve tariff unity by way of a tariff truce or "holiday" that a League of Nations official actually made the trip from Geneva to Paris in order to meet Mr. EASTMAN and find out.

What other answer was possible than that the people of the United States welcome any and all steps toward closer cooperation on the Continent and so to firmer guarantees of peace? Or that in the enhancement of Europe's prosperity the American people see not a threat but a contribution to their own well-being? American public sentiment, like American policy, has not displayed the most rigorous consistency with respect to transatlantic affairs since the war. But our exhortations to fellowship to the nations of Europe have been so fervent, we have so frequently reminded them that our own amazing prosperity is largely conditioned by the total absence of tariff barriers among forty-eight sovereign States, that it would really be too bad if, at the first move toward tariff peace on the Continent, at the first faint flush of the "United States of Europe" on the horizon, we were to turn around and discover not a European union but an anti-American conspiracy.

Of that glaring inconsistency the American people are guiltless. In the first place, Americans do want the peoples of Europe to enjoy peace and to prosper. In the second place, Americans are not greatly addicted to vast abstractions in the field of international politics. It is the European mind, with its long training in the policy of alliances and balances of power, that shows a fondness for getting itself all worked up over Anglo-Saxon dominations, and American imperialism on the necks of the European peoples, and, by way of change, European blocs against America.

MR. SNOWDEN ON THRIFT.

The International Thrift Congress met in England this year, and at its first session the British Chancellor of the Exchequer made an address. It was largely devoted to an account of English associations for saving, including the National Savings Certificates managed by the Government. In the latter form of thrift alone there is at present no less than $2,500,000,000 standing to the credit of depositors. Mr. SNOWDEN'S estimate was that the total savings deposits in Great Britain now amount to $7,500,000,000. The extraordinary thing is that even in the eight years of business depression and unemployment through which England has been passing there has been a steady increase in savings. Mr. SNOWDEN believes that the great bulk of them are still in the name of working people. This is a remarkable proof that the tradition of the British as a thrifty race has been maintained even under great difficulties.

Even more striking than his citation of facts were his general remarks on the rationale and benefits of savings, coming as they did from a Chancellor of the Exchequer who is supposed to be a Socialist. He declared that the great need of England today, as of all Europe, is added capital. The work of reconstruction has not been completed. The most effective way of dealing with unemployment is to reorganize and recondition factories and workshops—and that requires capital. One way to create it is to save it. Mr. SNOWDEN is no advocate of indiscriminate spending in order to bring about new consumptive demand. There is too much wasteful spending, and just in the proportion that the English people could diminish its amount, they would be adding to the capital resources of the country. Mr. SNOWDEN advanced no financial or industrial panaceas. His only prescription was the ancient one of working and saving.

THE PRESS AND COLLEGE SPORTS

In one section of the Carnegie Foundation's bulletin No. 23, dealing with college athletics, there is a study of newspaper responsibility for existing conditions. The press is charged with giving too much space to college sports as contrasted with professional; outside the larger cities there is much poor and illiterate sports writing; sensationalism is too often the tone of the articles; misleading reports from coaches, college press agents and alumni are good-naturedly accepted; "ghost-writing" is permitted and exploited; coaches are given too great prominence over members of the teams; a few star players are exploited beyond the bounds of good taste; and here and there too many free tickets are accepted. To some of these charges the general plea of the press must be "guilty," though wondering at the captiousness of part of the criticism. Three pages of type devoted to a college football game, as the Foundation notes was given in the West twenty years ago, are too much. "Experting," or the attempt on the part of some sports writers to pontificate their opinions, is justly derided in the Carnegie bulletin. There is undoubtedly room for condensation and improvement in handling the athletic news of colleges.

But exception must be taken to the charge that this expansion of athletics has all been done solely with an eye on circulation. Thirty years ago football, for instance, was played very little in the South and Far West. Now every college, however small, has a team. When Centre comes up from Danville, Ky., and defeats Harvard, a new football public is created. As the public interest grew, the space necessarily grew. Unquestionably it has now stopped over. Even the elements which make glamourous a great college football game—the sentiment of the alumni, the articulate zeal of the undergraduates, the sight of a huge crowd in a vast stadium, the thrill of a physical contest, the coloring of Autumn—even these do not merit the extra columns. Perhaps the Foundation's bulletin may help to readjust the measurement of the press. Most managing editors would welcome the space released from college sports. They would also welcome more substantial news from the colleges.

But the bulletin's investigators have made an even greater error in their chapter on the press, and Dr. PRITCHETT in his preface is also mistaken in respect of the relation of sports news to advertising. The cost of the added space devoted to college sports has never been even remotely paid for by added advertising. The more sports that are published, the more advertising is crowded out. "The news policy of the American daily or weekly paper is determined by this fundamental fact [advertising]," asserts Dr. PRITCHETT, and advances the view that athletic news is directed at the advertiser, whom he has confused with the reader. But his suspicion and his blunder will both be forgiven if he can help to reallocate the news proportion of college athletics.

FIGHTING CANCER.

Like many other physicians and health officers, Dr. WYNNE of New York holds that the Public Health Service of the United States should engage in cancer research. His reason is that the government's hygienic bureau is in a strong position to deal with the problem of the increase of the disease. Early in the year Senator JONES of Washington sent out to medical authorities all over the United States a cancer questionnaire. From the Columbia University Cancer Research came the proposal that sufficient funds be given to the Public Health Service to carry on the work of seeking a remedy for cancer. The School of Hygiene and Public Health of Johns Hopkins University declared that "we have no lead at present that is especially promising," and that the thing to do was obviously to multiply the number of research workers. Dr. FRANCIS CARTER WOOD, who thought that a cure for cancer was not likely to be discovered immediately, said that "the Public Health Service aspect of the question is in some ways vital." He added:

> If the attack by the government is to be effective it would imply the creation of a group of outstanding men with ample equipment and money for salaries and supplies even over a long period of years.

The statistics of cancer are alarming not because the deaths rise to a very high total at the present time in proportion to population but because the rate is going up and the cause of the disease and its cure, except in the case of external cancerous growths, baffle the faculty. There cannot be too much research work. The Public Health Service of the United States is not expected to do all of it but to reinforce local and private agencies. Every city should have cancer institutes equipped with laboratories.

In their practice physicians are often at a loss. The secret of treating internal cancer must be learned by laboratory experiments and in clinics. Here in New York an appeal is to be made to raise $6,000,000 to promote research by the Skin and Cancer Hospital in the cause and treatment of cancer and skin diseases. Governor ROOSEVELT in July urged the establishment of two new cancer research hospitals, one to serve Northern New York and the other the southern tier counties. There have been handsome donations to found cancer laboratories, such as the Jackson Memorial at Bar Harbor, under the direction of Dr. CLARENCE C. LITTLE. But the proposal of government aid through the Public Health Service should have serious consideration.

MASSACRING ANTELOPES.

Accounts have just reached New York of what is described in Wyoming newspapers as the "most senseless and atrocious" slaughter of wild animals that has ever occurred in that State or perhaps in the nation. The only thing approaching it is the wholesale destruction of buffaloes a half century ago. For a period of six days, early this month, the protection on the antelope which had been in force for years was removed, with the result that the animals were butchered by the hundreds. Medicine Bow alone reported more than a thousand carcasses of antelopes carried through that town in the automobiles of hunters. Cody reported upward of 200 killed in that neighborhood on a single day. If the reports in The Cody Enterprise and The Wyoming State Tribune and Cheyenne State Leader are unbiased, the entire affair was a disgrace alike to the State of Wyoming and to the self-styled hunters who took advantage of the blunder of the Wyoming State Game Commission in opening the season on antelope.

"Cars, driven at breakneck speed," says the report to The Wyoming State Tribune and Cheyenne Leader, "flew into the midst of the herds, scattering them hither and thither, while excited hunters shot antelope down from all sides." The animals, not having been exposed to hunters for years, did nothing more than run in circles at first, and when, finally, they tried to escape and even took to jumping over fences "the hunters, driving madly, stopped only long enough to cut the fence, and tore on, shooting wildly."

Not only those who witnessed what The Cody Enterprise describes as "the terrible massacre of the antelope," but also those in Wyoming who heard of it, have not failed to utter disapproval openly and loudly. It is unfortunate that some of the papers attempt to exonerate the Game Commission, and express regrets more because of the criticism which will come from the Eastern press than because of the destruction of the antelope herds. If, as even the defenders of the Game Commission admit, the slaughter was a disgrace, it is difficult to see who can be blamed except the Wyoming authorities who authorized it.

What makes the affair all the more reprehensible is that for years special efforts have been made to protect the antelope so that they would not become exterminated. They have been fed in the Winter and protected from hunters throughout the year. Thus they have become comparatively tame. As if this were not enough, much of the slaughter occurred on the ranch of a man who throughout his life had guaranteed the antelope protection.

The apparent "justification" of this barbarous destruction is that the herds are becoming too large and that it is difficult to move them. Granted that there is the danger of overstocking the ranges—the experience with the deer on the Kaibab Plateau in Arizona is a noted case in point—there cannot possibly be any excuse for this sort of wholesale butchery of animals which have so long been taught that they have nothing to fear from man. The only redeeming feature is that the citizens of Wyoming are keenly conscious of the stain which this action has put on the name of their State, and seem determined that such a thing shall never be permitted to happen again.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Step Toward Quiet.

Ordinary people living next door to the owner of a never-tiring radio do not need permission from any one to call the loud-speaker a nuisance. They unhesitatingly call it worse names than that, with never a thought of legal accuracy. Some of the more impolite and less printable epithets have the advantage of relieving the neighbors' feelings, but a conviction on those terms could not be obtained. It now appears, however, that the loud-speaker owner may be convicted of maintaining a nuisance and punished and prevented from continuing it.

In a letter to the forty-six magistrates in New York City, Chief Magistrate MCADOO has informed them of his opinion that persons turning on a noisy radio when it disturbs a number of people are guilty of disorderly conduct. The long-suffering family next door will welcome this piece of news. Now they can call a loud-speaker a nuisance and get away with it.

It would not be surprising if many complaints should be made at once. The loud-speakers have had things their own way for so long that the desire to retaliate has grown strong. They need not fear sudden or complete suppression, even if every individual who has been tormented by jazz at midnight calls on a magistrate immediately, for they cannot be convicted unless a considerable number of people testify that the din is persistent. There are enough loud-speakers falling into this class to make their removal a perceptible relief.

Commander Byrd at Forty-one.

It is hard to believe that Commander BYRD, so boyish does he look, is past 40. According to the fourteenth edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica, RICHARD EVELYN BYRD was born on Oct. 24, 1888. But he was celebrating his real forty-first birthday at Little America, Antarctica, yesterday, Oct. 25. He must have been a very active infant, "born," his mother has said, "an adventurer and explorer, absolutely without fear."

One may be sure that Commander BYRD was giving more thought yesterday to his preparations to fly to the South Pole than to the anniversary of his birth. In "Skyward" he wrote of his removal from the active list of the navy because of an injury to his foot:

> "I was relieved on three-quarters pay; ordered home for good. Career ended. Not enough income to live on; no chance of coming back; trained for the seafaring profession; temperamentally disinclined for business. A "fizzle"!

But yesterday fame had come to him: the flight to the North Pole, the perilous crossing of the Atlantic; and opening before him is opportunity to add to his already splendid reputation by flying beyond the South Pole.

Sometimes he must go back in memory to his adventures with the Philippine constabulary when a small but daring boy of 12. Seldom has a young naval officer encountered so many obstacles as tried the intrepid spirit of BYRD after leaving the Naval Academy. But he had a heart for any fate. Luck was sometimes with him, as when he lost a train in England on the way to go up with the dirigible ZR-2, which took fire in the air and was destroyed. At 41 the "fizzle" can look back on great achievements and gallantly face a supreme adventure.

Premiers in Battalions.

When a nation under the Parliamentary system has more than a dozen political parties in its Parliament, there are bound to be many Ministerial crises. These produce new Premiers, and while often—as is the case in France—the same man returns to primacy again and again, the arrangement makes for a remarkable number of living ex-Premiers.

Into the news now comes the name of EDOUARD DALADIER, who has been asked by President DOUMERGUE to form a Cabinet. If, after conferring with the Radical Socialists at Rheims, he succeeds in doing it, he will become another member of the large and growing group. So many are now alive that it seems even more ironic that thus far neither TARDIEU nor FRANKLIN-BOUILLON, for all their fame and prominence, has ever attained first place in a French Government.

In England, parties being only three in number, the upsets do not come so often, and there are few living men whom Britons can point out in public places as having headed the government. In this country, whatever may happen to the control of Congress, a President serves for the four years for which he is elected unless he dies or resigns, and we have but two ex-Presidents. Perhaps if the Parliamentary system prevailed in the United States the shifting alliance now loosely controlling the Senate might have given us four or five ex-Presidents in the last year.

Electric Cables and Birds.

Bird lovers have frequently protested that something should be done to protect wild birds from the danger of electrocution by exposed high-tension wires. Discussion in London has brought forth the statement from a learned gentleman that birds, seeing their comrades killed, take warning and pass on the news of danger.

Another view is taken by an electrical engineer in The Journal of the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds. The peril, he says, consists in birds making a short circuit when they perch on the ironwork of a transformer and touch the live conductor with beak or wings, or when they make contact between two live conductors.

Power companies are quite as anxious as bird lovers that such casualties should not occur. The short circuit not only kills the bird but causes expensive breakdowns in the line. The double catastrophe has been largely avoided in England by making the insulators supporting the conductors long enough to prevent a bird spanning the distance from the ironwork of the transformer to the wire, and also by using insulating guards. Fears of wholesale electrocution of wild birds do not seem to this expert to have any real foundation.

After all, birds can stand quite a bit in the way of electricity. "A small bird might perch on a high-tension overhead conductor and cause a faint glow at points on it, such as its beak, without suffering any harm." A mere titillation for the bird, but what a shock to a chance spectator!

The British War Veterans' Ball.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Newspapers were good enough to publish a letter of mine a few weeks ago in reference to the British Great War Veterans of America, who have now arranged for this annual Armistice ball at the Hotel Plaza on Nov. 11. May I say how sincerely I hope, as honorary president, that the response for tickets and boxes may be large, so that many of those who fought in the war and are still suffering from the effects thereof may, during the coming Winter, receive that assistance and relief they so richly deserve and which is given, irrespective of race or creed, to every soldier who served under the British flag?

Communications in reference to tickets can be addressed to the president, Major Charles Tebay, M. C., 15 Moore Street, New York.

Politics on Sunday.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I wish to take issue with the Rev. David G. Wylie, whose letter "Objection to Politics on Sunday" appeared in THE TIMES this morning.

I not only favor political campaigning on Sunday, but believe that elections should be held on Sunday. It seems to me that the contention of the Rev. Mr. Wylie is rather out of date and antiquated. If there were more campaigning on Sunday and if election day were held on Sunday, more people would be better informed about the political issues and a larger vote would be cast.

DEVONSHIRE SONG.

Who once has been in Devon,
That friendliest English shire,
Has tasted cream and honey,
Has known his heart's desire!

The skies are soft in Devon,
The fields are garden spots
Of golden buttercups envowe
With wild forget-me-nots.

The walls of Warwick beckon,
And ruins of Kenilworth;
The water-meads of Oxford
Are green and fragrant earth.

The River Avon ripples
With swans upon its breast,
But Devon is a challenge
That will not let you rest!

And Devon names are music,
Are songs of wild sea-foam:
Clovelly like a winged word
And crystal Ilfracombe!

TRAINING FOR SAFETY.

Engineers Are Working on Problem, but Public Education Is Needed.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There can be only praise for the American Museum of Safety, the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness and, in particular, the donor, Arthur Williams, for setting up ten free scholarships for courses in accident prevention at New York University, but THE TIMES in its editorial "Training for Safety" went wide of the facts.

Permit me to state that there are numerous safety engineers—probably several thousand—who are graduate engineers and are professionally trained in their work. There is the American Society of Safety Engineers, an organization over ten years old, having a large membership despite admission requirements as restrictive as those of the major engineering societies. It serves also as the Engineering Section of the National Safety Council. It has active local chapters. The metropolitan chapter has offices in the Engineering Societies Building and holds bimonthly meetings, which are well attended. The National Safety Council has a division of engineering, a large staff of safety engineers at its headquarters in Chicago and a vice president in charge of engineering.

The organized safety movement, in which the United States leads the world and which has been copied in England, France, Italy, Japan and elsewhere, is live and virile. Many thousand persons have been drawn into it, both professionally and otherwise, not only trained engineers and inspectors but others, who give it a part of their time and attention. The number can only be conjectured—in this country it must exceed 30,000. A thousand volunteers serve on National Safety Council committees alone. The attendance at the annual safety congresses of the council, such as those at Chicago this month and in New York a year ago, exceeds 5,000 persons.

There is a literature of accident prevention—pamphlets, magazines, lesson outlines and textbooks, most of them done by safety engineers. There are national safety standards produced largely by safety engineers working through the American Standards Association. There are standardized insurance requirements designed to reduce both casualty and fire losses. There are other instruction courses in accident prevention at some of which the regular attendance runs 2,000 and over. Everywhere accident experience is being investigated and accident prevention formalized—in the home, in out-of-the-way corners of industry, in aviation, in Summer camps, in our schools.

In spite of this great organized effort, accidental deaths in the country at large have of late been increasing. This has been mainly due to street and highway deaths, which have mounted steadily ever since the advent of the automobile. On the other hand, in many plants, in some industries, in many schools and even in some communities accidental deaths have been decreasing. There are many cases of reductions of 50 and 75 per cent and even more, all of which goes to show what can be accomplished when leadership, organization and technical training are properly applied.

Qualitatively, there is nothing radically wrong with the movement. We do need, of course, more and better technicians, and we ought to be grateful to Mr. Williams for making it possible for New York University to turn out ten new ones every year. But the death toll does not continue at the present high level because of any shortage in safety engineers but because the average individual has not yet acquired the safety idea. He thinks, if he thinks about it at all, that the safety movement is intended for some one else. He still believes accidents "happen" and are therefore unavoidable; he considers himself relatively immune; if he were asked, he would probably assert that life shorn of risks would be fearfully dull. It cannot be said that he does not believe in safety—he believes too much in his own safety and too little in his danger. As always, it is a fool's paradise.

As even in this highly organized country we have not learned how effectively to organize and control detached individuals—and perhaps never shall—we must fall back upon the influence of public opinion. But it happens that as yet no one has succeeded in getting public opinion squarely behind the safety idea. It is doubtful whether all the safety engineers that the universities could create would be able to do it. The problem, in fact, does not relate to engineering—it is a matter of adult education on a scale sufficient to reach over 100,000,000 people.

Easing Stock Trading.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

When congestion developed during the war it was found essential to march troops for fifty minutes and then clear the highways for ten minutes, thus giving the men a rest and allowing free passage to dispatch riders, intelligence and staff officers.

Why not apply this to the stock market? When proper executions become impossible why not ring the bell and suspend trading for some five or ten minutes? The respite would rest the floor members, help the tape to catch up, permit board rooms to learn actual conditions and thus allow brokers to accept restricted orders instead of issuing that dictum of "market orders only," which deter so many would-be investors ignorant of actual prices.

If the commission-paying public does not get prompt information of price movements the most honest broker cannot earn the commission he receives and the investment public cannot receive the protection to which it is entitled.

20 HEALTH CENTRES URGED BY WYNNE

He Tells Welfare Workers at Luncheon 50% of Manhattan Children Require City's Care.

SEES CONGESTION A FACTOR

Holds Disease Prevention Must Follow Chain-Store Rules in Locating Clinics.

Twenty large health centres similar to the approved new Harlem Health Centre, which will be erected at a cost of $250,000 to $300,000, would be established by the Health Department during the next three or four years in a city-wide extension of child health service outlined yesterday by Commissioner Wynne before a gathering of representatives of more than 100 health and welfare organizations.

Dr. Wynne told the gathering at a luncheon in the Fraternity Clubs Building, 22 East Thirty-eighth Street, that if the city could afford to build local fire and police stations throughout the city it would just as well establish public health stations where the need for such service exists. About 40 per cent of the parents in the city, he said, were able to provide proper care for their children, while the children of the remaining 60 per cent depended upon the city's efforts to protect their health.

Following his formal talk, Dr. Wynne said he hoped to start operation of the Harlem Health Centre temporarily in the Vincent Sanitorium, Seventh Avenue between 138th and 139th Streets, about Dec. 1. Within four years, if the plans of the Health Department are carried out, Dr. Wynne said, as many as twenty such health centres might be established.

Plans Examination of All.

Within the next year, he said, all of the school children in the city would undergo health examinations. Practically no health work for the pre-school child is maintained by the Health Department or public agencies, he pointed out, but there are twenty-one pre-school clinics maintained by voluntary agencies serving 7,500 children. The number to be reached is 500,000, he said, and now not more than 15,000, or 3 per cent, are receiving organized health service. In this field, he said, there lies the greatest opportunity for child health service.

In discussing the report of a special inventory of the Child Health Services of the city conducted by the Welfare Council, for which purpose the luncheon was held, Dr. Wynne explained that the need for more child health stations in Manhattan than in all other boroughs combined was due to the fact that most of the work started in Manhattan, where the greatest congestion was found. With data supplied by the Welfare Council, he said, there would now be a basis for locating health centres in more strategic points.

"The changing needs of various communities," Dr. Wynne said, "require statistics to guide the Health Department in properly locating the health centres. Like the chain store, which locates where the most number of persons pass on the street, the health centre must be located on the same business basis. The next step is to establish real health centres throughout the city and the real need is for decent quarters and proper equipment. We should at least live up to the standards we held out to our patients."

Dr. Wynne thanked the Welfare Council for its report, which, he said, would aid in coordinating disease preventive work throughout the city. He said he felt "a new era, where lost motion will be cut out," had arrived.

Says Few Babies Are Well.

Another speaker at the luncheon was Dr. Roger H. Dennett, chairman of the pediatric section, associated out-patient clinic committee of the New York Tuberculosis and Health Association and Welfare Council. Referring to his subject, "How Can the Pediatric Clinic Serve the Well Baby?" he asserted that there were "not so many 'well' babies in New York City."

The participation of private physicians in child health work was urged by Dr. Haven Emerson, chairman of the health division of the Welfare Council, who presided. He said "the largest part of salvaging babies" was due to education among parents in the care of their children.

McADOO ON THE JOB AT 76.

Chief Magistrate Congratulated by Aides—Sees Courts Improving.

Chief Magistrate William McAdoo celebrated his seventy-sixth birthday yesterday by going to his office at 300 Mulberry Street, where twenty-two years ago he was Police Commissioner, and doing a day's work. His desk was covered with flowers and his office staff was at the door to congratulate him.

To his staff the chief magistrate spoke of his philosophy of life. He aims to achieve "the joy a person gets only from doing the work he is fitted for and likes to do." He said that the magistrates' courts were improving, adding:

"I hope the years will be given me to help make them as I would like them to be and that I will continue to retain the good-will and confidence of our citizens and the respect and friendship of my colleagues and their cooperation in every effort to elevate and keep these most important courts at the highest possible standard for the impartial, upright, humane and courageous administration of justice."

LAUDS ITALIAN INFLUENCE.

Prof. Ayres, Opening Columbia Lectures, Calls Gifts to America Rich.

The influence of Italian immigrants in the artistic and practical development of our national life was lauded by Professor Harry Morgan Ayres last night in an address which opened a week of lectures in connection with the 175th anniversary celebration of Columbia University. Professor Ayres spoke before an audience of students and teachers at the Casa Italiana, 117th Street and Amsterdam Avenue.

"The rich gifts of Italy," he said, "are built into the very structure and fabric of the lives we live, and in the land named after one Italian and in a university that bears the name of another.

"To the contributions of the 4,000,000 Italians now with us, and of their descendants once they are fully absorbed into what will be the American life of the future, we may indeed look forward with hope."

STRICT GUARD KEPT AS HUMBERT LEAVES

Brussels Takes Extraordinary Precautions—Populace Bids Him a Hearty Farewell.

ROME CRITICAL OF FRANCE

Press Charges Laxity With Political Exiles—Italy Considers Extraditing Prince's Assailant.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 25.—Every precaution was taken for the safety of Crown Prince Humbert of Italy on his departure this evening for Milan.

Accompanied by King Albert, the Prince was driven to the station through side streets, to the disappointment of crowds waiting along the supposed route to send him off with their farewell cheers.

The station square was kept in darkness until after the Prince's train left, and nobody was allowed on the upper floors of the hotels flanking the square. The young Italian who yesterday made an attempt on the life of the heir to the Italian throne had registered in one of these hotels.

This afternoon the passage of the royal procession from Brussels Palace to the Town Hall had a stern, military aspect, the royal party being escorted by a squadron of the First Guards Regiment, with swords unsheathed. The open landaus in which Prince Humbert and the Belgian royal family rode, however, were drawn very slowly through the streets. The Belgian populace, which was completely won over by the courage the Prince showed yesterday, cheered him lustily today.

Burgomaster Max congratulated Prince Humbert and his fiancée, Princess Marie José, at the Town Hall. The Prince signed the Golden Book and then watched a fête in his honor, standing with the Princess on a balcony. While a military band played, school children sang in the big plaza in front of the Town Hall.

The Prince's assailant, Fernando di Rosa, says that he was only surprised that he was not killed on the spot after having fired the shot yesterday. When questioned about the motives for his act, the young student said his bitterness against Fascisti and the Italian royal family was caused eighteen months ago when the Italian police beat and imprisoned him after he had cried "Long Live Liberty" during a parade of Black Shirts in Milan. The desire for revenge inspired his action yesterday, he declared.

Hearty Farewell from People.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 25 (AP).—Belgium tonight bade farewell to Crown Prince Humbert of Italy, who is to marry the Princess, Marie José, with unusually hearty demonstrations as though the populace was anxious to remove any bad impression created by the attempt on his life yesterday.

Throughout the concluding day of his visit huge throngs gathered to cheer the young Prince. The unusual precautions the police were obliged to adopt, however, gave a regretable air to the occasion. Not only did solid wooden barriers line streets through which the procession passed, but gendarmes with fixed bayonets on their rifles and policemen with revolvers ready for any hostile demonstration guarded the routes at frequent intervals.

Railway bridges and crossings all the way to the frontier were under special guards until the train of the Prince had safely passed.

Detectives today rounded up all moving picture and sound operators who witnessed the attempt to shoot the Prince yesterday. Their negatives will be inspected to see if they provide a graphic record of Fernando di Rosa, the assailant, bursting from the crowd and firing his revolver.

One sound film had already been sent to the United States but the Belgian magistrates are empowered by international treaties to requisition any material necessary to clear up a criminal case submitted to courts of justice. This is the first time in Belgium that talking movies have been sought as evidence of a crime.

Newspaper Attacks France.

ROME, Oct. 25 (AP).—Crown Prince Humbert's escape from assassination must lead inevitably to a showdown by France on what policy it intends to continue with regard to Italian political exiles enjoying asylum there, says an apparently inspired editorial in Giornale d'Italia today. The editorial, which is two columns in length, is signed with the initials of Virginio Gayda, its editor.

Signor Gayda maintains that France talks too much about the right of asylum.

"Nobody in Italy contests that right, but it has a limit. It cannot be dissociated from the precise duty, which every State has, that of thwarting revolutionary movements on its soil which may menace the existence of neighboring States.

"The assassination of the Crown Prince would raise a whole grave dynastic question. The assassination of Premier Mussolini would be an attempt at the life of the régime and the entire internal construction of Italy."

The Gazzetta del Popolo of Turin said today that Di Rosa was the natural son of a Milanese who had emigrated to Argentina, and of a mother who was unidentified, but understood to be socially prominent. She was said to have been unwilling to recognize her child.

May Extradite Di Rosa.

Il Popolo di Roma said the possibility of Italy asking for the extradition of di Rosa from Brussels was being considered. Once here, he would be tried by a special tribunal for defense of the State under Article 117 of the penal code providing a death penalty for "attempts directed against the life, integrity or personal liberty" of the King, Regent, Queen or Crown Prince.

Belgian penal legislation might oppose extradition, particularly since the crime might be considered to have a political nature. It is said that in any event the special tribunal would proceed with di Rosa's trial whether he is present in Rome or not.

Italy continued today its celebration of the Prince's escape.

There were solemn Te Deums at most of the nation's churches, with parades, banners of exultation and illuminated displays in almost every city in the kingdom.

Most of the movie houses showed pictures of the Prince, which aroused audiences to feverish enthusiasm. Prefects everywhere issued proclamations of thanksgiving, concluding with expressions of loyalty to the House of Savoy.

Passport Believed Forged.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, Oct. 25.—It has been announced from Berne that no passport in the name of Fernando di Rosa was issued from Switzerland. It is believed that the name on the Swiss passport was forged, while police on the Swiss-Italian frontier, with headquarters at Chiasso and Brieg, where all passports and travelers from Italy are examined, declare that no one of the name of di Rosa entered Switzerland in recent years.

There are several Italian families with the name Rosa, without the prefix "di," who live in the canton of Ticino.

IL DUCE STRESSES POWER.

ROME, Oct. 25 (AP).—Fascismo confronts its forthcoming eighth year in power "strongly founded in man and institutions," says Premier Mussolini's annual message to the black shirts in preparation for the Oct. 28 anniversary. The régime "is in a position to confront no matter what situation."

The Premier exhorts his followers to renew their oaths on the anniversary with thoughts for the King and "a salute with a triple cheer of exultation for Crown Prince Humbert."

The body, accompanied by the family and friends, will be taken to Burlington, Vt., on a train leaving at 12:40 P. M. Burial will be in the Goodhue family lot in Burlington Sunday morning at 9:30 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. John Coolidge will be among the mourners.

Prominent citizens here, who have long been intimate with the Coolidge family, have been named as pall bearers. They are Ralph W. Hemenway, the former President's law partner; Judge Thomas J. Hammond of the Superior bench; Judge Edward L. Shaw, Louis Tan Campbell, R. B. Hills and William H. Gere.

Mayor Jesse G. Andre and members of his council will represent the city of Northampton.

A message of sympathy from the Massachusetts Federation of Women's Clubs, meeting at Brockton, was received by Mrs. Coolidge today.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Lieut. Commander Joel T. Boone, President Hoover's personal physician, has been ordered to represent the President at the funeral at Northampton, Mass., of Mrs. Lemira Goodhue, mother of Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, the White House announced today. Commander Boone was personal physician to President Coolidge and attended Mrs. Coolidge in several of her illnesses while she was residing at the White House.

REFORM JEWS TO OPEN A MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

26 Congregations in New York Area Begin Two-Week Campaign Tomorrow.

For the first time in the history of the Jewish community in New York twenty-six congregations, representing all the Reform Temples of the metropolitan area, will join forces in a membership drive. This will commence tomorrow and will continue for two weeks.

The opening meeting of the drive will be held tomorrow morning in the Hippodrome in conjunction with the Religious School Rally, which is staged annually under the auspices of the New York State Federation of Temple Sisterhoods.

More than one thousand workers will participate in the drive, which is being conducted entirely under the auspices of Reform Synagogues. The workers have been instructed that they are not to attempt to proselytize among Orthodox Jews. The aim is to get unaffiliated Jews to join religious congregations.

David A. Brown, a member of the Advisory Council of the drive, will be the main speaker at tomorrow's rally.

The Manhattan workers have already been organized under the leadership of Arthur Hays Sulzberger. The Bronx workers are in charge of Ira J. Sobol, and the Brooklyn workers of Arnold M. Schmidt. Congregations in Queens, Jersey City, Mount Vernon, New Rochelle, Newark and the Oranges will work individually with the help of the headquarters in Manhattan.

The drive is being sponsored by the Metropolitan Association of Reform Congregations.

Louis Kayser Found Dead.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Oct. 25 (AP).—Louis Kayser, a representative of the Frank Schobie Company, Philadelphia, was found dead in his room in a local hotel today. Death was due to natural causes Coroner Frank G. Kreft said. Mr. Kayser lived in Philadelphia.

Miss Morrow Gets 2 Classes In Mexican Public Schools

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 25.—Elizabeth Morrow, daughter of Ambassador Morrow, will teach classes in English without salary in the primary public schools of this city. PRESIDENT VISITS BEDSIDE OF BURTON

Condition of Ohio Senator, Long Ill, Takes a Turn for the Worse.

CHANGE WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Conscious Only Part of the Time on Thursday — Is Nearing His 78th Birthday.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—President Hoover late this afternoon visited the bedside of Theodore E. Burton, the Senator from Ohio, 77 years old, who is so gravely ill that his physician was much disturbed today. On Wednesday Mr. Burton was able to sit at his radio and listen to the warm tribute paid to him by the President in the latter's Cincinnati speech, but now he is in a very serious condition.

Tonight Senator Burton was reported as being slightly stronger. It was said he had been able to converse with the President during the Chief Executive's call.

The veteran Senator, who has had an unusual career in Congress, contracted a heavy cold four or five weeks ago. This developed into influenza, and for a month he was confined to his residence. Lately he has been able to conduct much of his office business at home, but last night he became decidedly worse.

The change in Senator Burton's condition occurred unexpectedly and after he apparently had been improving.

There were still blooming in the Senator's apartment this afternoon flowers sent from the White House before the President went to Ohio, with a note from Mrs. Hoover to Miss Grace Burton, the Senator's niece, assuring the Senator that Mr. and Mrs. Hoover would be thinking of him while away from Washington on their midwestern journey.

Although his seventy-eighth birthday falls in December, the Senator attended the Senate sessions until he was forced to give up. Recently he had been able to walk out doors and on Monday took a walk, his secretary, Robert Norton, assisting him. Rain forced him to keep indoors Tuesday but he was in good spirits. On Wednesday he desired to take a walk but felt his strength unequal to it. After dinner Wednesday evening he sat in his chair and smoked a cigar before retiring.

Wednesday night and yesterday he became worse, and part of the time was only partly conscious. Mr. Norton spent all of last night at the Burton apartment and went there for a similar vigil again tonight. Mrs. Walter F. Brown, wife of the Postmaster General, went to the apartment. A trained nurse has been there since last week and Dr. Robert Baker of Washington is in attendance.

Expressions of hope that Mr. Burton would soon recover from this relapse poured into his office at the Capitol and his apartment as word spread that his condition was serious.

Mr. Burton was first elected to the House in 1888 and served one term He returned in 1895, remaining until 1909, when he took his seat in the Senate for a term which expired in 1909. He refused to run for re-election to the Senate, but was nominated for the House in 1920. He was elected and served from 1921 until last year, when he was elected to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator Frank D. Willis, which ends on March 3, 1933.

MRS. WILLIAM LAIMBEER,
Banker, Financial Writer and Society Leader, Who Died Yesterday.

MRS. N. S. LAIMBEER, NOTED BANKER, DIES

She Was First Woman Executive of the National City, Heading Women's Department.

PRESIDENT OF BANK WOMEN

She Was Also First Woman to Address A. B. A.—Served in Food Administration in War.

Mrs. Nathalie Schenck Laimbeer, banker, financial writer and society leader, died of heart disease yesterday morning at her home at 430 East Fifty-seventh Street. At her bedside were her daughters, the Misses Nathalie Lee and Josephine Louise Laimbeer. She was 46 years old.

For six months Mrs. Laimbeer, who had retired from her post as assistant cashier and head of the women's department of the National City Bank in 1926 because of ill health, had been confined to her home with heart disease and for two weeks she had been bed-ridden. Her son, George Morgan Laimbeer of Knoxville, Tenn., was at once notified and is on his way to New York. The funeral and burial will be private.

She was born in New York, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Spotswood D. Schenck. In the Spanish-American War, when she was 15, she collected $35,000 in dimes to provide an ice plant for the American Red Cross in Cuba.

Mrs. Laimbeer was married twice. In 1904 she was married to Captain Charles Glen Collins of the British Army on Monterey, Cal. Several years later she divorced him, receiving the custody of their son, whose name was legally changed in 1914 from George Fessenden Collins to George Morgan Laimbeer, taking the name of Mrs. Laimbeer's second husband and Mrs. Laimbeer's mother's surname as his middle name. Mrs. Laimbeer in 1909 was married in New York to William Laimbeer, a member of the New York Stock Exchange. Two daughters were born. Mr. Laimbeer was fatally injured in 1913 in a collision of an automobile with a Long Island Railroad train. She was gravely injured in the same accident.

For some time after her husband's death Mrs. Laimbeer was a semi-invalid. Although her husband left an adequate income, she expressed a desire to earn her own living, and, in 1917, when the United States entered the World War, she volunteered her services. She obtained employment with the Food Administration, headed by Herbert Hoover, and was assigned to the work of food conservation.

Mrs. Laimbeer helped in directing the preserving and canning of foodstuffs for shipment to the army camps in France and the United States. Her achievements brought recognition and on Armistice Day, 1918, she took up her first important work in civil life when she became manager of the Bureau of Home Economics of the New York Edison Company. In that position Mrs. Laimbeer demonstrated in colleges, schools and elsewhere the usefulness of electricity in cooking.

She became manager in 1919 of the women's department of the United States Mortgage and Trust Company. At first she had charge of one office. Six months after entering the employ of the trust company she was promoted to assistant secretary and placed in charge of its Manhattan branches where women's accounts were solicited.

In 1925 Mrs. Laimbeer was the first woman to be employed by the National City Bank as an executive, being made assistant cashier and head of the newly formed women's department. She became nationally known as a banker of judgment and acumen. She was the first woman to address the American Bankers' Association, and she became president of the Association of Bank Women.

Although she retired three years ago she continued to be keenly interested in her profession. She contributed many articles on banking to the Delineator and The New York World.

She also participated in charitable undertakings. She was a supporter of the activities of the Child Study Association, of which she was an active member, and in the visiting nurse service of the Henry Street Settlement.

Mrs. Laimbeer was convinced of the future of women in banking. In 1925 she said, "I believe that the greatest development in any future phase of banking will be the development of the woman power in banks." In 1927 she revealed her "secrets" of success for the business woman when, in addressing a Y. W. C. A. secretarial class group, she said:

"Men and women have their places in the business world, different, if you like, but of equal importance. Charm of manner, a quick smile, a pleasing personality and amiability will take you far, but not unless backed by brains and ambition. Do not let yourselves become shelved on piece work. Do your daily stint and do it well. Keep yourself before the public. Make yourself indispensable to the organization you work for; be loyal above everything and give extra time graciously."

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 25.—The Rev. Dr. George A. Gordon, retired minister of the Old South Church here, died early today at his home in Brookline. The members of his family, who had expected the end for the past twenty-four hours, were at his bedside. Last Friday he suffered a stroke. He was 76 years old.

Two years ago, after he had been pastor of the Old South Church for forty-three years, Dr. Gordon resigned, but continued to keep up with affairs of the church.

He was born in Scotland on Jan. 2, 1853, and came to this country in 1871, a penniless boy, in the immigrant steerage. For three years he was variously employed as stonemason, glazier and painter, devoting his evenings to study.

In 1874 he entered the Bangor Theological Seminary, and after being graduated was assigned to a church at Temple, Me., where he was ordained June 20, 1877. He remained there a year and then entered Harvard, being graduated in 1881 summa cum laude, with honors in philosophy.

From 1881 to 1884 he was pastor of the Second Congregational Church at Greenwich, Conn. He became pastor of the Old South Church in March, 1884.

He received the degree of Doctor of Divinity from Yale and Bowdoin in 1893, and subsequent honorary degrees from Harvard, Columbia, Western Reserve, Brown, Williams and Boston University. He was a member of the first Board of Preachers at Harvard and in 1896 was a special lecturer there. From 1897 to 1916 he was a member of the Harvard Board of Overseers.

As an author he was particularly brilliant, and of his many writings the most popular work was an autobiography, "My Education and Religion," published in 1925.

In the Autumn of 1926 he resigned as pastor of the Old South Church, the resignation taking effect the following year. The Church conferred upon him the official title of senior minister and referred to his pastorate as "the most illustrious." The parishioners made him a retirement gift of $50,000.

In June, 1890, Dr. Gordon married Miss Susan Huntington Manning, daughter of Dr. Jacob M. Manning, his predecessor as minister of the Old South Church.

In 1927 Dr. Gordon stirred church circles when from a sickbed he issued a "rebuke" to Bishop Lawrence for the latter's request for clemency for Sacco and Vanzetti, declaring that "gentlemen rule is no better than mob rule."

REV. E. S. SHUMAKER, INDIANA DRY CHIEF, DIES

Head of State Anti-Saloon League Served 53 Days on Penal Farm for Contempt of Court.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 25 (AP).—The Rev. Dr. E. S. Shumaker, for twenty-two years superintendent of the Indiana Anti-Saloon League, died at his home here today after an illness of several months.

E. A. Miles, attorney for the Anti-Saloon League, tonight said that funeral services would be held at the Broadway Methodist Episcopal Church here at 2 P. M. on Monday.

It was recently revealed by Dr. Shumaker's physician, Dr. Charles R. Sowder, that the dry leader was afflicted with a malignant tumor. Dr. Shumaker early this year spent fifty-three days on the State penal farm, the sentence having been imposed by the Indiana Supreme Court on a charge of contempt. He was accused of having published articles criticizing members of the court for their decisions in liquor cases.

At Greenville, Ohio, his birthplace, he was a young boy when he witnessed saloon brawls and poverty in the homes of men addicted to drink. These conditions convinced him early in life, he used to say, that the liquor traffic should be abolished.

Dr. Shumaker spent a part of his boyhood in Effingham County, Ill. He came to Indiana in 1889 at 21 and completed his college education at De Pauw University. In 1890 he was ordained a minister in the Methodist Episcopal Church.

At the instance of Bishop Isaac Joyce of Cincinnati he left the ministry in 1903 to begin his services with the Indiana Anti-Saloon League. In 1907 he was elected State superintendent.

Dr. Shumaker believed in universal prohibition. "The world must be all dry or all wet," he often exclaimed.

He was first cited for contempt in 1926 on an information filed by Arthur L. Gillom, then Attorney General of the State. The court found Dr. Shumaker guilty and imposed a sentence of sixty days on the State farm and a fine of $250.

In October, 1928, Dr. Shumaker announced that he would begin serving the term. He had arrived at the State penal farm at Putnamville then word was received that Governor Jackson had extended a pardon. Associates of Dr. Shumaker paid the $250 fine and he was released.

The Attorney General, however, filed with the Supreme Court a motion asking that the dry leader be recommitted. He alleged that the Governor had no authority to issue a pardon for an offense against the Supreme Court. This contention was upheld and Dr. Shumaker again faced imprisonment.

His attorneys filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus with the United States District Court. Judge Robert C. Baltzell decided he did not have jurisdiction in the case and on Feb. 11 Dr. Shumaker again was taken to the State farm. He was placed at work on the dairy farm of the institution.

FIND WAY TO SETTLE PRODUCE TRUCK ROW

Pyrke and Conferees Favors the Regulation of Unloading to Add to Vehicle Supply.

TERMS NOT YET RATIFIED

State Market Head Declares Real Difficulty Is That the Commission Merchants Lack Facilities.

Complete confidence of settling the difficulties of market truckmen and commission merchants here, without hardship upon either the producer or the consumer, was expressed yesterday by Bern A. Pyrke, State Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets, following the second meeting of his committee, appointed for the purpose.

Although the means of settling the difficulties were not made public and have not yet been formally ratified, it was learned that strict regulation of the periods of time within which commission merchants would be required to unload trucks and thereby release them for further jobs, with possible police enforcement of such regulations, would be the chief point of the plan adopted.

The difficulties which Commissioner Pyrke has undertaken to solve arose from demands of the truck drivers for a horter day and time and a half for overtime, which would mean a large increase in the cost of operation for the trucking companies because of the frequency of long continuous hours of work. The Market Truckmen's Association granted the drivers' demands, but in turn asked concessions from the commission merchants. It was to one of these concessions—Rule 9 of the agreement—that Commissioner Pyrke took exception.

This rule provided that produce shipped into the city by truck would all be taken to a concentration point in West Street, and there reloaded on trucks of the Market Truckmen's Association members. This, Mr. Pyrke maintained, would be an unfair burden on the farmer who shipped direct into the city, requiring him to pay the cost of a second, and apparently unnecessary, truck handling. At Mr. Pyrke's request, the rule was held in abeyance.

Mr. Pyrke said yesterday that the real difficulty lay in the fact that the commission merchants did not have facilities to accommodate the volume of business they handle. Consequently the practice has grown up of permitting the trucks to remain loaded for many hours, using them, to all practical purposes, as storage places for produce.

While the offending rule would have tended to remedy this situation, Mr. Pyrke felt it would be unfair to many producers. The proposed plan of regulation, whereby all trucks, whether of the association or not, would be restricted to certain hours, and unloaded within certain limits of time, would, in the opinion of the members of the committee, produce the same effect.

Among the members of the committee attending yesterday's session were:

WARD W. SMITH, representing the Fruit and Produce Trade Association.
B. C. HAYNES, of the same association.
MICHAEL F. KEARINS, representing the Market Truckmen's Association.
AUGUST H. REICH, representing independent truckers.
W. Y. VELIE of Marlboro, N. Y., representing the State producers.
C. B. LEWIS, representing the New Jersey producers.
EARL FRENCH, of the New York Food Marketing Research Council.
HENRY MORGENTHAU JR., chairman of Governor Roosevelt's advisory committee.

DOUBTS RIVERS HERE CAN BE MADE CLEAN

A. S. Tuttle Thinks Sanitary Board Plans Will Not Fit Waters for Swimming.

Despite proposed sewage disposal and incineration plants, the waters about Manhattan Island will probably never be fit again for swimming, Arthur S. Tuttle, consulting engineer of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, told members of the New York League of Women Voters at a luncheon yesterday at the Women's City Club, 22 Park Avenue.

Mr. Tuttle, together with Dr. Bernard Sachs, chairman of the Committee of Twenty on Street and Outdoor Cleanliness, and Dr. George A. Soper, who was president of the Metropolitan Sewage Commission in 1914, spoke in favor of the referendum bill creating a sanitary commission to be voted for on Nov. 5. Professor Joseph McGoldrick of the Politics Department of Columbia University explained details of the bill.

In response to a question, Mr. Tuttle admitted that other American cities were more advanced in the matter of garbage disposal than New York. He attributed this to the fact that until recent years it was believed that the waters surrounding the city could oxidize all the waste products of the city.

"The situation is now such," Mr. Tuttle said, "that we are forced to copy the smaller inland cities which years ago perfected systems of waste disposal never considered by our own authorities because our problem was not then so acute."

GENTILE LOCATED IN ITALY.

Government There Blasts Rumor He Had Returned Here.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Oct. 25. — Governor Roosevelt today announced that he had received from the Consul General of Italy through Dr. Raymond F. C. Kleb, information that Frank Gentile, who was pardoned by Governor Smith on condition that he would leave the country is now living in the town of San Michele, province of Bari, Italy.

Rumors have been rife that Gentile had returned to this country. Investigation by the Department of Correction failed to obtain any information and then Dr. Kleb asked the Italian authorities to ascertain the facts.

Edison Honored in Argentina.

Special to The New York Times.

EAST ORANGE, N. J., Oct. 25.—Thomas A. Edison received today a cablegram from United States Ambassador Robert Wood Bliss informing him that celebrations of the fiftieth anniversary of Edison's perfection of the incandescent lamp had been held throughout the Argentine Republic. Streets in thirty-six Argentine cities have been named for Edison, the message said.

There are more encouragements than setbacks behind us if we will take the time to count them up, and we have learned a great deal by our experiences as we have come along; therefore we are sure to do better in the future.

EINSTEIN'S THEORIES RAKED BY AMERICANS

Four Scientists at Optical Society Session Turn Guns on Relativity.

CRITICIZE "VERIFICATIONS"

Poor of Columbia Says Starlight Deflection Data Have Been "Selected" as Proof.

DR. SWANN ENTERS DEFENSE

But Kelvin Burns, R. H. Morgan and Dayton Miller Hold Field With Other Aspects of Attack.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 25.—A concerted, critical scrutiny of the Einstein theories of relativity was made today by four American scientists of such eminence that they are here at Cornell University by invitation of the Optical Society of America for the express purpose of explaining to its annual meeting how far Einstein's concepts have really been verified experimentally.

Of the four fields of experiment utilized in efforts to verify the Einstein theories of time, space, and matter, each of the four scientists dealt with one. All afternoon they went over the experimental records, and their attack took the general form of a four-part demonstration that the experimenters who had backed Einstein, in their enthusiasm for relativity, had proclaimed verifications that would not stand exact analysis.

Charles Lane Poor, Professor of Astronomical Physics at Columbia University, was first. He reviewed the observations made by the successive eclipse expeditions of recent years, published as verifications of the Einstein prediction that light from a star passing close to the sun would be bent out of a straight line. The photographed displacements of stars beyond the sun during eclipses showed "no resemblance to the supposed Einstein deflection at all," Professor Poor said.

Credits Concept to Newton.

He said the possibility of such light bending was first suggested by Newton, whose concepts of time, space and matter are supplanted in the view of the relativists, and that Einstein simply "revived it." As a prediction, he said, it did not involve any phase of relativity, but served principally to "decorate" the Einstein theory.

Taking the results of the British and the Lick Observatory eclipse expeditions, Professor Poor noted that they showed not only a displacement of star positions away from the sun in a radial direction, as predicted by Einstein, but also a displacement equally important in a tangential direction which Einstein had neglected to predict at all.

Although these tangential displacements were found to be as important numerically as the radial displacements for which the experimenters were looking, Professor Poor remarked, they rejected the one kind of displacement as error and kept the other kind as verification. The observed results were "selected and scaled" by the Einstein experimenters, he asserted. Then for half an hour he displayed an assortment of "selections" of his own from the same data, whereby he undertook to prove anything he desired.

Professor Poor concluded his review of starlight bending during eclipses of the sun by saying it could be explained, with less violence to probability, as an ordinary refraction of light instead of a phenomenon of the relative aspect of matter and energy.

Burns Takes Up Spectrum Lines.

Dr. Kelvin Burns of the Allegheny Observatory next took up the Einstein prediction that the analysis of light from the sun through a spectroscope would show a uniform shift of all absorption lines toward the red end of the spectrum. After asserting that the modern spectroscope, with an accuracy of three parts in 10,000,000, was a nearly ideal instrument for observing the validity of any finely organized theory, he presented, from his own records and the records of observers who have reported Einstein verifications, a variable, instead of a uniform shift of all spectrum lines toward the red, with some lines not shifted at all.

"Some of our textbooks are teaching our beginners that the red shift is on firmer foundations than Newton's gravitation," Dr. Burns commented, "but I think a scientific man does not so readily accept without adequate proof."

Dr. R. H. Morgan of the United States Naval Observatory took the third field in which Einstein relativity is popularly believed to have been successfully applied, and which is cited as an indication of its universality. As the planet Mercury revolves around the sun its orbit also swings almost imperceptibly. This precession of the perihelion of Mercury, according to the relativists, is completely explained by Einstein.

Dr. Morgan called attention, however, to equally exceptional behavior by the planets Venus and Mars, as fully tabulated by astronomers as the motions of Mercury, and then observed that the Einstein theories apparently were not applicable to them.

Professor Poor injected that Einstein really hit upon the proper rate for the precession of Mercury, "through a mathematical error in his original paper and examination of that paper, now in the files of the Academy of Sciences in Berlin, will show that his error rose from his ignorance of astronomical usages in computation."

Dr. Swann Defends Einstein.

A defense of Einstein was entered by Dr. W. F. G. Swann of the Bartol Research Foundation.

"That relativity demonstration of the motions of Mercury," he said, "has been repeated year after year in the classrooms of universities throughout the world, and nobody has previously undertaken to point out that it was wrong."

Professor Poor shrugged his shoulders. Two listeners among 400 scientists present rose to join Dr. Swann, saying in substance that so many scholars who now accept relativity could not all be wrong.

"That shows the super-gullibility of the Einstein enthusiasts," another replied and was generally applauded.

"I realize," said Dr. Swann, "that I am surrounded by some who would take pleasure in an opportunity to maul a certain celebrated corpse."

The fourth field of attack on Einstein's theories was covered by Dayton C. Miller, Swasey Research Professor of Physics at the Case School of Applied Science in Cleveland.

Since 1921 Dr. Miller has periodically reported to learned societies progress in improving the apparatus with which Michelson and Morley attempted more than forty years ago to detect the absolute motion of the earth through space, in accordance with Newton's principles of mechanics. It was the original failure of this experiment to produce positive results that led eventually to Einstein's fundamental postulate in 1905, that there was no such absolute motion and consequently it could never be observed experimentally. The present theories of relativity are mathematical consequences of this.

Still Observes "Absolute Motion."

Today Dr. Miller renewed the criticism of relativity which he first made in a report to the National Academy of Science in Washington in April, 1925, in a speech as the then retiring president of the American Physical Society.

His repetitions of the Michelson and Morley experiment, Dr. Miller said, had detected an absolute motion of the earth through space, consequently Einstein was mistaken in his initial postulate denying such motion, and his entire superstructure of new concepts would have to be reconsidered.

Dr. Miller stated that he would report in detail on Nov. 19 to a meeting of physicists at Princeton University, and for the present he contented himself with displaying his tables of observations, showing that with apparatus of larger dimensions he invariably observed the interference of two racing beams of light at right angles which Michelson and Morley were seeking.

Statistically, he admitted the two light beams showed a wide variation in degree of interference.

"Is there evidence of a systematic effect?" he said in closing. "You can judge, for these are all the observations. I did not know whether an effect existed or not, therefore I was not at liberty to reject any observation."

Relativists and Newtonians applauded him.

CHARGES POLICE RULE AIDS TAXI MONOPOLY

President of White Horse Service Denounces Order Preventing Used-Car Conversion.

Calling attention to an order issued last week to hack inspectors in all precincts, that on and after Nov. 1, no converted passenger car, except those previously licensed, would be licensed as taxicabs, the White Horse Taxi Service, Inc., yesterday charged that this action would create "a monopoly of the taxicab industry" in the city. This company has tried without succes to obtain permits to operate reconverted cars as taxicabs at lower rates, and has appealed to Governor Roosevelt for an investigation of alleged discrimination against it by Commissioner Whalen and officials of the Hack Bureau.

In a statement, Jules Martin, newly elected president of the White Horse concern, declared that as a result of the order, a "taxi man desiring to purchase a vehicle to be used as a public hack is compelled to buy it from" one of the three principal cab manufacturing companies. Mr. Martin contends that cabmen would find it cheaper to purchase converted passenger cars than the "so-called purpose-built" taxicabs.

"Statistics of the Hack Bureau show that there are upward of 21,000 cabs operating in the city of New York today," Mr. Martin said. "Seven thousand, or one-third of them, are pleasure cars, converted for taxicab purposes. A man who previously could have bought one of these cars for $500 to $600, today is automatically forced out of business, leaving only the monster operators to dominate the taxicab industry in the city of New York."

ATTACKS TUNNEY'S ANSWER

Counsel for Mrs. Fogarty Argues in Bridgeport Court.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Oct. 25 (AP).—Oral arguments, augmented by written briefs, were submitted to Judge Carl Foster in Superior Court today upon the motion of Judge Frank L. Wilder, Counsel for Mrs. Katherine King Fogarty, in her suit against James J. (Gene) Tunney, former heavyweight champion of the world.

Mrs. Fogarty, a former resident of Fort Worth, Texas, and now believed to be in New York City, is suing Tunney for $500,000 upon an allegation that he failed to keep his promise to marry her after she divorced her husband, John S. Fogarty, Jr.

In reply to this, counsel for Tunney, former State Attorney Homer S. Cummings, filed an answer and cross-complaint in which it was alleged the suit was brought to blacken the ex-champion's character.

Judge Wilder in today's motion asked that some 20 paragraphs of the Tunney answer be removed by order of the court as irrelevant, immaterial and of evidential nature. The motion is protested by Tunney's attorneys.

'Floorwalker' Robber Finds 1,976 Busy at It in Sing Sing

Special to The New York Times.

OSSINING, N. Y., Oct. 25.—Hugo Willgerodt, 26 years old, who arrived at Sing Sing prison today to serve from two to five years for robbery, applied for a job as floorwalker in the prison. He did not get it.

Willgerodt was asked if he had any trade or profession that would be useful at the institution. His answer was that he was "an experienced floorwalker" and had held such a position in a department store before being convicted of robbery in the Bronx, New York.

The 1,976 prisoners in Sing Sing include jacks of all trades, but they do most of their walking, when permitted, in the open yard. When unoccupied they are confined seperately in small cells. Prison officials are sure they will find some sort of work for Willgerodt other than floorwalking.

COURT DISMISSES HUDSON GRAND JURY

Justice Kalisch Discharges Body in Mid-Term for Failure to Return Indictments.

PROSECUTOR ASKED ACTION

Rebuke From Bench Is Understood to Refer to Refusal to Charge B. N. McFeely.

For failing to return indictments in complaints carrying convincing evidence of criminal responsibility, the September term of grand jury of Hudson County was sharply rebuked yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Samuel Kalisch when he formally dismissed the body in midterm.

"Contrary to the law and your oaths, you deliberately ignored testimony and found no bills against the accused where the evidence warranted indictments," said Justice Kalisch. "I refer not only to a single case but to many others where the evidence was sufficient to afford grounds for indictment."

Justice Kalisch qualified the rebuke to apply only to those who failed to "observe their oaths," asserting that the foreman, Charles D. Ridgeway, and a number of the jurors had "made a sincere effort to maintain law and order."

"When you were organized," continued Justice Kalisch, "I explained fully what your duties were. If you had followed the instructions of the court, you would have found many true bills. I am heartily sorry that I cannot discharge this jury with the thanks of the court."

The phrase, "not only a single case," used by Justice Kalisch was taken to refer to the complaint against James McFeely, brother of Bernard N. McFeely, Democratic leader and Director of Safety of Hoboken. In his charge to the grand jury Justice Kalisch had specified the McFeely case as one "which appeared to offer meritorious grounds for indictment." The complaint was based on alleged contradictions in McFeely's testimony before the Case and McAllister legislative investigating committees, concerning the deposit of $26,000 for obtaining the garbage collection contract in Hoboken.

Justice Kalisch's dismissal of the grand jury in midterm is without precedent since he assumed the Hudson County assignment last February. His order for dismissal was made on application of Prosecutor John Drewen, Republican, who was appointed to the post by Governor Larson last February.

Mr. Drewen, it was understood, had submitted the McFeely case to the grand jury as a test of its attitude on numerous complaints against persons more or less prominent in politics. Convinced that he could not obtain indictments in any of the cases, he made his successful application for the grand jury's dismissal. The new grand jury will be selected from a venire of thirty-five next Tuesday morning.

JAMES BURKITT HELD IN A FORGERY CASE

Alleged to Have Induced Woman to Use Stolen Bonds and Get Loan on Fake Notes.

TOMS RIVER, N. J., Oct. 25.—James Burkitt, "Jeffersonian Democrat" and political foe of Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, was held in $10,000 bail for the action of the grand jury by Recorder Leary here today after a hearing on a charge of conspiring to commit a forgery.

The principal witness against Burkitt was Mrs. Blanche Mathesheimer, who was rearrested earlier in the day at Lakewood on a charge of larceny at the request of the Jersey City authorities and held without bail in Toms River.

On the witness stand Mrs. Mathesheimer testified that Burkitt induced her to steal $10,000 worth of bonds belonging to her mother-in-law, Mrs. Elizabeth Mathesheimer, from the office of her husband, Dr. J. Louis Mathesheimer, 280 Old Bergen Road, Jersey City, and to hypothecate them at the First National Bank of New Egypt to obtain two loans totaling $7,000 on notes to which she admits she forged the name of her mother-in-law.

Mrs. Mathesheimer is also on bail on a charge of forgery growing out of the note episode. She will be called upon to face this charge in Toms River and the larceny charge in Jersey City.

Mrs. Mathesheimer testified that she gave Burkitt $2,450 in cash and paid $3,050 for an automobile in which they made a trip through Eastern Pennsylvania and New York State, stopping at various hotels, where she paid the bills. While this testimony was being given Burkitt sat with his wife and listened stoically. He has denied all the charges, declaring he is being persecuted for political reasons.

It is charged that the theft of the bonds and the forgeries occurred between Aug. 30 and Sept. 4 of this year. Mrs. Mathesheimer testified she had known Burkitt for more than a year.

BRIDE OF 2 MONTHS KILLED.

Hit by Truck as She Alighted From Trolley—Driver Is Held.

Mrs. Rina Rutherford, 28 years old, of 3,175 Decatur Avenue, the Bronx, a bride of two months, was fatally injured yesterday as she alighted from a Webster Avenue trolley car at 204th Street and was struck by a truck driven by Edward R. Johnson, 29, a negro, of 164 West 140th Street. She died before reaching Fordham Hospital. Johnson, who the police say, was making a left turn in front of the trolley, was arrested at the Bronx Park station on a homicide charge.

Mrs. Rutherford was employed at the branch of the Bank of United States at Fordham Road and Morris Avenue, and was on her way home for lunch. Her husband, according to the police, was out looking for work and was unaware of her death.

Mrs. Hart Loses Last Fight and Quits Home; Wreckers at Work After Long Eviction Siege

Mrs. Tillie Hart's long fight to retain possession of her home in the old three-story dwelling at 429 West Twenty-third Street ended yesterday in defeat.

After her lawyer, T. Roger Mahon, failed to win in court an order to avoid the eviction notice served on her by Kreutzer & Slack, attorneys, whose wives held the master lease on the property, Mrs. Hart departed for an unannounced destination, leaving her furniture on the sidewalk to be removed later.

Immediately after she left, wreckers started on their long-delayed task of demolishing the house to complete the clearing of the site for a large apartment project of the London Terrace Corporation. By nightfall their work was half completed.

Contending that she held a sublease which ran to June, 1930, Mrs. Hart, with the assistance of her cousin, Anthony Nugent, and a roomer, Andrew Jackson, had successfully defied the efforts of the police, wrecking crews, the builders, the Manhattan Bureau of Buildings, and court action designed to dislodge her. She finally was ousted under a dispossess proceeding for failure to pay $600 rent, after spending one night in the house emptied of its furniture.

DETECTIVE INHERITS MILLIONS ON RHINE

But Lacking Data on Variety of Marks, He Puzzles Over Value of Fortune.

STILL A LITTLE DOUBTFUL

H. J. Senff Has Forgotten Most of His German and So Questions Translation of Letter.

Henry J. Senff, who is smart enough when it comes to catching criminals, discovered yesterday that his knowledge of foreign exchange is not all that it should be, and, as for the German his father spoke, he has all but forgotten it. Consequently, he was not sure last night whether he owns $1,000,000 and an estate on the Rhine or whether it is just another castle in Spain.

The cause of his puzzlement was a letter which came to him at Brooklyn Police Headquarters, where he is a member of the Homicide Squad. With the aid of friends Detective Senff discovered that the letter was signed by one Leyler, judge advocate of Aschersleben, Sachsen, Prussia. The letter said that Herr von Hermann Senff, the detective's uncle, had died June 26, leaving his entire estate of 4,000,000 marks, 700 gold marks, a herd of Holstein cows, valuable farming machinery and a large tract of land on the Rhine to Detective Senff.

So Senff and his assistant translators decided. But they were not sure, what with the penmanship of the Judge Advocate of Aschersleben and their own delinquencies in the Teutonic tongue. With the mark near its par value of 23.8 cents, it was not difficult to figure that 4,000,000 of them should be worth $1,000,000 or thereabouts, provided, as Senff pointed out to his friends, that "they are real money."

"If they're real good marks," he told his friends, "and not some kind of diluted pre-war marks, I'll go over and get them, sell the estate and buy each of you a car, but before I go over there after the cash, I'm going to get somebody that knows German better to translate this letter."

Detective Senff has sixteen associates in the bureau. They are all hoping that his fortune consists of "real marks." The detective, who was born in the United States, recalled that his father, Carl Senff, who died several years ago, had a brother, Hermann Senff, in Germany. That much of the letter, he was sure, was no day-dream, but he doubted that he was the sole heir.

Detective Senff has been in the Police Department twenty-five years and is eligible for retirement on half his yearly pay of $2,500. He is 50 years old and with his wife and three children lives at 88-40 198th Street, Queens.

SANCHEZ GUERRA TRIAL IS BEGUN AT VALENCIA

Ex-Premier of Spain and 24 Others Are Accused of Plotting Military Revolution.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VALENCIA, Spain, Oct. 25.—The trial of José Sanchez Guerra, the leader of the Spanish Conservative party and a former Premier, on a charge of being the planner of a revolutionary plot began here today before a military tribunal.

Twenty-four artillery officers of garrisons here and at Ciudad Real are named as co-defendants with Señor Sanchez Guerra, who has been a prisoner on a Spanish gunboat in Valencia Harbor for many months.

Foremost among the officers standing trial with the former Premier is General Castro, who was heard by the tribunal today. General Castro's defense was brief. He calmly asserted that he had nothing whatever to do with Señor Sanchez Guerra's revolutionary plot or the Ciudad Real uprising.

He was followed on the stand by the Archbishop of Valencia, who told the military judges he knew the General well and believed he had told the truth.

Señor Sanchez Guerra will be heard tomorrow, it is expected.

GETS $75,000 AWARD FROM HARRY THAW

Night Club Hostess, Who Charged She Was Beaten at Party, Wins Jury Verdict.

HE ASKS IT SET ASIDE

"Grossly Excessive," Counsel Says —Tells Court That an Appeal May Be Taken.

After less than an hour's deliberation yesterday, a jury before Supreme Court Justice Levy awarded Marcia Estardus, a night club hostess, $75,000 in her $100,000 suit against Harry K. Thaw, whom she accused of assaulting her at a New Year's party in his apartment in 1927. At a previous trial last Spring a jury disagreed. The court reserved decision on a motion by defense counsel to set aside the verdict as "grossly excessive." Thaw's lawyer said he would appeal the case if this is not done.

In summing up to the jury the defense attorney praised his client for not settling the case out of court.

"If Thaw never did another decent thing in his life," he declared, "he had the courage not to submit to extortion. He could easily have gotten rid of this case out of court."

The lawyer characterized the plaintiff, who has wept almost daily throughout the six-day trial, as "one of the greatest sobbers I have ever listened to."

Thaw was present when the verdict was returned. He said he was much surprised and unable to understand the jury's action. He did not take the stand, but his witnesses denied the plaintiff's charge that he had struck and bitten her.

When she heard the verdict Miss Estardus, who was accompanied by her elderly mother, smiled and declared she would "look for a nice man and settle down." "I want children and everything," she added. "I really mean it, for I was married once."

WOULD CHANGE LAW ON SLAYING BY CHILD

C. H. Warner Tells Children's Court Judges' Statute Holding Minor Responsible Is Absurd.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Oct. 25.—Changes in the law relating to murder, first or second degree, by a child were recommended today by Charles H. Warner, superintendent of the Brooklyn Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, in his discussion of the topic "Should a Child be Charged With Murder?" before the State Association of Judges of Children's Courts.

Mr. Warner told a group of judges in the Senate chamber that penal science becomes absurd in its procedure when a child is indicted for murder, because the question of guilt then revolves about moral responsibility.

"Our penal law," he said, "holds such a child guilty of murder in the first or second degree, and yet it cannot marry without the consent of its parents, cannot be held responsible for its torts and cannot make a valid contract. If injured it must have a guardian ad litem appointed by the court so it can thereby bring a suit for damages, it cannot administer property. So the law solemnly indicts the child on the assumption that, although it is without the grasp on the realities of life in other respects, it is in full possession of all the consciousness of right and wrong that such a crime requires."

Mr. Warner told the judges he proposed to have his ideas incorporated in a legislative measure. The association also will consider the subject, Judge Parker F. Scripture of Oneida County said.

Andrew G. Johnson, Charles L. Mosher of the State Department of Education, and Miss Elsie Bond, assistant secretary of the State Charities Aid Association, were other speakers.

The association held a joint session tonight with the City Club of Albany. The speakers were Judge Daniel J. Brennan of the Court of Common Pleas of Newark and William L. Butcher, who talked on "The Challenge of the Boy."

YALE COACH DEFENDS LEADING OPPONENTS

College Paper Says Charges Against Harvard and Princeton Were Overstressed.

COLUMBIA JOINS CRITICS

Spectator Holds That While It Approves Carnegie Inquiry It Deplores "Generalities."

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 25.—Mal Stevens, head coach of the Yale football eleven, and The Yale Daily News defended Harvard and Princeton from the allegations contained in the Carnegie Foundation report that they were guilty of encouraging athletes to come to them. Stevens said that if a Harvard baseball player wished to peddle peanuts during the football season he had a perfect right to do so. He said that the accusations were unfair and overstressed. The Yale Daily News said that the findings of the report were not startling to persons familiar with college life, and that placing Harvard and Princeton in the category of universities guilty of questionable athletic practices was unreasonable. The News editorial follows:

Says Impossible Is Attempted.

"The report attempts the impossible in its striving for generalizations on football. Its attendant evils are largely endemic throughout the East, yet we are fully aware that the Middle and Far West have gone berserk over the sport.

"The futility of classifying Harvard and Princeton in the motley group of colleges and universities guilty of proselyting and commercialism is a case in point. It is regrettable that these two universities have been denied the first flush of exoneration that it was Yale's good fortune to receive, but their convincing refutation of the charges which were leveled against them, the one the words of President Hibben and Coach Roper, the other a statement from Director of Athletics Bingham at Harvard, make the initial charge seem meaningless."

Coach Stevens said: "These stories about Harvard and Princeton being guilty of proselyting athletics are wrong. When we can no longer rely on gentlemen like Mr. Bingham to uphold their end of agreements with us, we will see the end of all benefit in intercollegiate athletics. Why shouldn't a baseball player sell peanuts at Harvard during the Fall? And why should that place Harvard in the position of being accused of remunerating athletics?"

Hutchinson Upholds Policies.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 25.—Upon his return from abroad Sydney E. Hutchinson, chairman of the University of Pennsylvania Council of Athletics, today upheld the athletic policies of the university and said he could not make a statement at this time on the Carnegie Foundation findings.

"The policies of the University of Pennsylvania in regard to athletes are very strict," said Mr. Hutchinson. "Few scholarships are awarded to athletes. We have much trouble in getting help for athletes."

George S. Capelle Jr. of Wilmington, Del., an alumnus of Pennsylvania, declared today that if he cared to assist a boy through college, whether he played football, tiddledywinks or was "just a plain dub," it was his particular privilege, and nobody's business but his own.

Criticism From Columbia.

The first expression of undergraduate reactions to the indictment against Columbia College in the Carnegie Foundation report on athletics appeared yesterday in an editorial in Spectator, daily newspaper of the college, criticizing the report for its "generalities and innuendoes" and chiding the press with "cheap sensationalism," although approving the conception which prompted the investigation.

"As a result of statements encompassing but part of the truth," the editorial says in part, "derogatory implications are drawn by the general public unacquainted with the actual situation. Thus when the report states that here at Columbia only athletes are permitted to wait upon the training tables, the reasonable inference is that a large number of men are employed to do easy work, receiving at the same time a disproportionate salary. The facts are that four men are so engaged to wait upon forty others at the training table, serving three meals a day, seven days a week per man, and we might add, no tips."

JOAN LA COSTE GUILTY IN ROBBERY ATTEMPT

Woman Auto Racer Convicted of Entering Chicago Hotel Room With Chloroform.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—Miss Joan La Coste, automobile racing driver, who, the police charge, turned robber to replenish her diminishing funds, was found guilty this evening by a jury in Judge Joseph B. David's criminal court of assault with intent to commit robbery.

The judge, however, indicated that he would not impose the one-to-fourteen-year sentence in the penitentiary as provided by law, but would put Miss La Coste on probation.

The ultimate fate of the defendant, however, will not be determined for two weeks when a motion for a new trial is to be argued. At the outset of the trial the judge had held out an offer of probation if the defendant would admit she was not telling the truth when she said that it was not an attempt to rob and would plead guilty. She rejected the offer.

Miss La Coste was accused of invading the apartment of Mrs. Rebecca Bobbe in the Chicago Beach Hotel, carrying a bottle of chloroform.

A length of rose and yellow brocatelle brought $246 from G. R. Howe, and a length of rose-shot silk taffeta was sold for $216 to J. W. Cross.

Wall Street's Vicissitudes Nothing to Will Rogers

To the Editor of The New York Times:

WAYNOKA, Okla., Oct. 25.—Flyids from New York all day just looking down on beautiful lands and prosperous towns, then you read all this sensational collapse of Wall Street.

What does it mean? Nothing. Why, if the cows of this country failed to come up and get milked one night it would be more of a panic than if Morgan and Lamont had never held a meeting. Why, an old sow and a litter of pigs make more people a living than all the steel and general motor stock combined. Why, the whole 120,000,000 of us are more dependent on the cackling of a hen than if the Stock Exchange was turned into a night club.

And New Yorkers call them rubes. Yours,

WILL ROGERS.

FURRIERS ACCUSED OF INSURANCE PLOT

Five Held for Starting Fire and Then Seeking to Collect $140,250.

TUTTLE PRESSES CHARGES

Blaze in West 27th Street at First Laid to Trade Foes of Dachis Brothers.

The fire that followed an explosion in the building at 213 West Twenty-seventh Street about midnight on July 29 was the work of five conspirators who plotted to defraud insurance companies out of $140,250, according to a statement made by United States Attorney Tuttle yesterday before United States Commissioner Francis A. O'Neill at the arraignment of the five on a charge of mail fraud.

The defendants are Louis Dachis, a dealer in furs, who occupied the ground floor of the building; his brother, Jacob, in the same business at 215 West Twenty-ninth Street; Meyar Felcher, a furrier and a relative of the Dachis brothers, who occupied the second floor; Louis Klein, who was bookkeeper for Jacob Dachis, and Morris Rosenthal, a salesman employed by Louis Dachis.

It is alleged that the conspiracy began last December, when the furs in the store of Louis Dachis began to disappear. It is also alleged that much of the merchandise was sold without a record having been kept of the money received for it and that the furs not sold were transfarred to the store of Jacob Dachis.

Thomas J. Curran, Assistant United States Attorney, who investigated the case, said that it appeared to be certain that the fire did not occur until the West Twenty-seventh Street store had been cleared of most of its merchandise. It was at first reported that the explosion had been caused by a bomb set by business enemies of Louis Dachis.

Mr. Tuttle in urging heavy bail told the commissioner that the Dachis brothers first sold their goods at less than cost and then stocked up with goods of a much cheaper grade on which the insurance was placed. Immediately after the fire, he said, claims for the insurance were filed. He said that witnesses would tell about the carrying into the building of three drums of an inflammable liquid, one of which burst. He also said that witnesses would give testimony about the efforts made by Louis Dachis to destroy evidence of the explosion.

Emil Haas of the law firm of Cohen & Haas, counsel for the accused men, sought to keep the bail at a low figure, but Commissioner O'Neil held the two Dachis brothers in $50,000 bail each and the three others in $25,000 each. Mr. Tuttle asserted there would be a speedy trial of the case.

PROCLAIMS "NAVY DAY."

Gov. Roosevelt Sees New Significance in Tomorrow's Observance.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 26 (AP).—Navy Day, which falls on Sunday, Oct. 27, said a statement by Governor Roosevelt today, "naturally acquires an augmented significance in view of the developments among the nations of the world in the past few months with respect to the limitations of armaments.

"The primary purpose of the official designation of Navy Day," he said, "is to recall to the public mind the accomplishments of the American Navy which, from the days of John Paul Jones and John Barry, has played such an important part in the defensive and protective measures undertaken by our government, both in times of peace and war. It cannot lose its original significance nor can the purpose for which it was established be overlooked."

It is not designated, he said, "to stimulate any sentiment antagonistic to the furtherance of world peace."

He urged display of "Old Glory" and participation in suitable exercises on that day.

HIT BY TRAIN, GETS $46,750.

Federal Jury Grants Verdict to Blackwood, N. J., Invalid.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 25.—A Federal court jury today awarded damages of $46,750 to Howard C. Firth of Blackwood in his suit against the Erie Railroad for injuries when his truck was struck at Homestead. He sought $200,000.

Firth has been confined to his bed since the accident. The court and the jury went to his bedside Tuesday to hear his version of the case, as it was deemed precarious to move him to the court room.

William H. Beach, crossing watchman, testified he stood in the middle of the tracks and held up both hands to warn Firth. The watchman stated that Firth slowed down, but continued in the train's path.

The engineer of the train, William H. Myers, said he sounded the whistle at a bridge, 800 feet from the crossing.

INSURANCE PLANNED IN ELECTRIC TRADE

Contractors to Contribute to Fund to Pay for Policies of 7,600 Employes.

PENSIONS ARE INCLUDED

Program Drafted by Union and Employers Also Provides Disability Payments.

TRUSTEES TO BE NAMED

Plan Is Expected to Be in Force by March 1—Contractors Look for Fewer Strikes.

Plans for group life insurance, old age pensions and total disability insurance covering all union electrical workers in Greater New York, to be furnished at no cost to the worker, have been formulated by the Electrical Contractors Association of New York and Local Union 3 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, according to a joint announcement yesterday by the organizations.

Under the terms of the agreement a fund, to be administered by a board of trustees, will be raised through assessment of all electrical contractors employing union workers. From this fund, premiums on the group insurance will be paid and the general organization of the project maintained. Some 7,600 union electrical workers employed by approximately 400 contractors in this city, will benefit.

Sponsored by the Electrical Contractors Association, which represents thirty-nine leading electrical contractors, the plan calls for contributions from each firm to the amount of 20 cents for each hour worked by each employe, beginning Nov. 1. Later payments will be made by employers in accordance with regulations adopted by the board of trustees from time to time.

The arrangement includes provision for the shifting of union workers from one employer to another, according to the exigencies of building conditions from time to time, while they still maintain their right to group insurance.

Benefits to the workers will consist of a regular life insurance policy of $3,000, with a $40 monthly pension for those of the age of 65 or more, and $30 month paid to those totally disabled. Immediate old age pensions will be paid to those qualified to receive them when the arrangement goes into effect, according to union officials.

To these the members of the Electrical Contractors Association at no competitive disadvantage with other contractors in the city, the union agrees to make the adoption and enforcement of the plan a condition of employment of its members. Union officials expressed the conviction, however, that all employers would willingly enter into the agreement.

The board of trustees will consist of five members, four to be selected from the Electrical Contractors Association and one from Local Union 3. It is anticipated that the arrangements will be completed and the plan put in force by March 1, 1930.

Officials of the Electrical Contractors Association were enthusiastic over the scheme yesterday, and were of the opinion that it would tend to eliminate strikes among the electrical workers who benefit by its provisions. The clause to permit workers to move from job to job was particularly commended as a move insuring stability in the electrical industry.

TELLS GARDNER MARION STILL NEEDS TROOPS

Head of Mill Where Six Strikers Were Killed Makes Plea to Governor at Raleigh.

RALEIGH, N. C., Oct. 25 (AP).—R. P. Baldwin, president of the Marion Manufacturing Company, at the gates of which six strikers were killed on Oct. 2, tonight headed a party which appeared before Governor O. Max Gardner and asked that the troops that now guard his mill village not be removed until the remaining "undesirables" in his and the neighboring Clinchfield village are removed.

Governor Gardner was not ready to make his decision tonight. He wants to confer with N. A. Townsend, who represented him at Marion. Mr. Townsend conferred today with Alfred Hoffman, the man who organized the union at Marion.

"My chief interest is in preserving the peace," declared the Governor.

The County Commissioners and Sheriff of McDowell County and the Board of Aldermen and Mayor of Marion have asked that the troops be kept a while longer.

Plans to Press Civil Suits.

The freeing of nine men held at Gastonia, N. C., for the killing of Ella May Wiggins, a striker, the refusal of the grand jury to indict for the kidnapping of three textile organizers and the acquittal in a neighboring county of the men charged with flogging one of the organizers brought a statement yesterday from the American Civil Liberties Union that it would press civil suits for damages against those known to have been connected with these events.

In a telegram to J. Frank Flowers of Charlotte, chief counsel for Fred Erwin Beal and six strikers convicted of second degree murder, the union asks for prompt action to bring damage suits against all "individuals and company agents" known to have been involved.

Jury Visits Murder Scene in Trial.

A jury sitting before Judge Cornelius F. Collins in General Sessions in the trial of Bakary Minibah, Algerian negro, accused of having murdered John Hill last June 9 at 208 East 126th Street, visited the scene of the crime yesterday at the request of the jurors. After returning to the court room the defense counsel made a motion for dismissal of the indictment. It was denied and adjournment was taken till Monday.

FAVORS ABOLITION OF DEATH PENALTY

Universalist "Declaration of Faith" Says It Would Make Convictions More Certain.

PRISON REFORM ADVOCATED

Resolution, Stating Church Policy, Will Be Voted Upon by Washington Convention Today.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Greater education regarding the prohibition law, abolition of capital punishment in the interest of greater certainty of conviction of offenders and therefore of greater deterrence of crime, application of psychiatry to all criminals, and improved prison administration were included in the "declaration of social faith" reported today by the social welfare commission of the Universalist General Convention.

Prisons, the report declared, should be more like educational hospitals.

"We do not hold to the letting down of discipline," the commission stated, "but we do hold that this attitude means public sanity in the treatment of offenders, as well as helping to the right use of the indeterminate sentence, the classification of prisoners and more justice in fitting discharged prisoners to some after job.

Social hygiene instruction in school and church and "the supreme duty of progressive education in the home" was urged, and belief expressed in the desirability of medical certificates for marriage and the sterilization of the feeble-minded.

"Partial censorship" of theatres was denounced, the commission recognizing, however, "need of a supervision that is fully democratic and respectful of dramatic art."

The report further declared in favor of "a thoroughgoing civil liberty which provides for free speech, free press, free literature and free education."

Resolutions based on this report, and endorsement of the resolutions favoring birth control approved by the conference yesterday afternoon, will be voted by the Convention tomorrow morning.

It will be voted by the convention to-mittee was displaced on the program today by the taking of contributions and pledges of funds amounting to $15,000, completing the $25,000 required for the Tower of Universal Brotherhood and World Peace on the new National Memorial Universalist Church here, which will be dedicated as a tribute to Owen D. Young at a special service Sunday afternoon.

The delegates were received later by President Hoover.

The morning session of the convention was brought to an abrupt close by the sudden death of Mrs. George Emerson of Scranton, Pa., who suffered a heart attack and fell dead as she was returning to her seat in the rear of the hall. She was about sixty years of age.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Emerson, the former a retired business man of Scranton, were delegates to the convention.

ST. THOMAS'S CARILLON WILL RING ON FRIDAY

Dedication Will Mark Continuation of Anonymous Gift Made on Christmas, 1873.

A carillon of twenty-one bells which has been presented to St. Thomas's Protestant Episcopal Church, Fifth Avenue and Fifty-third Street, will be dedicated Friday, which is All Saints' Day. The carillon will be played for the first time that morning at 11 o'clock. The service of dedication and the playing of the bells will be broadcast by Station WOR.

The bells were cast last Summer at the Taylor Foundry, Loughborough, England. The largest bell, note B, weighs about three tons, and the entire carillon weighs about thirty tons. It is one of the most notable single gifts ever made to the parish.

The carilion continues a memorial gift of 1873, a set of ten bells. They were so badly damaged when the former edifice was destroyed by fire in 1905 they could not be used again. The bells were sent to England and their metal was used in casting new ones.

The largest bell, in addition to the memorial inscription, carries the words, "O praise the Lord for His goodness and declare the wonders that He doeth for the children of men." The next largest bell bears the inscription, "Part of the metal used in this chime was from the original set of bells given on Christmas, 1873."

So far the name of the donor has not been made public.

WILL LAY CHURCH STONE.

Passaic Congregation to Mark New Edifice Tomorrow.

The cornerstone of the new edifice of the First Presbyterian Church at Passaic Avenue and Grove Street, Passaic, N. J., will be laid tomorrow afternoon. The church will be of Gothic design and it will cost between $400,000 and $500,000. The pastor is the Rev. George Harold Talbott.

Amplifiers will be installed and the streets surrounding the site will be roped off. The cornerstone boxes which were removed from the old edifice will be placed inside the new cornerstone by William E. Scott, church historian, who packed the cornerstone box for the old church in 1887, and unpacked it last July 20. One of the articles to be included will be a copy of the rear paper edition of today's New York Times.

Addresses will be delivered by the Rev. Dr. Charles R. Erdman, professor in Princeton Theological Seminary, and the Rev. Dr. John McDowell, secretary of the Presbyterian Board of National Missions.

WOMEN BACK PLAN FOR WIDE DRUG WAR

City Federation Pledges to Aid in Promoting World Meeting to Check Traffic.

The New York City Federation of Women's Clubs in convention yesterday at the Hotel Astor pledged its cooperation to a proposed World-Wide Opium Conference for the consideration of the problems involved in the limitation of the world's supply of narcotics which, according to the resolution adopted, is in excess of medical and other legitimate needs and offers a temptation to smuggling and illicit uses.

Sara Graham-Mulhall, who proposed plans for the conference, said later in an interview that her plan was to memorialize President Hoover by a petition to be signed by 8,000,000 women asking him to invite the nations affected by the drug trade to confer in Washington from Nov. 11 to 17, 1930. She said that she already had 200,000 signatures and that resolutions supporting this conference plan would be introduced in the Senate and the House of Representatives.

She said that the plan grew out of the interest of various governments in a resolution adopted last year by the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs asking a reduction in the use of opium and other narcotics.

The resolution adopted yesterday referred to the opium convention of 1912, urged the need of close cooperation among the States that signed this convention and asserted that "the next step in the international campaign must be the limitation of the excessive supply of narcotics produced and manufactured."

The convention also urged the protection of Frans Siegel Park, a playground space in the Bronx which, it is said, will be curtailed in size by the proposed widening of Mott Avenue.

Mrs. Frank J. Shuler, president of the federation, and presiding officer of the convention, presented, by proxy, the organization's medal of honor to Mme. Marie Curie, co-discoverer of radium. Mme. Curie was unable to be present, and the medal was received on her behalf by Mme. Belle de Rivera, founder and honorary president of the federation.

FIGHTS CITY'S LEASING CHURCH SCHOOL SPACE

Franklin Ford, Saying Children Come Under Catholic Influence, Gets Court Order.

In an attack on leases by the Board of Education of space in Roman Catholic parochial schools and churches for public school use Franklin Ford, radio broadcaster and president of the Defenders of Truth Society, got an order from Supreme Court Justice Glennon yesterday directing Mayor Walker and the commissioners of the Sinking Fund to show cause on Tuesday why they should not be restrained from making these leases.

Mr. Ford contended that the payment of public moneys to Roman Catholic institutions violates the State Constitution and laws, and the Federal provision for a separation of Church and State.

The suit is aimed at a proposed lease of rooms in the Church of the Holy Family, Blackrock and Castlehill Avenues, the Bronx, at $12,000 a year, and the renewal of leases in St. Clare's Mission of the Franciscan Sisters of the Atonement, 202 East 153d Street, at $2,500 and in the church and school building of Our Lady of Refuge, Briggs Avenue and 196th Street, at $7,000. A fourth lease, already made, with St. Anselm's Church, 687 Tinton Avenue, the Bronx, at $7,475, is also opposed. The complaint demands that this lease be cancelled.

Mr. Ford, who sues as a taxpayer on the ground that the payment of the money in violation of the law is a waste of public funds, declared that the Franciscain Sisters use the auditorium of St. Clare's Mission daily after school is out to teach the doctrine of their church to children remaining in the playground. He said that twelve classrooms in the parochial school of the Church of the Holy Family were being used by the Board of Education for public school rooms although the commissioners of the Sinking Fund had not yet approved the lease. He complained that public school children in the Church of Our Lady of Refuge used the same corridors as the parochial school children, while in St. Anselm's Church the public school rooms were on the third floor and the first, second and fourth floors were used by the church parochial school, where the classes are taught in part by nuns wearing the garb of the Church.

"The assignment of public school children to public school classes taught in rooms situated in the parochial schools of the Roman Catholic Church," says the complaint, "causes said public school children to be subjected to Roman Catholic religious influences and to the religious teachings of the Roman Catholic Church and is illegal and in violation of the education law and other laws of the State of New York and of the Constitution of the State of New York and of the United States."

AMHERST ACCEPTS BUILDING

$250,000 Gift Announced as Chemistry Laboratory Is Dedicated.

Special to The New York Times.

AMHERST, Mass., Oct. 25.—G. A. Plimpton, president of the Board of Trustees of Amherst College, accepting the William Henry Moore Laboratory of Chemistry today from Mrs. W. H. Moore at the official dedication, announced an additional gift of $250,000 for the maintenance of the building in the future. The gift came as a result of the generosity of the donor, Mrs. Moore, and her two sons, Edward S. Moore and Paul Moore.

In opening the dedication services this afternoon, President Pease of Amherst College stated that the new chemistry building was the "largest single gift ever received by Amherst College."

The cost of the building, erected by McKim, Mead & White, New York City architects, was about $450,000. Mr. Moore entered Amherst College in 1867 but, owing to ill health, was not graduated.

SOCIAL EFFICIENCY CALLED SCHOOL AIM

Dr. H. B. Wilson at Syracuse Teachers' Convention Denies Discipline Is Sole Purpose.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 25.—Discipline as the sole purpose of American schools is an exploded theory, for education has come to mean fitting for social efficiency in all walks of life, Dr. Harry B. Wilson of Washington told 8,000 New York State teachers in convention here today.

Terming some objects of education as "bread-and-butter aims," Dr. Wilson said:

"We have as our aim social efficiency, getting it by the teaching of occupations, citizenship, right use of leisure and preservation of health, inculcating within children the desire to live fully and rightly. And, because of that, education has a moral force.

"Two other aims have been added, that of solid training in fundamental processes, such as reading and writing, and that of teaching worthy regard for the home."

America is headed toward great things in art, Lorado Taft, sculptor, said in an address on "Beauty in American Life."

"In the past our appreciation of art was bounded by the comic strip, our literature by the newspapers, while our homes were like our furniture—on casters with little or no tradition behind them," he said.

"We have neglected beauty, but ours is a wonderful and marvelous heritage, and I think we are beginning to appreciate it. Here is an opportunity for the teacher to point out the beautiful things she sees to her children, to get them also to appreciate beauty in nature and art.

Dr. G. Carl Alverson, superintendent of schools here and president of the New York State Teachers' Association, outlined a creed for teachers as follows:

"Let us believe that the State wishes and will educate every child. Let us know that we are teachers not for a job, not for money, but to live much, to live well and above all to live rightly."

A broader scope of education, with the introduction of a visual program for elementary schools, was advocated by A. E. Gilbert of Schenectady. The visual method, he said, "trains the child to observe, analyze and evaluate things for himself."

Mr. Gilbert especially recommended this type of teaching for the elementary schools, on the ground that the younger child has little sense experience and will react more quickly than the older child.

At a luncheon at the Chamber of Commerce the Central District selected the following officers:

Charles V. Bookhout, principal of Roosevelt School, Utica, president; George F. Bradford, Superintendent of Schools in Auburn, vice president, and Miss Leone M. Amann of Roosevelt School, Utica, secretary.

BOATS REACH CAIRO, ENDING OHIO PAGEANT

Last Dam in River's Navigation System Is Dedicated—Hoover Waterway Program Endorsed.

Special to The New York Times.

CAIRO, Ill., Oct. 25.—The week's celebration dedicating the Ohio River's new nine-foot stage came to an end this afternoon, when the boats taking part in the pageant nosed out into the muddy waters of the Mississippi. They stayed in the river long enough for a weary calliope to play "Ole Man River" for the last time, then they put back to Cairo for the official Illinois welcome.

Altogether the boats covered almost a thousand miles from Pittsburgh to Cairo. They went through fifty dams and demonstrated that all-year-round navigation on the Ohio is now possible. Over a period of about twenty years the Federal Government spent upwards of $118,000,000 to accomplish this.

The last dam in the series utilized to keep the nine-foot minimum was dedicated as the pageant went through this morning. It is twelve miles above Cairo.

The chief speaker at the dedication was Major Gen. William L. Seibert of Bowling Green, Ky. He said:

"In order to utilize fully our resources, we must continue to bring the interior of the nation as near tidewater as possible by cheap transportation routes such as this. A ship channel from the Atlantic Ocean to the Great Lakes and a connection from Chicago to the Gulf of Mexico stand out prominently as similar routes."

The Ohio Valley Improvement Association, which fought for the development of the river, held its annual convention aboard the steamer Cincinnati. Among their resolutions was one in support of President Hoover's waterway program. The association also resolved to urge the building of proper terminals along the Ohio, the coordination of all transportation methods, each with its proper function, and the protection of navigation from any commercial inroads that might ruin it.

The last day of the trip down the river was as warmly received as were those preceding. Stops were made at Paducah, Ky., and at the last dam, Metropolis, Ill., turned out with a band and the school children, but the water near the shore was so shallow the boats could not land.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stabilizing Efforts Evident in Securities as Trading Volume Declines.

The marshaling of the country's foremost constructive forces, banking, industrial and political, to bring order out of chaos in the security markets of the country, and the action taken, as well as the reassurances spoken, met with a considerable degree of success yesterday. The market reached an even keel at the start of trading and maintained it all day. Some stocks were higher at the close, some lower, but the general level reflected a remarkably firm position, and the hysteria so evident on the previous day had just about disappeared.

Second only to the stabilization of prices, at about their closing level of the Thursday afternoon rally, the most satisfactory market development yesterday was the reduction of the volume to that of a normal day. Sales on the New York Stock Exchange were 5,923,220 shares, compared with 12,894,650 on the biggest and most exciting day in the market's history. Similar reductions were evident on all of the country's Exchanges, and at the market's close last night it was apparent that the situation, which has caused so much financial distress throughout the country, is now well in hand.

It is not to be expected, by any means, that this will change suddenly from a bear to a bull market. There are obviously many corrections and readjustments yet to be made, but they can now be accomplished in unhurried and deliberate fashion, on sober markets which have been shorn of their excitement, and with the opportunity to weigh all considerations. Such an era of speculation as has swept the country in the last two or three years cannot be cured overnight. Rather, it is the opinion of many financial and industrial leaders that the progress of readjustment will be a slow one, but orderly. Possibly the market may be compared to the health of a person who has been seriously ill, but who has passed the crisis definitely, with the aid of competent medical skill, and is on the road to recovery. It is reasonable to assume that there will be a considerable period of convalescence, in which natural strength will come back slowly.

The banking association which has been formed by New York's leading institutions has, quite naturally enough, no idea in mind of "putting up stocks." Rather, it will be the purpose to so stabilize the markets as to bring about a quick restoration of confidence in the minds of stockholders in their own securities. The chances for success in this undertaking are bright. At least, a good start was made yesterday.

To just what extent business generally will be affected by the market's drastic decline it is yet too early to judge. Attention was called yesterday to the state of the iron and steel industry at the institute's annual meeting, and conditions were described as entirely satisfactory. It is usually the case, after such tremendous market upheavals as the market has just experienced, that there is an accompanying decline in public purchasing power and that this is reflected first in the luxury fields. Possibly this will be the case following the November reaction. The situation, in many respects, is so unlike that of preceding declines, that to attempt to gauge the effects before the task of complete stabilization is completed is well nigh impossible.

U. S. PRINTING REORGANIZED

New Stocks, New Capital and Write Off of $2,688,081 Good-Will.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Oct. 25.—Reorganization of the capital structure of the United States Printing and Lithograph Company by which the $100 par common stock will be exchanged on a three-for-one basis for new common stock and each $100 preferred share will be exchanged for two shares of new $50 par cumulative Series A stock, was unanimously approved by stockholders of the company today.

Provision was made also for the raising of $1,000,000 new capital through sales of 10,239 new preferred shares to bankers for $511,950 and the sale, at the discretion of the directors, of 10,000 preferred shares for $500,000.

The stockholders also approved the writing down of the company's goodwill from $2,688,082 to $1.

VOTE GIMBEL EXPANSION.

Stockholders Act on Increase to 2,000,000 Shares.

Stockholders of Gimbel Brothers, Inc., yesterday approved the increase in the capital stock of the company from 622,500 shares to 2,000,000 shares, and an offering to stockholders of a portion of the increase at $25 a share on the basis of three for each five held. The offer closes Nov. 6. The stock closed yesterday on the New York Stock Exchange at 22¾.

The proceeds of the sale will be used for the retirement of the bank indebtedness of the company and further progress in the improvement of the business.

San Francisco Stocks Strong.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 25.—Western securities closed strong today in the face of heavy selling brought about by the need for cash to cover margin requirements. Brokers said this showed that local issues had not been overinflated. The Pacific Coast stocks, with few exceptions, have behaved satisfactorily and despite the price cut in crude oil in California the oil group has held up well. The action of the New York boards has attracted most of the attention here, with other lines of business showing little change for the week.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

News, Comment and Incident, On the Stock Exchange and In the Financial Markets.

Although the market was still nervous and fitful yesterday, trading on the Stock Exchange was orderly and a better feeling was abroad in Wall Street. The advance that got under way on Thursday afternoon was continued in the better grade dividend-paying stocks. This contributed to the general steadiness and served to allay the fears of speculators. It was plain that liquidation went on under cover of the strength in leading issues, but the financial community was leaning more and more to the belief that the "weak spots" had been eliminated. There was no aggressive selling in any part of the list. On the contrary, active buying, described as of the "best kind," lifted a long list of stocks. Among these were American and Foreign Power, American Tobacco, Goodyear Tire, Electric Autolite, Colorado Fuel and Iron, United States Industrial Alcohol and Vanadium.

Market Stability.

Two factors stood out strongly yesterday and were easily the feature of a day in which a considerable degree of tenseness still existed. The first was the stability of the price level; the other, the sharp drop in sales on the Exchanges. What Wall Street, generally, would like to see happen would be a series of quiet markets, of say 3,000,000 shares each, until such time as the entire district returns to normal and economic forces once more are operative in guiding the fluctuations in stocks.

Looking for the Cause.

Some old and threadbare economic theories were dusted off yesterday in Wall Street by persons seeking to account for the unprecedented decline in the security markets during the week. Even the theory of the business cycle, which has received little attention by economists since the recession of 1920, was advanced as a possible explanation of the present break. In general, however, few authorities could be found who placed much faith in the old belief that business activity ebbed and flowed with a constant rhythm. Several authorities indicated, however, that they believed that a moderate recession of business activity might be expected as a result of the break in the stock market.

The Demand for Bills.

One explanation for the unusual demand for bankers' acceptances which has developed in the last few days is to be found in the withdrawal from the call market of large amounts of funds lent by other than banking lenders, according to one banker. The recent unpleasantness on the stock market has led some of these lenders to conclude that collateral loans are not always of unquestioned excellence, and now that the call rate is down to 5 or 6 per cent, a 5 per cent bill rate looks more attractive than it did while call money commanded 9 and 10 per cent.

In addition, the heavy purchases of bills which the Federal Reserve Bank has been making has taken from the market a large part of the floating supply and created something of a scarcity of prime bills.

***

Foreign Exchange Rise Halted.

Foreign exchange dealers shared with most of the financial community a somewhat too optimistic assurance of a cut in the rediscount rate on Thursday, judging from the action of the principal European currencies yesterday and the day before. On Thursday afternoon, when the word was passed about that a reduction in the local rate was a certainty, foreign exchanges were bid up briskly to new high levels. Yesterday they slumped in disappointment at the retention of the old 5 per cent rate. Nevertheless, sterling and the franc are on the verge of that level at which gold could profitably be transferred across the Atlantic, and rumors of impending shipments were thick in Wall Street yesterday.

Railroad Earnings.

It seemed yesterday that for the first time this year monthly net operating returns of the railroads for September may in the aggregate be less than those of last year. Holding of grain from the market is the chief factor cited for this development. The first twenty-five railroads to report showed $54,618,000 net operating revenue for September, against $54,422,000 a year ago, so that the decline, if any, will be slight and will not prevent the railroads from running up a record net for the year.

***

"Depression-Proof Stocks."

One enterprising Broadway house went to the trouble yesterday of preparing a formidable list of "depression-proof stocks." This list, which will be announced to the firm's customers, will contain a group of stocks which reasonably may be expected to weather any storm on the Stock Exchange. It was asserted that more stocks than the public realized had stood up under the bombardment of Thursday and earlier in the week.

***

Comparing Declines.

One banker enumerated yesterday three points in which the market debacle of Thursday differed from those of 1901 or 1907. He pointed out that money had ruled at moderate rates throughout the events leading up to the break of this week, whereas in previous disturbances it had risen to great heights. The other points were that the break of Thursday had been preceded by speculation unequaled in history, and that when the critical day had arrived it had been physically impossible for bidders to come forward in volume sufficient to cope with the selling.

MONEY.

Friday, Oct. 25, 1929.

Firmness in day loans and continued ease in collateral funds and business money were the contrasting features of the trading in the money market. On the Stock Exchange 6 per cent was the charge all day, and nothing cheaper than that prevailed in counter trading. About $20,000,000 was called. While not much time money was done, rates for the longer dates softened to 6¼@7, but short-date accommodation was unchanged at 6½@6¾. There was another cut of ¼ in yield on acceptances, but in that market there was a degree of irregularity, as dealers bid almost any price to get bills, which were only lightly offered.

EXCHANGES DEFER ACTION FOR CLOSING

Hope Brokers Will Soon Be Able to Catch Up in Their Bookkeeping.

SUNDAY WORK NECESSARY

Thousands of Employes in Wall Street Area Will Be Kept Busy Tomorrow.

Business will go on as usual today on the New York Stock Exchange and the New York Curb, although strong pressure was brought to bear on the governing authorities yesterday to suspend trading because of delayed clerical work.

Officially the governing committee of the Stock Exchange did not consider any plan to close today, it was said. It was learned, however, that certain of the large houses actively advocated a closing so that they might have today and tomorrow to post their books. Bookkeeping in most of the commission houses has fallen far behind and a cessation of trading, for a day at least, is regarded as necessary to relieve the situation. It is believed that, unless conditions greatly improve, it may be necessary to close the Exchange on the Monday preceding election day, which would mean a three-day suspension.

Influential interests in Wall Street are said to have opposed the suggestion to close the Exchange yesterday because to do so might create suspicion in the minds of some and bring on further hysterical selling. The Exchange authorities are hoping that, with a more orderly market, brokerage houses will be able to straighten out their office records without the necessity of suspending trading.

Most houses kept office staffs on duty last night, some of them for a few hours and others all night. The largest of the houses have for some time been obliged to keep office forces on duty at night. Tomorrow will be a day of labor for thousands of workers in the financial district, arrangements having been made to keep clerical organizations at work over the week-end. Many were busy yesterday finding some place in which to eat. One restaurant chain announced that, due to many requests, the eating places in the financial district would be open tomorrow. Numerous privately owned places also displayed signs or notified customers that they would serve a luncheon tomorrow, a day which usually sees nearly all restaurants in the district shut.

RECORD STOCK DEALS CLEARED BY 5 A. M.

End of Work on Thursday's Exchange Business Shows All Houses Able to Meet Deliveries.

All transactions in Thursday's record market of 12,894,650 shares on the Stock Exchange were cleared by 5 o'clock yesterday morning. By that time, the Stock Clearing Corporation had sent out all tickets on balances. Clearing of all the transactions served, incidentally, to show that all houses were able to meet deliveries.

There is always a night staff on duty at the Stock Clearing Corporation, and this was augmented last night by additional workers. They worked on a volume of clearings which was 50 per cent larger than any previous total. By completing the clearing of stock sheets later than usual, but well within the permitted time, they made it possible for the hundreds of Stock Exchange houses to reach balances, and provided for the timely issuance of the "to whom" and "from whom" figures, which brokerages must have to know to whom they owe money and from whom they are to receive checks.

Representative of New York—Old and New

THE Bank of New York and Trust Company occupies a unique position. It is older than the United States itself, as it was organized in 1784 shortly after the close of the Revolutionary War. It is the oldest banking institution in the City of New York, and the oldest banking institution in the United States retaining its original name as part of its title.

Certain unusual features in its charter protect its Trustees in their control of the Company; no sudden change in the ownership of its stock can bring about undesirable changes in its business policy.

The Trustees are thoroughly representative of New York—old and new—as their names indicate:

Joseph Andrews	Edward J. Hancy	Lewis Spencer Morris
Edmund L. Baylies	Robert C. Hill	Ray Morris
Joseph H. Choate, Jr.	Eustis L. Hopkins	Frank C. Munson
Henry D. Cooper	Columbus O'D. Iselin	Henry Parish
Lincoln Cromwell	L. F. Kinsewetter	Walter Wood Parsons
Wm. M. Cruikshank	James B. Mabon	W. Emlen Roosevelt
Norman H. Davis	Alfred E. Marling	Edward M. Townsend
Thomas Denny	William J. Matheson	Howard Townsend
Cleveland E. Dodge	Edwin G. Merrill	Paul Tuckerman
Philip T. Dodge		Allen Wardwell

The Company makes a specialty of personal service, both in its banking business and in its fiduciary business.

26.5 P. C. INCREASE IN BANK CLEARINGS

Nineteen Out of Twenty-three Cities Report Exchanges Greater Than a Year Ago.

CHIEF GAIN AT NEW YORK

Transfers of $10,593,000,000 Here Are Up 34.7 Per Cent—Figures in Detail.

Bank clearings this week at twenty-three leading cities in the United States total $14,825,536,000, exceeding the clearings of a year ago by 26.5 per cent. Again, the increase was chiefly at New York City, where clearings of $10,593,000,000 were larger than those of last year by 34.7 per cent. The total for the principal centres outside of New York was $4,232,556,000, or 7.2 per cent more than a year ago.

Most of the larger Eastern cities reported increased exchanges this week; also, several of those in the West and in the South. Of the twenty-three centres on the list there were nineteen reporting gains.

RATES CUT AGAIN ON ACCEPTANCES

Third Reduction in Three Days Amounts to 1/8 of 1 Per Cent on All Maturities.

For the third time in as many days, the rates on bankers' bills were reduced yesterday. The cut sliced one-eighth of 1 per cent off the yield on all maturities, making a total reduction of three-eighths of 1 per cent so far this week. The new rates bring the bid price on the shorter maturities down below 6 per cent for the first time in months. The new rates are: thirty, sixty and ninety day bills, 4⅞ bid, 4¾ per cent asked; four, five and six months' bills, 5 per cent bid, 4⅞ per cent asked.

Exceptional demand for bills both from domestic and foreign sources has been experienced this week and dealers have been forced to lower rates in order to bring out bills. Many corporations and others with funds invested in the call market have been turning from collateral loans, in the face of the declining stock market and lowered call rates, and have sought investment of their funds in the bill market.

Besides these domestic sources of bill buying, which have been augmented by a strong demand from the banks, there has been heavy buying of bills for the account of foreign banks. Foreign central banks find the dollar acceptance a particularly attractive investment, since they are tax exempt to them.

There is a large amount of foreign funds which will remain permanently in this market, it is said, despite the present movement of such funds back to Europe. With the unsettlement which has come upon the financial community through the collapse of the stock market, these funds are seeking to find employment in bankers' bills while the present attractive rates continue.

Baltimore Trust to Recapitalize.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 25.—A jump of 25 points in the price of the stock of the Baltimore Trust Company was explained by an announcement, made just before the stock market closed, that the directors had approved a plan for a reduction of the par value of the company's shares to $10 and an exchange of five new shares for each present share. They also approved the organization of a securities company to conduct certain activities of the trust company and for this purpose will use a small company which has been wholly owned by the bank for some time.

Merges Bank in Niagara Falls.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 25 (AP).—The Power City Bank of Niagara Falls, with resources of more than $29,000,000, has been acquired by the Marine Midland Corporation of Buffalo, it was announced today. This brings the number of banks in the group to seventeen. Stockholders of the bank will receive a formal offer from the corporation to exchange their stock and warrants entitling them to subscribe for stock of the latter.

$71,626,479 SOUGHT BY MUNICIPALITIES

Total of Bonds to Be Floated Next Week Compares With $17,103,942 This.

Only Other Large Issue Scheduled Is $1,500,000 for Hillside, N. J.—62 Communities on List.

With New York City scheduled to appear in the market next Wednesday with an offering of $60,000,000 serial bonds and corporate stock, the total of new flotations of State and municipal bonds for next week is lifted to $71,626,479, according to the compilation prepared by The Daily Bond Buyer. The offerings scheduled include the bonds of sixty-two municipalities and far exceed the total for last week, which came to $17,103,942. Apart from the New York City financing, the only major flotation will be an issue of $1,500,000 Hillside Township (N. J.) bonds listed for the same day.

Prices Steadily Advancing.

Dealers in municipal bonds report that prices are advancing steadily and that far greater difficulty is experienced in purchasing bonds than in marketing them. The improved condition of the municipal bond market is due in part to the increased general demand for investments of this type, but is also largely the result of the scarcity of issues.

One dealer remarked yesterday that the volume of municipal bonds available in the market probably did not exceed 10 per cent of normal. In the face of this unusual shortage, the increased demand for bonds of this class naturally forces up prices, it is pointed out.

Bankers expect the present demand on the part of the market for municipal offerings will meet response in an increased number of flotations within the next few weeks. The announcement of the intended financing on the part of New York City has already stimulated other communities to prepare issues.

$72,166,300 BONDS MARKETED IN WEEK

Financing for Port of New York Authority Is Largest Item on List.

New bond offerings this week exceeded by a good margin the total for last week and just topped the sum of bonds marketed in the corresponding week of last year. New offerings this week came to $72,166,300, compared with $48,798,000 last week and $71,823,000 for the week ended Oct. 26, 1928.

By far the largest issue of the week was an offering of $30,000,000 Port of New York Authority 4½s, which was marketed by the National City Company, Harris, Forbes & Co., Brown Brothers & Co., Kissel, Kinnicutt & Co., and White, Weld & Co. The offering, made on a basis to yield 4.86 per cent, received an exceptionally strong response and practically the entire issue was sold on the first day of the public offering.

The second largest issue of the week was an offering of $13,500,000 Baltimore & Ohio equipment trust 4½s, the only item of railroad financing to appear in two weeks. An issue of $11,000,000 Gatineau Power first mortgage 5s constituted the only utility financing by bonds which the week brought forth. Foreign issues numbered only one, an offering of $3,500,000 ten-year City of Hanover 7s.

The foreign offering, brought out by Brown Brothers and the Continental Illinois Company, attracted unusual interest by reason of the fact that it was the first financing in this market for a German political unit since last January. The issue was further noteworthy for the feature of a privilege of conversion into long-term bonds, especially issued for the purpose.

The week's quota of municipal issues consisted of eight offerings totaling $44,166,300, compared with last week's total of only $11,798,000, comprised of a dozen separate offerings.

Offerings of bonds by groups for this week and last week follow:

	This Week.	Last Week.
Industrial	.....	$5,000,000
State and Municipal	$44,166,300	11,798,000
Public Utility	11,000,000	32,000,000
Railroad	13,500,000	.....
Foreign	3,500,000	.....

Shortage of Bankers' Bills Expected to Lift Bond Prices

Hope of stimulation of the bond market was seen yesterday in a banker's suggestion that the Federal Reserve Bank would be forced soon to purchase government securities instead of bankers' acceptances.

Heavy demand for bankers' bills on the part of investors, together with the Federal Reserve Bank's purchases, has so far cut down the supply of this form of investment as to cause three successive price advances this week. This condition is likely, it was suggested, to force the Reserve Bank to turn to purchases of government issues in its open market operations to ease credit. At present the Bank's holdings of these securities are negligible, and should it start to buy in volume, prices in the bond market would turn upward sharply.

HIGH-GRADE BONDS ADVANCE IN PRICE

Three United States Treasury Issues Reach Highest Levels of the Year.

TRADING GENERALLY LIGHT

Market Firm Except for Speculative Certificates—Foreign Securities Move Irregularly.

Government bonds and other securities of high grade were firm, although buying was rather light yesterday on the Stock Exchange. More speculative issues, however, showed an unsettled condition. Some of the United States Treasury issues reached new high marks for the year, and railroad bonds in the gilt-edge class gained strength.

There was light trading in the United States Treasury issues, but the 4s, 3¾s due in 1940 and 3¾s due in 1943 achieved new high levels for the year. On more active trading fourth Liberty 4¼s came close to their peak for the year. All other United States Government bonds advanced.

The higher class railroad bonds were extremely active. Practically all held their recent gains, while numerous issues made further advances, and the Missouri Pacific 5s, due in 1977, and the same company's general 4s equaled the high prices for the year. Among those which showed the most activity and strength were Santa Fe 4s, Baltimore & Ohio 4s, Chicago & North Western general 4s, Delaware & Hudson 5½s and refunding 4s, Great Northern 5s, New York Central 4s, Pennsylvania 5s, Southern Railway general 4s, Erie 5s, Canadian Pacific 5s and Denver & Rio Grande 5s.

Industrial bonds had a good undertone, but prices in the list were irregular. Indiana Limestone 6s were up nearly 6 points, Armour Real Estate 4½s were strong, and Goodyear 5s gained a point.

The utility list generally reflected the movements in the stock market, particularly those issues with stock privileges. American Telephone and Telegraph was the market leader with a turnover of large volume and a price range of 5 points. Gains were made by International Telephone and Telegraph issues, Denver Gas and Electric 5s, Southwestern Bell 5s, Columbia Gas and Electric 5s and Pacific Gas and Electric 5s.

Foreign bonds were irregular on moderate dealings. Rather sharp reactions in certain issues more than offset fractional gains made in others.

ENJOINS STORE CHAIN DEAL.

Court Restrains Action in Hartmann Merger With Montgomery Ward.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 25 (AP).—Judge D. Lawrence Groner of the United States District Court has granted an injunction restraining any action within the next ten days looking to a merger of the Hartmann Chain Stores Corporation and Montgomery Ward & Co.

The application for the injunction was made here yesterday by Frank Schofield, Chicago lawyer, appearing on his own behalf and on behalf of a minority group of New York stockholders of the Hartmann corporation represented by Edmund G. Joseph and controlling approximately 5,000 shares of Class B stock.

TREND OF BOND PRICES VIEWED AS REVERSED

Halsey, Stewart & Co. Give Reasons for Recent Advance—Report Investors Returning.

Bond prices have been mounting for the last three weeks under the triple impulse of lower money rates, the sudden halt in the rise of speculative securities and the general recognition by thousands of investors that bonds have been selling at bargain levels, according to Halsey, Stuart & Co. The average price of a representative group of listed bonds, they say, is now between 2 and 3 points higher than at the end of September, and in individual issues the rise has been as great as 4 or 5 points.

"The impressive feature about this rise," the bankers remark, "is that it directly reverses a situation that had existed for nearly a year and a half. From May, 1928, until the end of August of this year, bonds were gradually declining in price, reflecting high money rates and widespread speculative activity.

"It would perhaps be premature to say definitely that bonds have turned the corner and that the trend henceforth will be the reverse of what it has been over the last eighteen months. However, there are a good many present indications that a lot of investors who digressed into the speculative markets are now ready to come back to the less spectacular, and also less turbulent, bond market. In addition to the largely increased demands which may thus come from individual investors, it seems probable that with money rates working lower many banks and corporations that have been lending a part of their surplus funds in the call money market may now be drawn back to the bond market."

STATE GAINS ACCESS TO POWER RECORDS

Senate Votes to Allow New York Investigators to Inspect Results of Federal Inquiry.

TRADE COMMISSION TO AID

But Its Data Will Be Available Under the Wagner Resolution Only as It Sees Fit.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Two New York commissions, investigating public utility and power companies, will be allowed access to reports and findings of the Federal Power Commission, dealing with the same subject, under a resolution approved by the Senate today without debate and without a roll call.

The resolution, offered by Senator Wagner of New York, calls attention to the fact that a special State commission has been created to investigate the regulation of public utilities, with power to recommend legislation, and that Governor Roosevelt had also undertaken an inquiry into the entire power situation in the State.

The result of the Roosevelt investigation, the resolution added, "may have a profound effect upon the ascertainment of just and reasonable rates to consumers and reasonable and proper regulation of public utility companies."

It was stated that the Federal Power Commission had made extensive investigations and studies in the same field and that these would be helpful to the two New York investigations.

"The cooperation of the Federal Power Commission," Senator Wagner asserted, "would be in the public interest and would avoid the expense incident to unnecessary duplication of statistical and other data."

Trade Commission Excluded.

Some time ago Senator Wagner presented a resolution under which not only the Federal Power Commission, but also the Federal Trade Commission, would give the two New York commissions access to their reports and investigations. He revealed today that the trade commission held that disclosure of its evidence would embarrass its present investigation of power corporations.

However, the Federal Trade Commission promised, through Chairman McCullough, that it would cooperate in every "proper" way. Mr. Wagner then altered his resolution to stipulate that only the Federal Power Commission should be directed to furnish its records.

Explaining the attitude of the trade commission, Chairman McCullough wrote to Senator Wagner:

"This Commission is authorized to gather information relating solely to interstate commerce. The power companies, which have turned over various data to us—much of it voluntarily and not in response to process—intended it for use in our investigation and not for some other body and its investigation. I feel that disclosures of such information to other investigating bodies, in advance of making use of this material ourselves, would in most cases seriously interfere with the efficient conduct of our inquiry.

Opposes Fragmentary Disclosures.

"The information which we have gathered and will gather ought not to be disclosed to the public in fragments. Our plan is to go through the affairs of each company subject to our jurisdiction at a consecutive series of sessions to paint the picture as a whole if we can, and the purpose is to do so just as fast as material is assembled.

"The power of the State of New York over its own corporations is at least co-extensive with the power of the commission over New York companies engaged in interstate or international commerce. Nevertheless, we will gladly cooperate with the New York commission and the Governor of New York in every proper way, to aid them in their efforts to develop the facts and solve the public problems involved, but we feel it will hamper the successful completion of our own investigation to allow access to the papers, records and data of our hands prior to their introduction into the public record of our hearings."

PLANS PHONE ADDITIONS.

New York Company Authorizes the Expenditure of $7,978,200.

The directors of the New York Telephone Company have authorized additional expenditures of $7,978,200 for new construction, J. S. McCulloh, president, announced yesterday, bringing the amount appropriated for this purpose since Jan. 1 to $33,567,657, of which $31,618,245 has been set aside for the metropolitan district.

It was also announced that Bogardus, the forty-seventh dial central office in New York City and the third to be installed in the company's main building at 227 East Thirtieth Street, will be placed in service on Nov. 16. About 11,200 telephones are affected by the change, not including 550 public telephones which will be transferred in progressive stages from Nov. 18 to Dec. 7. There are now nearly 600,000 dial telephones in New York City.

Venezuela Grants Cable Rights.

The International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation announced yesterday that the Venezuelan Government had granted to the All-America Cable Company the right to take over the operation and maintenance of the French Cable Company's system in Venezuela. Permission also was granted to the All-America Cable Company to lay a new cable to Maracaibo, Venezuela.

New Phrases Springing Up In Wall Street's Language

A new phraseology has sprung up in Wall Street in the recent unsettlement on the Stock Exchange. New terms are replacing the picturesque phrases which for years have been used in stock market discussions.

"Air pockets," borrowed from the language of aviation and applied by Thomas W. Lamont to a condition that developed in the market on Thursday, was being glibly used in every brokerage office yesterday. Some traders, retaining their sense of humor in spite of their financial difficulties, were talking of stocks "selling ex-margin." A broker coined the phrase "depression proof" in listing stocks which, in his judgment, were least likely to break in another liquidating movement.

WATER SUPPLY FOR ATHENS.

Officials of Greek Government Put Marathon Dam in Service.

Paul Koundouriotis, President of the Greek Renublic, yesterday officially placed in service the Marathon dam, built to provide the city of Athens with a water supply, according to dispatches received yesterday at the offices here of Ulen & Co., who built the dam. The dam is on the site of the battlefield where the Greeks defeated the Persians in 490 B. C.

Premier Venizelos and members of his Cabinet, the foreign diplomatic corps and public and private figures of prominence in Greek life attended the ceremony. A general holiday was declared in Athens.

EXPECT NO CHECK TO UTILITY MERGERS

Bankers Say Maintenance of Relative Values of Stocks Will Save Plans.

DECLINE HELD WHOLESOME

Abrupt Drop Ascribed to Drying Up of Speculative Enthusiasm With Less Investment Demand.

The sharp decline in public utility stocks from their recent high levels will not affect in any way plans for the merger affiliation of some of the utility companies, according to investment bankers identified with the public utility industry, it was learned yesterday. Their consensus was that utility stocks were now, as a rule, selling at levels more sensible and secure than a month ago, although in several individual stocks certain readjustments in either direction were probable.

The maintenance of relative values among various utility stocks will permit the consummation of whatever plans for exchanges of such securities may be contemplated as soon as the markets have quieted down sufficiently, it was said authoritatively yesterday. While no specific instance of an impending merger was revealed, it was said there always were negotiations of more or less importance going on in the industry.

Break Held Inevitable.

The bankers who spoke yesterday were of the opinion that the public's eagerness to buy utility securities for a market turn instead of as investments had been responsible for the boom in these stocks, and had placed many of these stocks in a position where a break was inevitable.

The opinion was advanced that as utility and other stocks had declined, future buyers would carefully examine the investment qualities of stocks purchased, with particular reference to earnings and dividends, and with some allowance for prospects of enhancement. It was said certain utility bond and debenture offerings were being arranged, and that there were opportunities in many such issues now in the market.

An analysis of the decline in utility stocks, it was said, showed that in most instances its abruptness was due to the fact that speculative enthusiasm had dried up and that investment demand materialized only at 10 or 20 per cent below the former levels. Between the two categories of buyers was what Thomas W. Lamont of J. P. Morgan & Co., had characterized as an "air-pocket." Whether a specific stock was now cheap or not, the bankers said, should not depend on the present price as compared with that of a month or two ago but on the condition of the company's earnings and assets.

Drop Precipitated by "Bears."

There had been some sharp-shooting at utility stocks by bear operators, it was admitted, and this more than any other factor had precipitated a decline that might have been postponed for weeks by eager speculators on the up-side.

As a result of all these factors, the decline in utilities was described as wholesome in the broadest sense, although the view was expressed that an orderly decline, such as actually took place in part of September, would have been more desirable. The bankers said the great future of the industry had been in no way imperilled by a stock market recession beyond all control.

Heavy Stock Trading Breaks Telegraph and Cable Records

The swift pace maintained by stock market transactions during the last two days caused new records to be made for cable service across the Atlantic and for telegraph service between leading American cities, it was learned yesterday at the offices of the Western Union Telegraph and the Postal Telegraph and Cable Companies. Increases of 5 to 10 per cent in the general traffic called for reinforcements of operating personnel and the maintenance of speeded-up service long past regular peak hours.

Arbitrage between Wall Street and the foreign financial centres was believed to be responsible for the heavy increase in transatlantic traffic, which was 10 per cent more than the previous high record, established on Oct. 4, while communications between Boston, Baltimore, Chicago, San Francisco, St. Louis, Philadelphia and other cities and New York were on the average 5 per cent heavier, not including increases in communications handled over leased wires.

Acquires Utility in California.

The General Water Works and Electric Corporation announced yesterday that it has acquired over 98 per cent of the outstanding stock of the San Jose Water Works, serving the city of San Jose and environs, in the Santa Clara Valley of California.

CALM RESTORED TO CURB MARKET

But Trading Remains Erratic, With Gains and Losses in All Groups at Close.

SOME SUPPORT APPEARS

Short Covering Also Strengthens Prices—Ticker 50 Minutes Late at Noon; On Time at 3 P. M.

Thursday's turbulence on the Curb Exchange was yesterday followed by comparative calm, in which a part of the wreckage was cleared away with the aid of short covering and some support for pivotal issues. The trading remained erratic, however, and the close showed losses as well as gains in all departments.

The trading was more orderly in every sense than the day before, however, and a stronger undertone appeared in most issues with the exception of a few in which offerings continued to appear in volume and which dipped moderately under the pressure. Support appeared freely behind a number of the old favorites which rose steadily on continued buying.

The ticker was delayed in the early trading and was about fifty minutes late at the end of the forenoon, but a slackening in later trading allowed the operators to catch up with the volume of orders executed, reducing the delay to twenty minutes at 2 o'clock and ending the day on time.

The utilities as a rule showed a tendency to recover, with American Superpower, Electric Bond and Share, Electric Investors, American Gas and Electric, Memphis Natural Gas, Niagara Hudson Power and American Cities Power and Light among the leaders. Gains also appeared in Electric Power Associates, United Gas, Pennsylvania Water and Power and United Light and Power A, but Middle West Utilities new, Cities Service and Utilities Power and Light were easier.

In the investment trust section Marine Midland, National Investors, New York Investors, Pennroad, Chain Stores, Lehman Corporation, Selected Industries and Shenandoah common were firmer, while Mayflower Associates and Shenandoah preferred eased.

Gulf Oil led the recovery in oils with Humble Oil and Vacuum Oil also showing gains. Noranda and Newmont were firmer in the mining section.

In the general list advances were reported in MacMarr Stores, Powdrell & Alexander, Aluminum Cream of Wheat, Pepperell and Perryman Electric, but General Theatres, Herman Nelson and Newport were easier.

MARKETS IN LONDON, PARIS AND BERLIN

Anglo-American Issues Gain on English Exchange—Credit Conditions Easy.

FRENCH STOCKS IMPROVE

Recover Losses Caused by the Wall Street Slump—Prices Up on German Boerse.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—A rush of buying on the Stock Exchange today pushed up prices of gilt-edge securities, while Anglo-American stocks recovered from the first shock of the Wall Street collapse. The War Loan was especially active, rising 3-16 to £102 9-16, while the Funding Loan advanced ⅝ to £86½ in heavy trading. It was evident that investors were flocking to safe government securities, following the crash of the more speculative issues.

After an uncertain start confidence returned to the industrials, most of which had suffered severely from the Wall Street setback. Columbia Graphophone rallied ¼ to £7⅜, although His Master's Voice Graphophone sank ⅛ to £5⅞.

General Electric advanced 3s to 50s, Associated Electric leaped 3s to 33s, Hydroelectric rose 2⅝ to 54⅞ and International Holding advanced 15-16 to 2 7-16. Royal Mail rose 1½ to 40½, while others in the rising list included International Nickel at 47⅜. American Celanese at £6⅝ and both Margarine Issues at 24½.

Ford continued weak, declining ¼ to £25. Mexican Eagle at 19s closed 1s above yesterday's price. Anglo-Persian at £4 5-16 and Royal Dutch at £24⅛ also were strong. Rhodesians opened weak, but recovered part of their losses before the closing.

Break Here Stirs London.

LONDON, Oct. 25 (AP).—The excitement caused among London brokers by news of the break in Wall Street yesterday was repeated on a smaller scale today outside the Stock Exchange.

More business has been done in the past twenty-four hours than in a normal week. Two thousand cables were sent in one hour yesterday to the United States from the London brokers. Many hundreds of persons waited outside the Exchange long after closing time but the tense atmosphere of yesterday was lacking.

Prices Advance in Paris.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 25.—Improved conditions prevailed on the Bourse today after yesterday's irregular tone in sympathy with the Wall Street crash. The week-end closing was firm.

Deflation of stocks on the New York Stock Exchange is generally regarded here as favorable to stimulation of speculation on the Continental Bourses. The bull market in Wall Street long has been attracting European capital, and it is believed much of this now will return to the European stock exchanges.

Tendency Firm in Berlin.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 25.—The New York stock market slump did not have any noticeable influence on the Berlin Boerse, which opened with a firm tendency today. Boerse circles believe that German stocks have now reached the lowest point and that the tide must soon change radically.

At first most stocks were able to improve several points, but due to the hesitancy of private investors and speculators and unconfirmed rumors about new insolvencies the tendency changed toward weakness and many shares dropped below yesterdays closing notations. Others, however, held steady.

On the whole the Boerse was very resistive. During second hour prices became irregular, following the announcement of a reduction on contango by one-half a point. The close was uneven although inclined toward firmness.

LESS TENDERABLE STAPLE

Government Figures Show 83.8% of Good Grades This Season Against 86.8% a Year Ago.

Although larger ginning figures than had been expected were reported and unsettled early trading on the Cotton Exchange yesterday, definite selling pressure was lacking as the session advanced and short covering and trade purchases caused an improvement of $1.50 a bale at one time. Killing frost over a large part of the belt and less disturbing outside influences had a steadying effect on the market. Comparatively few contracts were offered, relative to the selling movement of a week ago, though execution of closing orders by spot interests carried prices back 15 points and left final quotations unchanged to a point higher on the day.

Yesterday's quotations here follow:

WOOL MARKETS FIRM.

Commercial Bulletin Reports Fair Activity This Week.

BOSTON, Oct. 25 (AP).—The Commercial Bulletin will say tomorrow:

"There has been a fair activity again this week, chiefly in the finer territory descriptions, which have held firm on the basis of the advance noted last week-end of close to 5 cents a pound, clean, from the extreme low point.

"Foreign markets have held very firm both in the primary markets and the secondary markets of Europe, eved in the face of an apparent serious strike in Yorkshire mills.

"The manufacturing position in this country is essentially sound and the manner in which mills have bought wools this week has been the best evidence of that fact."

DEFENDS COTTON REPORTS.

Callender, in Little Rock, Says Estimates Are Conservative.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 25 (AP).—Asserting that results had vindicated the methods used in estimating cotton production as well as other crops, W. F. Callender of Washington, chairman of the crop reporting board of the Department of Agriculture, said today the board had "no apologies to offer to its critics" in Congress.

"Out of eighty-three forecasts of cotton production made by the board since it started cotton estimates, fifty-three estimates have been below the final ginning figures, while only thirty have been above final ginning figures," he said, referring to charges that the board had repeatedly overestimated production.

"The board has on foot plans for further betterment of its methods of estimation, and the first step will be the calling in of experts from the various offices in the cotton producing States," Mr. Callender said. "These experts will spend several months in Washington doing research."

TO STUDY RAIL PROBLEM IN NEW ENGLAND

Governors Will Appoint Committee of Thirty—Buckland Urges Sectional Consolidation.

BOSTON, Oct. 25 (AP).—A committee of thirty will be appointed by the Governors of the New England States to examine all phases of New England's transportation requirements, the New England Council announced today. The future status of New England's railroads will also be the major topic of discussion at the New England conference here Nov. 21 and 22.

All New England Governors will attend the conference, with about 1,500 business men.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 25 (AP).—Edward G. Buckland, chairman of the board of directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, speaking before supervisory officers and employes of the road last night, reaffirmed his belief in a purely New England railroad consolidation, or, as he termed it, "an all-inclusive one," with the Boston & Albany and Central Vermont in it. He said:

"If, as it seems to be generally believed, this New England territory of ours is a great terminal to which all other means of transportation should have access upon equal terms, then it follows that if there is in the New England territory any line or transportation whose interests are contrary to a fair field and no favor, then it must necessarily interfere with the perfect grouping which would otherwise ensue, and the only logical thing is to exclude all other control from New England in order that all may have an equal chance.

"If you allow the Canadian National, through the Central Vermont, to have access to New England, and the New York Central through the Boston & Albany, inevitably you cannot have a complete New England grouping, for some other railroad west of the Hudson River may get control of the Boston & Maine or of the New Haven, and then unless there is a common New England grouping you are going to have three or four trunk line terminals with all of the old evils of unrestricted competition."

ROADS ASK TO HALT RATES.

Southwestern Lines Request I. C. C. to Hold Off New Tariffs One Year.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25 (AP).—Authorization was asked of the Interstate Commerce Commission today by railroads of the Southwest territory to delay the effective date of new commodity freight rates.

The railroads asked for a delay of one year from Dec. 10.

Bayonne Company Protests Rates.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25 (AP).—The Babcock and Wilcox Company of Bayonne, N. J., has joined others in protesting to the Interstate Commerce Commission against rates on iron and steel articles in the Eastern rate class, scheduled to go into effect Dec. 20. Action on the original recommendation of the comission was deferred after a group of New Jersey industries and civic organizations asserted the new rates were prejudicial to industries of the State.

Fewer Locomotives Need Repairs.

Class I railroads on Oct. 1 had 7,688 locomotives in need of repair, or 13.5 per cent of the number on line, against 7,754 or 13.6 per cent on Sept. 15, according to the American Railway Association. The roads had 4,500 serviceable locomotives in storage on Oct. 1, against 4,524 on Sept. 15.

THORNTON CHOSEN AGAIN.

Will Head Canadian National Railways for Another Five Years.

Special to The New York Times.

TORONTO, Ont., Oct. 25.—Sir Henry Thornton will head the Canadian National Railways for another five years dating from October of 1928. Negotiations which have been in progress for some time between Sir Henry, the Canadian National Railways' directors and the government have just been concluded and the agreement is sanctioned by an Order in Council which was signed today.

The new agreement calls for $75,000 a year.

Although speculative bidding was not so marked yesterday as on Thursday, rubber futures again wavered under offerings from large commission houses on the Rubber Exchange and closed with further losses ranging from 10 to 40 points. The lifting of Wall Street pressure was reflected in the total of 967½ long tons sold yesterday.

WHEAT RECOVERS IN ACTIVE MARKET

Trading Is Quieter and Values Rise When Surplus in the Pit Is Absorbed.

EXPORT DEMAND IMPROVES

Corn Prices Drop Sharply in the Early Trading, but a Rally Follows and Close Is Higher.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—There was an absence of hysteria in the wheat market today. An attempt to complete the liquidation of long lines was made early, but the orders were seemingly withdrawn after values had dropped 5 to 6 cents from the early high. Commission house and local buying quickly absorbed the surplus in the pit, and the greater part of the decline was recovered, with the finish at net gains of 1¼ to 1⅝ cents.

The volume of business was about half of that of Thursday, when 156,186,000 bushels of all deliveries of wheat were handled, the largest on record, and compared with the previous record of 149,587,000 bushels made on July 15. Aggregate business in all grains Thursday was 190,236,000 bushels.

During the height of the excitement when the break was on, prices dropped as much as half a cent between sales, and it was half an hour before conditions became normal again. The storm subsided as rapidly as it had commenced and prices moved in orderly fashion thereafter, with the pit bulls bidding up the market toward the last.

Winnipeg gained ⅞ to 1¼ cent for the day. Closing of spreads between Chicago and Liverpool, with the selling end in the latter market, resulted in a weak close there at losses of 2½ to 3⅝ pence. Buenos Aires was 2¾ cents higher and Rosario 3¾ cents higher.

Bulls obtained considerable comfort during the day from the development of an active export demand, with sales of 2,000,000 bushels reported in all positions, a good part of which was hard Winters.

Primary arrivals today, 1,278,000 bushels; week ago, 1,318,000 bushels; last year, 2,089,000 bushels. Shipments, 762,000 bushels; week ago, 1,102,000 bushels; last year, 596,000 bushels.

Corn failed to show the activity of the previous day, and dropped rather sharply at one time in sympathy with wheat, but after the selling ceased, locals took the buying side and brought about a rally of around 2 cents from the low point. The finish was at net gains of ½ to ⅝ cents with December showing the most strength. Shipping demand was active with sales of 280,000 bushels and charters were made for 250,000 bushels to Buffalo. Out of 20 cars of new corn received today 13 cars graded number 4 or better. Weather conditions were favorable for field work.

Primary arrivals today, 756,000 bushels; week ago, 630,000 bushels; last year, 637,000 bushels. Shipments, 528,000 bushels; week ago, 474,000 bushels; last year, 252,000 bushels.

Locals were on the buying side of oats, reinstating recently sold-out lines, and absorbed the offerings of scattered longs. Undertone was firm from the start with the close ⅞ to 1 cent higher. Rye gained 1 to 1½ cents.

Prices for the principal grains were as follows:

Take Up Dry Goods Differentials.

Price differentials and direct selling to retail stores by textile mills were discussed informally here yesterday at a meeting of the differential committee of the Wholesale Dry Goods Institute at the Arkwright Club. At the meeting were Secretary George A. Sloan of the Cotton Textile Institute, and, unofficially, President S. Robert Glassford of the Association of Cotton Textile Merchants of New York. No action was taken beyond a decision to make a survey to determine just how the wholesalers figure in distributing mill products and in their right to ask mills not to sell to small retailers and small retail syndicates. Later the institute may ask for price differentials.

Buyers Vote for Longer Skirts.

Ninety per cent of the replies received during the past ten days by a prominent local manufacturer of dresses for small women to 8,000 questionnaires asking buyers for opinions on skirt lengths favored garments four to five inches longer than those shown last season, it was learned yesterday. Particular significance was attached to the result for two reasons. First, that the questionnaires went only to buyers for department stores and specialty shops of the better class. Second, that such extreme lengths should be favored in lines designed for women under average height. The other 10 per cent of buyers did not desire very much lengthening of the garments.

Spring Furniture to Be Colonial.

Furniture manufacturers, who are busy preparing their new lines for the January market opening here, predict that early Colonial designs will continue to hold sway in the offerings. Modernistic pieces will be even more subdued and less numerous than in the Fall lines. Some concern is felt over sales prospects in the coming season because of the stock market reaction. While practically all the Fall business with retail houses has been completed, a drop in consumer demand during the balance of this season would leave retailers in no position to purchase freely for Spring.

Postpone Furniture Question.

Discussion of the "open show room" problem in the furniture trade will be delayed until the January market at Grand Rapids instead of the November gathering of furniture retailers and manufacturers at that city, it was learned yesterday. It was felt that the later date would ensure a wider representation to take up the question. Retailers recently have expressed the opinion that the open show room, in which manufacturers sell direct to customers of small dealers and decorators, injures the sale of furniture by retailers.

To Meet on Millinery Standards.

A review of the progress in establishing standards of practice in the millinery trade will feature a meeting of five trade associations to be held in the offices of the Eastern Millinery Association here next Tuesday. Informal reports will be presented on the enforcement of the joint standards recently set up and on what should comprise future plans. The organizations participating are the Retail Millinery Association, Millinery Association of America, Eastern Millinery Association, American Millinery Manufacturers and the National Retail Dry Goods Association.

Pottery Season Best in Years.

Conditions in the pottery industry this season are reported as the best in years. Orders from retailers were received early and re-ordering is now well under way. Deliveries are on a basis of from three to four weeks from the date of order. Vases, jardinieres and bric-a-brac for home decoration are selling freely in retail stores at prices ranging from $2.50 to $10. Light green and blue are the color choices. Basing their opinions on the present demand among consumers, manufacturers anticipate an exceptional holiday trade.

May Cut Children's Displays.

Exhibition of models at the seventh annual fashion show of the Infants', Children's and Junior Wear League, which will be held at the Hotel Astor early next February, may be considerably shortened as a result of a decision reached yesterday at a special meeting of the various committees in charge, held in the league's headquarters at 29 East Thirty-second Street. It was decided to send questionnaires to members asking about the advisability of having many of the models shown in booths on display figures, the remainder to be shown on mannikins as heretofore. Acceptance of this idea would shorten the display period from about two and one-half hours to an hour and a half, Executive Chairman M. Mosessohn said.

Window Glass Call Better.

The movement of window glass is in better volume, and inquiries are reported rather numerous, the American Glass Review will say today. The demand, however, has not as yet approached normal for this period. The call for plate glass is quite satisfactory, and production is well in excess of that at this time a year ago. The market for rough rolled and wire glass products is in a strengthened position as a result of the recently improved competitive conditions in that branch. Business in these items is expected to become considerably more active within the next couple of weeks.

***

Anthracite Sales Drop Slightly.

The wholesale anthracite market experienced a slight drop in sales because of mild weather this week, Saward's Journal will say today. The decline was welcomed in some quarters, because it gave operators a chance to catch up on deliveries, which were about ten days behind on stove coal. Sales of bituminous coal continued at the regular level, and the weekly production so far this month has been kept up to 11,000,000 tons. With heating requirements entering into the situation, the demand is expected to become heavier from now on.

***

Gray Goods Still Dragging.

Business continued to drag in the local gray goods market yesterday. Printcloths were sold in a limited way on the basis of 8⅝ cents for 39-inch 68-72s and 7¾ cents for 38½-inch 64-60s. In the sheetings good makes of 40-inch 4.25s were sold at 8¾ cents, and limited quantities of 40-inch five-yard goods were let out for November at 7¼ cents. Thirty-six-inch 40-square, 6.15-yard sheetings were sold at 8¾ cents. Developments in the rest of the market were unimportant.

BUSINESS REPORTED LAGGING SOMEWHAT

Not Related to Break in Stocks and So Little Affected by It, Trade Reviews Say.

IMPROVEMENT IN INDUSTRY

Activity Greater Than a Week Ago, Although Less Than at This Time Last Year.

The reaction from speculative activity has been far-reaching, but the orderliness of trade has been maintained, nothing in the existing commercial situation having furnished a cause for the drastic stock market readjustment, according to the weekly reviews of trade and business. Retail trade sagged as a whole, wholesale and jobbing business was fairly well maintained, while industry improved, as compared with a week ago, although it was slightly higher last year at this time in some lines.

R. G. Dun's weekly review of business says:

"That general business has not retained all of its former impressive buoyancy is evidenced by current trends in several directions, but there is obviously a sharp distinction between moderate recession and fundamental unsoundness. If the rate of activity has not been wholly sustained, the change can only be properly interpreted through recognition of what has gone before, and the attainment of various maximum records is of too recent occurrence to be obscured by present tendencies.

Monetary Tension Relaxing.

"Even with a contraction in some lines now, results this year will be unusually favorable in numerous instances, and it is significant that the monetary tension, which had occasioned concern, has been relaxing steadily. Although financial developments have overshadowed all other features, the basic importance of mercantile and industrial movements has not been lessened.

"The irregularity of conditions has become more marked, the margin of commodity price declines over advances has widened, and certain of the statistical barometers have not held at their previous levels. Those are some of the surface indications of a reversal from long-continued expansion, yet the alteration is qualified by the earlier exceptional achievements, to which consideration should logically be given. An especially prominent case in point is the let-down in steel production, which has only come after a period of unparalleled gain, and this lowering of mill operations is entirely due to the curtailment of automobile manufacture."

Bradstreet's Comments.

Bradstreet's review of the state of trade says, in part:

"Compared with last week retail trade was affected by high temperatures early, and later with rain, turning to snow in the West and Northwest, retarding business, but with the return of cool weather later helping to make up for some of the early lagging of distribution. As for the declines shown in trade from a year ago, this is partly the result of advances a year ago rather than declines this year, although it seems certain that excitement in the stock market, with sympathetic breaks in the prices of many farm products, has made for something like hesitation.

"In at least one heavy line of industry, coal mining and shipment, there has been a slight speeding up of the lighter lines, as, for instance, which has moved in the largest volume since midwinter. In some of the lighter lines, as for instance, textile manufacturing, mill operations have been more active than a year ago, with silk goods leading.

"Lower prices for wheat, these also partly connected with the break in stocks, have given a slight fillip to export trade. In shoe manufacturing, while less work is noted in New England, a good measure of activity is noted in other Eastern and most Western markets. Also a few markets note gains in furniture buying and manufacture, although some large centres still note hand-to-mouth purchasing. Leather markets in the East seem quieter. In raw wool the increased strength of fine foreign wools has steadied domestic grades somewhat."

JAPAN GAINS BY ECONOMY.

Adverse Trade Balance Will Be the Smallest in Several Years.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—One of the first results of the retrenchment policy pursued by the Japanese Government is a more favorable trade balance, with prospects that the adverse merchandise balance for 1929 will be the smallest for several years, J. H. Ehlers, commercial attaché at Tokio, reported today to the Department of Commerce. September exports to China were 100 per cent higher than a year ago, with a decline only in shipments of cotton textiles, it was stated.

The Fall cocoon crop is greater than last year. The second Taiwain rice crop will be 11 per cent smaller. Tokio plans to expend $1,500,000 for municipal works to relieve unemployment.

Japan's shipbuilding industry was reported active and prosperous. The government has made available $25,000,000 for shipbuilding and purchase of vessels.

SEES BREAK AS AID TO REALTY BUSINESS

Operators Assert Money, Long Diverted to Speculation, Will Return to Building.

AGREE BUSINESS IS SOUND

Grimm Sees Hopeful Sign in Recent Bond Buying—Lefcourt and Brown Predict Sobering Effect.

Early improvement in the realty financing situation and in building operations generally will result from the recent drastic declines in stock market prices, real estate men and construction interests predicted yesterday.

The sobering effect of speculative losses will permit a large amount of money, long diverted to stock trading, to ease the tight money condition which has prevailed in the realty field for several months, according to opinions expressed yesterday by Peter Grimm, president of the Real Estate Board of New York, Inc.; A. E. Lefcourt, banker and builder; Frederick W. Brown, operator, and others.

Conditions not only in real estate and allied lines, but in business generally are basically sound, these men agreed, and the recent reaction in the stock market was, in their opinion, a technical one, which should in the long run be beneficial to trade despite the heavy cost to many speculators.

Real estate men have been complaining for some time of the lack of a supply of funds adequate to finance their transactions and of the absence of the usual sums of mortgage money. Admittedly much home building in the suburbs of New York and several large construction projects within the city for which plans already have been drawn have been delayed to await a more favorable situation.

An encouraging turn now is at hand, realty interests believe. They point to recent buying of bonds as one evidence of the change in sentiment.

"My first reaction to the sharp break in stocks this week was an unfavorable one," Mr. Grimm said. "No business excitement such as prevailed in the market Thursday could be of any benefit to real estate. If continued the result could not be other than unsettling. I believe, however, that the market was merely righting a technically unstable position and that the reaction will be of value in that it has helped to clear the skies.

"The recent buying of bonds is a most hopeful sign, indicating that a part of the heavy buying power of the country is turning back to these more stable securities and that subsequently it will return to the realty mortgage field."

According to Mr. Lefcourt, the "break in inflated values will serve as a sobering force to put a cessation to gambling and turn the attention of investors to issues carrying a good yield and legitimate return with safety."

Frederick W. Brown predicted a favorable effect on the money situation and on the mortgage market.

"There is prospect of abundant money for real estate and building enterprises," he said. "With the high rate of return possible in financing stock trading recently, banks and other concerns could hardly be blamed for turning their attention to this field. The break will emphasize the fact that after all real estate is a safer investment."

Louis W. Abrons, head of the General Realty and Utilities Corporation; Fred T. Ley, Benjamin Winter, Douglas L. Elliman, Lawrence B. Elliman, Charles F. Noyes and Louis Adler also were among those who predicted that the decline would have a salutary effect on real estate business.

REVIEW OF THE DAY IN REALTY MARKET

Two Downtown Buildings Figure as One Unit in Investment Deal.

WEST SIDE FLAT SOLD

Brooklyn Operator Buys Nine-Story Building on Ninety-ninth Street —Other Manhattan Sales.

Downtown Manhattan and the upper east and west sides were represented in real estate transactions announced yesterday. Buildings on Franklin and Worth Streets figured as one unit in an investment deal, and a Brooklyn operator and builder bought a large apartment building on West Ninety-ninth Street.

The financial side of the market provided a $2,500,000 loan for the erection of two tall houses on First Avenue, at Fifty-fifth Street.

Agents on both the east and west sides reported numerous leases of apartments and space in structures for business purposes.

The lower Manhattan properties were taken by an investor through the Charles F. Noyes Company, broker. The first parcel sold was the six-story structure at 149-151 Franklin Street, which was sold by Alfred R. Kirkus, president of the Manhattan and New York Real Estate Associations. The building is on a plot 58 by 71 feet and is leased to Berth, Levi & Co. until May 1, 1932.

The Noyes Company also sold to the same investor the five-story structure at 35-37 Worth Street, with valuable alley rights to West Broadway.

M. I. Halperin, operator and builder, was the buyer of the west side holding. This is a nine-story apartment house at 248-256 West Ninety-ninth Street, on a plot 83 by 100 feet, immediately adjoining the Broadway corner and occupying a plot 83 by 100 feet. L. J. The street frontage of the plot at the southwest corner of Lexington Avenue and Fifty-first, where a forty-six-story building is to be erected by the A. L. Hartridge Company, Inc., extends from 122 to 130 East Fifty-first Street, it was learned yesterday, when the Tishman Realty and Construction Company announced that it had sold the property to Stanhope Estates, Inc., through Howard Le C. Roome, broker. The Bartholomew Building Corporation has bought the property with the adjoining Lexington Avenue frontage, and the proposed structure is to be erected for the corporation. GOOD TOURS HARBOR IN STUDY OF PIERS

Secretary of War Hears Views of Mayor and Others on Need for Longer Docks Here.

LUNCHES ON THE MAJESTIC

British Liner, Projecting Into the Channel, Is Used as Example of Inadequate Facilities.

Secretary of War James W. Good stopped off yesterday in New York en route to New Haven to see West Point play its annual football game with Yale, and for five hours mixed with his pleasure a study of the pier situation in the light of the need for better accommodations for the longer ships.

He viewed the situation from various angles and heard the explanations of army engineers, shipping officials, marine engineers and finally at a luncheon aboard the White Star liner Majestic the views of Mayor Walker. He viewed the piers from the municipal boat Macom and again from the deck of the Majestic, which extends beyond the end of her pier and serves as an example of unsatisfactory docking.

Secretary Good had promised Mayor Walker some time ago to visit the New York piers. The city had petitioned through the Department of Docks for permission to advance the Hudson River pierhead line 100 feet into the channel along that section of Manhattan extending from West Thirtieth to West Seventy-second Street and the War Department denied the application. Extending the pierhead line would mean decreased space for the manoeuvring of ships in the channel, the War Department pointed out, and suggested that the city dig inshore if it desired to lengthen the piers. Mayor Walker was of the opinion that the Secretary of War would change his mind if the situation were explained to him on the spot.

The Secretary was met at the Hotel Biltmore by a group of shipping men and engineers, escorted to the Macom at Twenty-third Street and East River and taken on a trip of inspection which led through Buttermilk Channel, past Governors Island and up North River to Seventy-second Street. There the boat turned and went back to the Majestic, which was taking on freight in preparation for departure at 4 P. M.

The party reached the ship shortly after noon. Mayor Walker was not aboard the Macom during the trip about the harbor, but he reached the Majestic shortly after Secretary Good and his companions and joined them at lunch. There was no formal address and no statement was issued by the Mayor or Secretary Good.

The Majestic was inspected, particular attention being paid to the manner in which the giant ship extended beyond the end of her pier into the channel of the river. The engineering problems of docking the ships were explained by shipping executives and by engineers of the Department of Docks. The party left the ship about 3 P. M.

Among those at the luncheon were:

P. A. S. FRANKLIN, president of the International Mercantile Marine Company.

SIR ASHLEY SPARKES, resident director of the Cunard Line.

JULIUS P. MEYER, resident director of the Hamburg-American Line.

DENIES IT ALY DEMANDS FEALTY OF EMIGRANTS

Ambassador Says Mussolini Approves Naturalization of Italians in United States.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.— The Italian Ambassador, Nobile Giacomo de Martino, commenting tonight upon statements made by Marcus Duffield in an article entitled "Mussolini's American Empire, the Fascist Invasion of the United States," appearing in a magazine, declared that "neither Premier Mussolini, nor Fascism, nor the Fascisti League of North America has ever opposed or attempted to thwart the Americanization movement."

The Ambassador recalled the following statement issued by Premier Mussolini in January, 1923:

"We are glad to have our people who go to the United States become naturalized, but the United States is the one country of which we urge our people to become citizens. America is a country with which we can never have anything but the most harmonious relations, and to which we already owe much. Italians who go there should become naturalized as soon as they are fit."

"From this policy the Italian Government has never departed," the Ambassador said, citing the words of Premier Mussolini in September to 400 American members of the Order of the Sons of Italy then visiting Rome. The Premier's address concluded as follows:

"You who have chosen the United States as your new fatherland have the precise duty to be loyal and faithful citizens."

"The Italian military law which is attacked in the article is not a product of Fascism," the Ambassador said. "It was promulgated long before the advent of Fascism and was enforced by previous governments."

Secretary Stimson was asked today whether the American Government had taken any action in reference to the issue of dual nationality which was mentioned in the Duffield article in referring to the alleged practices of the Mussolini Government in holding American citizens of Italian origin liable for military service.

Mr. Stimson explained that several months ago the embassy at Rome had taken up the matter with the Italian Foreign Office, but that there had been no developments since.

PLANS DRIVE TO CURB INDUSTRY'S TOLL HERE

Merchants Find That With 54% of Factory Workers, City Had 62% of Accidents in 1928.

Plans for a campaign to prevent industrial accidents were discussed yesterday at a meeting of a special committee on the subject of the Merchants' Association, at which statistics were submitted showing that New York City has suffered more than its share of such accidents.

Although only 54 per cent of the 1,072,000 factory wage-earners of the State at work in the city district they suffered 318,667, or 62 per cent, of the 507,890 industrial accidents reported in 1928, and 190,793, or 64 per cent, of the 297,104 accidents reported in the first seven months of 1929, according to the figures of the New York State Department of Labor. In the nineteen months New York City workers suffered 1,946, or 63 per cent, of the 3,069 deaths resulting from such accidents.

"The committee is confident that New York's progressive manufacturers and builders are not going to permit this condition to continue, and is therefore counting on their whole-hearted cooperation in the broad campaign of prevention which will shortly get under way," said a statement issued by the committee.

"Up to the present the public and the press have been inclined to stress the excessive automobile accident mortality rate. Comparative figures show clearly, however, that the industrial accident record is quite as worthy of attention as is the automobile accident problem."

Stewart-Warner Speedometer Report

The Stewart-Warner Speedometer Corporation for the nine months ended on Sept. 30 shows a net profit of $6,426,278 after depreciation and Federal taxes, equivalent to $5.15 a share on 1,248,480 shares of capital stock. This compares with $5,470,974, or $9.10 a shares on 600,000 shares in the first nine months of 1928.

MACDONALD STARTS HOME FROM QUEBEC

Premier Sails for England, Deeply Satisfied With the Results of His Trip.

SEES RELATIONS IMPROVED

In Farewell Speech at Luncheon He Hails Interracial Harmony in Canada.

By CARLISLE MacDONALD.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ABOARD THE STEAMSHIP DUCHESS OF YORK, Oct. 25.—The Duchess of York, with the MacDonald party aboard, sailed for Liverpool at 8 o'clock tonight.

The Premier, tired from his strenuous Canadian trip, came aboard with his daughter Ishbel at 7:30, and went immediately to the simple suite prepared for him.

Miss Ishbel's cabin was filled with flowers and other bon voyage presents from her Canadian friends, and a large number of farewell telegrams awaited the Premier in the room which will be his office until next Friday morning.

The Premier is returning home with a feeling of deep satisfaction over the results of his American sojourn. He is particularly pleased with the happy reaction provoked throughout the United States, and from his own personal observation and those of other persons equally competent to judge, he is convinced that a marked improvement has taken place in Anglo-American relations.

This improvement is expected to take more tangible form in the naval conference in January. Hopes for success are now very high in British governmental quarters.

The Duchess of York is scheduled to reach Liverpool about 8 o'clock next Friday morning, making it possible for the Premier to be at No. 10 Downing Street about 2 P. M. the same day.

Bids Farewell to Crowd.

QUEBEC, Que., Oct. 25.—Prime Minister MacDonald arrived at the dock only a few minutes before the steamer sailed. His party were the last passengers to go aboard.

Mr. MacDonald's farewell at the boat was a simple and personal one. He declined to make any more statements, preferring to shake hands and say "Goodbye, good luck." His only other words were:

"I am sorry to leave you."

The farewells of Miss Ishbel MacDonald, his daughter, were of the same nature. She shook hands with some and smiled at all, and with a suddenness which indicated that she had to get it over with, quickly walked up the gang plank.

Addressing the Men's and Women's Canadian Club at the Château Frontenac at noon today, Mr. MacDonald reviewed briefly the French and English conflict which brought Wolfe and Montcalm into prominence, but he dwelt longer upon the mutual understanding of "the descendants of these heroes on both sides," who today honor the two Generals in a joint monument overlooking the Plains of Abraham.

In the morning Mr. MacDonald and members of his party attended a showing of a sound picture depicting the more important events of his trip to America.

Mr. MacDonald was the recipient today of a number of messages from various Canadian leaders, each expressing faith in his mission and predicting successful results. One was from MacKenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada, with whom he discussed at Ottawa some of the practical steps toward a better Anglo-American accord.

Another was from R. B. Bennett, leader of the Tory opposition in Canada. Mr. Bennett said in part:

"In my judgment you may leave this continent with certain knowledge that your visit has contributed greatly to the improvement of relations between our empire and the neighboring republic, and that you have left with all those with whom you came in contact the permanent impression of a great British statesman, the purity of whose motives and the sincerity of whose efforts for promoting peace are beyond question."

An assurance that the new government of Australia would help realize his ambitions for peace was received by Mr. MacDonald from the new Labor Premier of that country, Henry Scullin.

The message read:

"Having yesterday completed the formation of my government, I take this early opportunity of expressing to you the gratification which my colleagues and I feel at the prospect of cooperation with you. We note with special pleasure the progress of your efforts to promote the cause of world peace, and trust that the expectations founded upon your recent visit to the United States may be speedily realized."

Mr. MacDonald answered all these messages and also sent one of thanks to Lord Willingdon, Governor General of Canada, and Lady Willingdon, thanking them for their hospitality.

1930 BUDGET GETS APPROVAL OF BROWNE

Annual Objector Writes He Can Find No Criticism for First Time in 16 Years.

Stewart Browne, president of the United Real Estate Owners Association, who has been a frequent critic of the City Administration, wrote a letter yesterday to the members of the Board of Estimate in which he declared that, for the first time in his sixteen annual appearances before that body, he has had this year no criticism to make of the 1930 budget. Mr. Browne wrote that he was present during the four days that the public hearings were held.

"I was purposely silent," he added, "because I felt that whatever I might say would be misconstrued and exaggerated by the Republican-Fusion 'Outs' who desire to become 'ins' and whose entire campaign arguments are general charges of graft and graft everywhere, but without specific proof.

"I object to the present campaign of general vilification and I am sure that the vote will prove that the great majority of voters do likewise.

"My detailed views on the 1930 budget will be filed with your board after the re-election of the present Board of Estimate."

Will Unveil Tablet to Mark Confederates' Northern Point

Special to The New York Times.

CARLISLE, Pa., Oct. 25.—A bronze tablet mounted on a seventon boulder, the gift of the Pennsylvania Historical Commission, will mark the most northern point reached by Confederate troops during the Civil War. The tablet will be unveiled tomorrow afternoon on the John Kutz farm one mile north of Carlisle Springs, on the new Bloomfield State Highway.

State Senator Leon C. Prince, head of the history department of Dickinson College; Mrs. John Fryor Cowan, president of the Pittsburgh chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, and the Rev. John W. Miller of Carlisle will be the speakers.

The Rev. M. C. Miller talked to the Confederate soldiers sixty-six years ago, when a troop of Lee's cavalry stopped at the Miller farm and drew water for their horses on the spot where the tablet has been erected.

JERSEY W. C. T. U. URGES 'DRINKLESS' DRIVERS

Resolution Calls for Refusal of Licenses to Non-Abstainers—Hoover's Stand Praised.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 25.—The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of New Jersey, in annual session here today, adopted resolutions endorsing President Hoover's attitude toward law observance and enforcement, advocating drastic measures for drunken drivers and condemning the wet press, cigarettes and anti-prohibition organizations. The resolutions were introduced by Mrs. Eva N. Taylor of Rutherford, chairman of the resolutions committee.

Mrs. Taylor asserted in her report that President Hoover's personal and official attitude toward law observance and law enforcement was the greatest blow to the liquor traffic since the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment. A resolution was adopted calling upon the people of New Jersey to follow the example of President and Mrs. Hoover in abstaining from the use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage.

Another resolution described persons who take intoxicating liquors as menaces and requested the State Highway Commission to refuse auto driving licenses to such persons, and to revoke permanently any license already issued to any but total abstainers in New Jersey.

The delegates also upheld the action of the National W. C. T. U. in condemning "the small section of the American bar for deliberately organizing to defend, without charge, persons arrested for the violation of the Jones-Stalker law."

Another resolution condemned the efforts of all associations, especially those made up of women, which advocate nullification or repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment by "subtle, misleading statements."

Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, Washington, general counsel of the World League Against Alcoholism, in a speech declared that the United States had found prohibition to be the best plan ever tried for the solution of the liquor problem.

PANTAGES JURY LOCKED UP.

Judge in Instructions Stressed the Youth of Theatre Man's Accuser.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 25 (AP).—The jury of five men and seven women, which at 4:17 P. M. took the case of Alexander Pantages, theatre owner on trial on a statutory assault charge preferred by Eunice Pringle, was locked up for the night at 9:35 without having reached a verdict. Mr. Pantages, who has been at liberty on $50,000, was placed in the custody of a deputy sheriff.

Superior Court Judge Charles Fricke in his instructions warned the jurors that they must consider the fact that Miss Pringle is a minor, less than 18 years of age, as shown by evidence presented. The judge advised the jury also that the duty devolved upon it to recommend whether punishment, in the event of a verdict of guilty, should be a sentence to the county jail or to the State's prison.

Mr. Pantages, charged by the dancer with having attacked her in a small conference room in his suite of offices on Aug. 9, went to trial on Oct. 1, after a motion for a continuance had failed. He had pleaded that his attorneys, who also had defended Mrs. Lois Pantages, his wife, on a second degree murder charge, had not had sufficient time to prepare his case, and that the state of his health was such that he should not be required to stand trial at that time. Mrs. Pantages was found guilty of manslaughter in connection with the death of a Japanese gardener of a motor car accident and now is awaiting sentence.

COAL MINE DEATHS DECLINE.

Lives Lost in 9 Months of 1929 Total 1,518 to 1,639 in 1928.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Accidents in the nation's coal mines in September cost 189 lives, the death toll for the first nine months of the year being 1,518, the Department of Commerce reported today. The September total of deaths was sharply above that for the same month last year, when accidents cost 154 lives, but the total for the first nine months of the year was an improvement over the same period last year, when 1,639 deaths were charged to coal-mining accidents.

Of the 189 deaths during September, 146 occurred in bituminous mines in various States and 43 in Pennsylvania anthracite mines. The major disaster on Sept. 27 at Tahoma, Okla., which claimed 8 lives, was the fifth during 1929, these five accidents taking 83 lives.

There were eleven major disasters during the first nine months of 1928, with a loss of 308 lives.

The report showed a reduction this year in death accidents due to falls of roof and coal, gas or dust explosions and electricity, with increases in fatal accidents due to haulage and explosives.

Cuban Urges Ban on English Talkies

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Oct. 25.—Patriotic motives, according to a statement made today by Representative Gabriel Ariza, will prompt him to introduce a bill at the coming session of the Cuban Legislature prohibiting the exhibition in Cuba of English-speaking movies.

HOLDS NEW ENGLAND GAINS IN INDUSTRY

Treasurer Lawrence of Regional Council Tells Labor Parley Output Is Increasing.

RUSSELL DENIES ADVANCE

Organizer of Congress Declares Factory Workers Have Been Largely Reduced Since 1923.

From a Staff Correspondent of The New York Times.

WORCESTER, Mass., Oct. 25.—Contradictory points of view as to the industrial status of New England were laid before the 400 delegates to the New England Labor Congress today by John S. Lawrence of Boston, treasurer of the New England Council, and Harry E. Russell, New England representative of the Workers Education Bureau of America.

Mr. Lawrence's address and his figures were intended to show that New England was exceedingly prosperous and that much of the talk of this region losing ground arose from the fact that "New England mentality is not optimistic."

Mr. Russell presented figures to show that with but few exceptions New England's industries were not keeping pace with those of the rest of the country.

Ethelbert Stewart, chief statistician of the Department of Labor, declared that the New England textile worker was aware that his industry was not prosperous.

Mr. Stewart urged organized labor to plan carefully its method of dealing with the problem of technological employment by making a survey of the field of labor opportunity. He pointed out that the research departments of the automobile industries have analyzed the market for automobiles to a point that compares favorably with the actuarial figures developed by the life insurance companies. Labor must do likewise, he said; then when the statistical survey of labor opportunities is made "the problem of educating and reeducating the worker has only really begun."

Two Mayors Are on Program.

John P. Frey, secretary of the metal trades department of the American Federation of Labor, brought the greetings of President Green of the federation, who was unable to appear today and who may make an address tomorrow.

Others on the program were Mayor Malcom Nichols of Boston, Mayor Michael O'Hara of Worcester, Representative George R. Stobbs, Secretary Roscoe H. Goddart of the Worcester Chamber of Commerce, Freeman M. Saltus, president of the Central Labor Union, and William H. Thornton. Thomas E. Burke, president of the Workers Education Bureau, presided.

The purpose of the Congress, as explained by Mr. Burke, "is not to make a special plea on behalf of New England wage earners but to discover what resources there are within New England labor which will enable it, when guided by its educational and research policy, to take a more active part in the whole plan of New England's future."

Sees New England Prosperous.

Mr. Lawrence, whose family has been in the textile industry for several generations, told the meeting that although New England had only 7 per cent of the nation's population, it produced half of all the cutlery made in the United States and one-third of all the tools, jewelry, wire, typewriters, optical goods, brushes, silverware, felt hats, bicycles and motorcycles.

"We find that the prosperity and importance of these New England States is greater than ever before," he declared. "The Federal Reserve Bank of Boston in its October monthly review clearly reveals the increased activity in New England business for 1929 as contrasted with 1928. The business activity index for the current year shows an average of 110.1 for the first eight months, as contrasted with 101.2 for 1928. When we consider the present maturity of New England industry, we realize the true significance of this rise of 8.9 points in an index which gives perhaps the most accurate picture of our business activities."

Mr. Lawrence said New England was second among the nine divisions of the United States in the average of wages paid, the hourly rate of 49 cents being reported in the Middle Atlantic division while New England came next with 47 cents. The New England States contained 7 per cent of the population and had 14 per cent of the savings banks depositors and 16 per cent of all savings banks deposits. Ten per cent of the nation's manufacturing establishments were located in the six Northeastern States and 12 per cent of wages paid in manufacturing was disbursed in these States, he said.

The figures tended to show, Mr. Lawrence said, that New England, "far from being in a weak position, is extremely aggressive."

The New England textile situation was one which, he said, demanded "constructive effort" from both labor and management.

"I am sure that New England will maintain those branches of the textile industry in which mechanical skill and craftsmanship are at a premium, provided we put those assets of ours to work," he said.

Russell Declares Labor Reduced.

Mr. Russell painted another picture of New England.

"Ten years ago," he said, "there were 719,210 people employed in 9,605 establishments in Massachusetts. Today 10,037 establishments employ, when running full time, but 575,068 people."

The textiles, Mr. Russell said, "once the background of industry in New England," have suffered most. He contended from census figures that in 1925 there was a loss of 131,000 industrial wage earners as compared with 1923, "a loss of 10 per cent, as compared with 4 per cent in all industries."

He declared that in Massachusetts alone in two years over 12,000 employes were released in the boot and shoe industry, 10,000 in the woolen and worsted industries and 17,000 in cotton mills.

The number of establishments and the number of wage earners have decreased in all the New England States but Maine, he said. In the paper mills there was a reduction of 14 per cent and a decrease of 4 per cent in silex volume.

Mr. Russell offered figures on all industries as a basis for the work of the congress, which, he said, was called by New England labor "to consider its problems objectively and to ask ourselves how we can contribute to the general welfare of New England through intelligently planned cooperative effort."

SLAYERS' DOOR HELD DEVICE TO KILL CALLER

Cartridge Explodes as Police Place Key in Lock of the Danna Apartment.

A device designed to fire a bullet into the heart of any one who might attempt to open the lock in the door of the Danna brothers' apartment at 144 Roebling Street, Brooklyn, went wrong yesterday when Detectives John Ross and John Ryan tried to get in. Instead of coming straight through the door the bullet shattered the panel, showering the policemen with fragments of wood. They were uninjured.

Petro Danna and Leonardo Danna were arrested on Wednesday after they had killed Aaron L. Applebaum, a patent lawyer, in his office at 41 Park Row. They said he had spoken slightingly of their invention, a marine bicycle. They are held on charges of homicide, and the detectives went to look over their apartment. They borrowed a key from a neighbor, put it in the lock and the explosion followed.

Ross and Ryan then decided that the investigation was a task for the bomb squad. The explosives experts found that the lock had been rigged up so that insertion of a key touched off a strong spring, which in turn caused an iron arm to strike the percussion cap of the cartridge. The cartridge was imbedded on the inside of the door at the height of an average man's heart.

Similar devices were found in two other doors in the apartment. The detectives reached these by breaking the panels and twisting the iron hammers out of line. Continuing their search they found several strange devices which seemed to have no useful purpose; a series of rubber tubes projecting through the flooring; a series of pipes leading from the roof to the room and filled with water; and an olive oil tin, carefully soldered, which contained nothing but moth balls.

Lieutenant Charles Newman of the bomb squad said that the curious contraptions appeared to be the work of persons of unsound mind. He brought one of the doors to police headquarters, where it is to be placed in the police museum.

WESTCHESTER THIEF GETS $27,000 JEWELRY

Greenville Home Is Looted in Absence of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred K. Hebner.

Special to The New York Times.

SCARSDALE, N. Y., Oct. 25.—Alfred K. Hebner, former assistant to Alfred Sloan, president of the General Motors Corporation, reported today to the Greenburg police the loss last night of jewelry which he values at about $27,000. Mr. Hebner said the loss was covered by insurance.

When he and his wife returned to their home at Old Army Road, Greenville, last midnight, they found the front door open and Mrs. Hebner's jewelry box was missing. The police believe a duplicate key was used to enter the front door.

The jewelry was described by Mr. Hebner as follows: Jewel case, $135; pearl necklace of eleven pearls, $7,060; a diamond brooch, $5,350; diamond solitaire ring, $4,724; diamond wrist watch, $2,800; diamond bracelet, $4,875; diamond and sapphire ring containing seventy-six small cut diamonds, $1,075; crystal and diamond bracelet, $170; man's platinum and diamond watch, $1,500.

The robber left a trail of burned wax match sticks from the front door to the dresser on which the jewel case rested in Mrs. Hebner's room.

Mr. Hebner said the burglar ignored a gold watch and a solid gold cigarette case valued at $200.

Police Captain McQuillan said Lillian Levinsky, a maid employed by Mrs. Charles E. Wilson, a neighbor of the Hebners, reported she had seen a man wearing a gray suit and cap in the rear of the Hebner house about 9 o'clock last night. It was the Hebner maid's night out.

GERMAN PAYMENTS TO US NEGOTIATED

Ambassador Schurman Is Arranging Technical Details of Remittances.

YOUNG PLAN NOT AFFECTED

Reich Will Deal Directly With the United States Instead of Through the World Bank.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—A separate agreement is under negotiation by the United States with Germany to provide for a definite and final settlement of the payments due this country on account of the costs of the army of occupation and claims arising out of the World War, in consonance with the provisions of the Young reparations plan but apart from its machinery.

The arrangement, which is still under consideration, was described by officials today as a necessary technical procedure without regard to questions of broad policy and one that has been in mind ever since the Young plan was framed.

Through the agreement, the reduction in payments to the United States by Germany, as called for in the Young plan and as approved informally by President Hoover and Congressional leaders at a White House conference last Spring, will be committed to the form of a document, which will be submitted to Congress for approval, and thereby will have much of the character of the war settlements act of 1928.

At the same time, by providing for direct payments by Germany of its obligations to the United States the arrangement will keep the American Government officially detached from the Young plan and from the International Bank of Settlement, which is to be the transfer agent under the new reparations plan.

Details Now Being Studied.

Details of the agreement are now under study at the Treasury Department and are the subject of conversations between the American Embassy in Berlin and the German Government. Because of the many details that are yet to be settled, officials were hesitant in discussing the question today and did so only because word of the conversations had leaked out in Berlin.

Secretary Stimson explained that the negotiations were being conducted in accordance with the general sentiment that prevailed at the Young plan conference at The Hague and with the views that developed at the White House conference of last Spring, when approval was given the proposal for a scaling down in American payments due from Germany.

He also pointed out that from the first the American Government had decided not to be associated with the Young plan officially or with the International Bank of Settlement. The agreement, he added, would be submitted to Congress and would require no abandonment of or radical changes in the war settlements act.

Other officials pointed out that the chief benefit of the agreement would be the definite and final settlement it would give Germany of its obligations to the United States, and that in so doing it would be in conformity with the general purposes of the Young plan.

Young Plan Not Jeopardized.

BERLIN, Oct. 25 (AP).—It was authoritatively stated today that negotiations now going on between Ambassador Schurman and the German Foreign Office regarding reparations settlements, involve only the specific manner of payments to the United States under the Young plan, and in no wise jeopardize American cooperation in the Young plan itself. The negotiations, it was stated, are not to be regarded as an indication that the United States disassociates itself from the plan.

It was pointed out in official circles that American participation in the Dawes plan and Young plan always has been unofficial in character through non-governmental representatives. Other governments also are drawing up plans for transfer methods.

Labor M. P. Defeats Suit for Seat.

PLYMOUTH, England, Oct. 25 (AP).—After a trial lasting a week of a petition to deprive J. J. Moses of his seat as a Labor member of Parliament on the ground of alleged corrupt practices and bribery by his agents, the court today declared the petition had failed and must be dismissed. Mr. Moses was elected to Parliament for the Drake Division of Plymouth in the last general election.

SAYS WE PASS EUROPE IN COMMERCIAL FLYING

Assistant Secretary Young Tells Airport Conference Still Greater Development Is Due.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Because of freedom from near-by international boundaries and the long distances between large cities, the development of a great air transport system in the United States is inevitable, Clarence M. Young, Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Aeronautics, declared today in an address before the municipal airport conference sponsored by the American Road Builders Association.

"Already American airplanes are flying more than 50,000 miles per day," said Mr. Young. "We have more than 35,000 miles of airways, 466 private and commercial airports and 456 municipal airports, with 1,269 additional airports proposed, or in process of construction, a number which far exceeds the total in all of Europe.

"Europe has been ten years in building up its present air transport system, whereas America's has been developed almost entirely during the past three. Europe's development has been aided and abetted by huge government subsidies, whereas America's has been due wholly to civil initiative.

"In the United States private enterprise has enabled the operator to get trained personnel and invaluable experience, permitted the manufacturer to improve and design better aircraft and made it possible for the Department of Commerce to establish a far-flung system of airways and aids to air navigation.

ARMY FLIER KILLED IN MARYLAND CRASH

Lieut. J. F. Bowman Has Motor Trouble Amid Fog on Hop From Dayton.

GRANTSVILLE, Md., Oct. 25 (AP).—Lieutenant John F. Bowman, aged 26, an army flier, was killed two miles east of here early this afternoon when his plane crashed and burned. His body was found near by in a patch of woods, tangled in the straps of an unopened parachute.

Lieutenant Bowman, who left Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, at 11 o'clock this morning, was flying through a fog and slight rain when, evidently, motor trouble developed. His plane fell about a quarter of a mile off the National Pike.

The flier had been sought throughout the afternoon when he was reported overdue at Washington, and a search of the wooded section followed reports of a farmer that a plane had been sighted near there early in the afternoon.

The body remains here while word is awaited from army authorities.

DAYTON, Ohio, Oct. 25 (AP).—Lieutenant Bowman had been stationed at Wright Field since July, 1928. He was graduated last June from the Air Corps Engineering School at Wright Field.

Lieutenant Bowman was flying a single seated pursuit plane and was on an authorized flight to Washington. He leaves a widow, who now is in Dayton.

FATAL AIR CRASHES PUT MOST ON PILOTS

Navy Surveys the Causes of Its Aviation Accidents for the Last Eight Years.

THURSDAY FLIERS' BAD DAY

Greatest Peril 200th Hour In Air—Power Trouble Causes 18 Per Cent of Wrecks.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—The predominant responsibility for air accidents rests on the pilot, to whom can be charged three-fourths of the fatal accidents, the Navy Department has determined after a survey of the last eight years in naval aviation. The analysis was said to be the most comprehensive ever undertaken, either here or abroad.

Conclusions from the study indicated, first, that manufacturers must continue to incorporate new elements of safety to further reduce the demands upon the necessarily fallible human element, and, second, that pilots must be selected from the very best material available, and must have the most careful and thorough training.

The most dangerous period for aviators is when they have reached about 200 hours of flying. The report recommends careful supervision then, because that is the point when most fliers begin their involved manoeuvres "flushed with overconfidence" which far outweighs their experience.

Infrequent Fliers Most Dangerous.

While pilots are held responsible for less than one-half of the accidents in which no injuries occur, they are charged with three-fourths of the fatal accidents.

Infrequent fliers are the most dangerous, the study showing that if a pilot increases the amount of his flying four times his accident hazard is reduced one-half, despite the fact he is in the air four times as much.

Seasoned fliers have only one-third as many accidents as recent graduates. The history of pilots eventually involved in fatal accidents revealed a record of almost two and a half times as many accidents as others figure in.

Pointing out that in many cases the mistakes of pilots were the result of a lack of appreciation of the "definite limitations to which they must hold themselves," the report detailed the causes of accidents as follows:

Errors of pilots, 33 per cent.
Power-plant failures, 18 per cent.
Structural failures, 13 per cent.
Condition of airport, 9 per cent.
Weather, 3 per cent.
Supervising personnel, 2 per cent.
Miscellaneous, 4 per cent.

Causes of Errors Analyzed

The detailed causes of errors were listed as:

Faulty flying technique, 40 per cent.
Faulty judgment, 15 per cent.
Carelessness, 14 per cent.
Violation of safety regulations, 4 per cent.

Almost half of the accidents charged to power plant failures were found to be the result of failures of the fuel systems.

More accidents occur on Thursday than any other day and the department is continuing the inquiry in a search for the cause. The study also revealed, as did an earlier one, that almost one-half of the accidents were due to tail spins, 94 per cent of them with the power on and 80 per cent under a height of 200 feet.

"The answer in military aviation, where high manoeuvrability is essential, is not apparent," the report stated. "However, it would appear that in commercial aviation, unhampered by this requirement, the aircraft of the future must be so designed that it cannot be spun. When this is done, and present developments indicate its possibility, fatal accidents will be tremendously reduced."

The train plane was revealed as the safest airplane in use in the navy, the fighting plane standing lowest in this regard. During the eight years under investigation the safety of naval aviation has increased fivefold.
